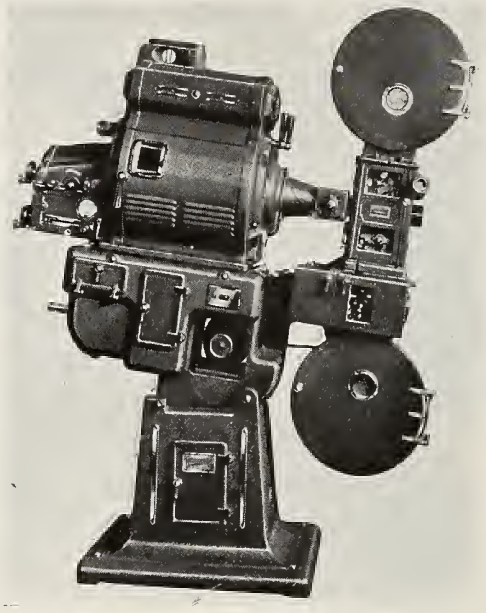
. . . If so, you may find the Planning the Theatre department of Better Theatres helpful. This department is conducted by an experienced theatre architect, Peter M. Hulsken. Merely write:

BETTER THEATRES,
ROCKEFELLER CENTER, NEW YORK

by an iron door. At the top of this base is a shaft upon which the projector swings in accordance with the projection angle, this movement being accomplished by a positive solid locking device.

The projector will accommodate any of the standard makes of lamphouses. Two enclosed compartments are provided in the base of the lamphouse support, one for tools and the other for carbon storage. The magazines are 18 inches in diameter, accommodating 3,000 feet of film.

The driving motor is located on the top of the housing and belts directly to a large driving pulley by means of a flat bottom V-belt of good proportions. The rear shutter is of an improved type of cylinder shutter which Motiograph has used for many years.



New Motiograph Model H-U Projector.

The intermittent movement is of the star and cam type, the intermittent sprocket shaft being carried by "thrustite" ball bearings at either end. The intermittent movement is lubricated with grease, not oil.

All adjustment controls are provided in very convenient form. Framing, for example, can be accomplished from either side of the mechanism by means of substantial handwheels located at the top front of the mechanism, extending out somewhat beyond it. The mechanism casing is quite remarkable in the extent to which it may be opened. By pressing down one knob the working side door may be swung open. By raising a hook-shaped handle near the base of the mechanism immediately under the aperture, the back of the casing may be swung outward at its lower end, thus leaving a clear path for threading.

On the non-working side the whole side of the casing may be conveniently lifted away—a very convenient arrangement embodying, by the way, complete protection for the mechanism. The doors on both sides of the casing have glass panels of good dimensions so that the mechanism, including the film on both sides of the projector, are in full view. This, of course, is a very desirable feature in any projector.

The upper and low sprockets are each served by one roller idler. The intermittent sprocket has a steel shoe. The automatic fire shutter seems to be well designed. It should be thoroughly reliable in operation. The shutter may be timed within wide limits while the projector is in operation. The big belt driving pulley aforementioned drives the soundhead mechanism directly through an intermediate gear, the projector mechanism itself being driven by a chain that is a new development also adopted to use with studio motion picture cameras. It is asserted to be absolutely noiseless and non-stretching. It also is said to absorb gear and mechanism vibrations and thus prevent those vibrations from reaching the soundhead.

Any type of soundhead may be used with this model Motiograph. All driving shafts are equipped with replaceable and removable bearings.

HAVE YOU EARLY-DAY PROJECTION EQUIPMENT?

H. T. COWLING of the motion picture and sound recording division of the national archives, Washington, D. C., writes, "First, I want to congratulate you upon your seventieth anniversary and to wish you many happy returns. It is with real pleasure I note in the trade press that the industry is taking cognizance of your long service to the cause of motion pictures.

"As you may be aware, I am a member of the museum committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, which committee was organized for the purpose of collaborating with the Smithsonian Institute in the collection and perpetuating of the earlier types of motion picture equipments.

"At the last meeting of the committee I was delegated to solicit your assistance in this work. We would very much appreciate any help you may be able to render in locating any of the very old types of motion picture projection or camera equipments, for which I am sure you will agree there can be no better depository than the Smithsonian Institute."

I was invited to be a member of the museum committee, but advancing years and increasing press of work compelled me to decline. However, anything I can do to assist that committee in the collection of motion picture "antiques" is a service of pleasure, for I realize that all too soon those who now have such equipments in their possession will have "checked out," whereupon those equipments may and probably will pass into the hands of those having small, if any, interest in the motion picture industry.

I therefore most earnestly suggest that readers who own any such early-day equipments, or who know any one who does, get into touch with Mr. Cowling, The National Archives, Motion Picture Division, Washington, D. C., immediately. As I understand it, if accepted, the equipment will be displayed in the Institute motion picture-sound division, with a suitable card bearing the name of its donor.

ACOUSTICAL PRODUCTS AND ENGINEERING

ACOUSTICAL treatment for the motion picture theatre auditorium has become more needful of careful attention than it originally was, because of extension of the frequency range. Motion picture speech and music can now be recorded and reproduced wth great fidelity, but the transmission process includes acoustics as well as electro-mechanical provisions; hence, natural sound now calls for greater precision in acoustical adjustments with respect to the entire available frequency band. Acoustic materials are available not only to suit every acoustic defect, but to fit into most any decorative scheme, and to meet requirements as to labor costs under varying circumstances. Materials most frequently used are sound absorbent tiles, acoustic plaster, rock wool and similar products. Which to use partly depends on the natural acoustic characteristics of the auditorium and the decorative scheme desired. Most manufacturers of acoustic materials can supply a reliable acoustical analysis of an auditorium.

AIR CONDITIONING AND VENTILATING EQUIPMENT

FOR HUMAN comfort, air conditioning requires not only the heating and cooling of air in accordance with seasonal conditions, but adjustment of relative humidity, removal of dirt and pollen, and suitable removal of old air from the theatre and its replacement with a new supply, together with proper ducts, dampers, fans, etc., for complete distribution of conditioned air.

Ventilation, as commonly referred to in the theatre, involves merely the supplying of fresh air. A ventilating system may therefore consist only in provisions for drawing fresh air into the building and giving it, by means of blower fans and ducts leading to openings (grilles) on the interior, suitable circulation. To such a system may be added a dehumidifier or cooling apparatus (such as a cold-water spray chamber). In no case does a ventilation system mean air-conditioning, which term must refer to all the provisions indicated in the first paragraph above, and normally implies automatic control.

Cooling of air may be achieved in several ways. There are a few theatres in which a slight cooling effect has been attained by fans capable of introducing fresh air (with proper distribution arrangements) under extremely high pressure. Any kind of controlled cooling, however, demands means of placing the air in contact, directly or indirectly, with a cooling agent, which may be either a chemical refrigerant or water. Mechanical refrigeration is frequently necessary for cooling even when water is the immediate cooling agent. Where well water is available at a temperature of about 55°, this water may be used without mechanical refrigeration. How mechanical refrigeration may be applied depends upon local and State regulations.

Air Filters, consisting in a dust-collecting material of cotton or other type of fabric or mesh on rollers or fixed in a metal frame, are designed to filter dirt out of the air introduced into the theatre through the ventilating system. They are not only advised for the complete air-conditioning system, but are effective in connection with a simple ventilating system. Dirty air represents a maintenance problem. Air filters, properly installed, minimize this problem.

Ventilating grilles, which are located at the wall openings of air ducts through which the air is introduced into or removed from the interior of the theatre are to varying degrees ornamental and thus prevent these openings from being unsightly. This was once the principal function of grilles, but today a scientifically designed grille gives direction to the air flow, diffuses the air stream and regulates the quantity of air passing through. Grille design has been found an important factor in minimizing or amplifying the mechanical noise of the system. Thus selection of ventilating grilles has an important bearing upon the efficiency of the air-conditioning or ventilating system.

AIR PURIFICATION: OZONE

OZONE is a specific, unstable form of oxygen which rapidly breaks down into the ordinary form, but in so doing produces oxidation (cold burning) of impurities in the air, especially those which are characterized by unpleasant odors, which for the most part are readily dispelled with oxidation. Ozone is also deadly to many forms of microbe life, and its use as a purifier therefore does not cover a disagreeable smell with a (theoretically) agreeable one, but chemically removes the impurities and causes of odor by converting them into different and innocuous chemical substances.

Ozone is produced by chemical action, ultra-violet rays, electric discharge, and a number of other means. Generators are available in various sizes, suited to lounges, toilet rooms or an entire theatre. Small units are inexpensive. Larger and more costly ones have blower and filter apparatus, while still others are designed for use in connection with central air-conditioning systems.

A minute percentage of ozone in the air produces a sense of physical exhilaration and well-being, since it is oxygen in a form very readily utilized.

AMPLIFYING TUBES

THESE ARE electronic relays by means of which the weak electric currents created by a photocell, phonopickup or microphone, operate to control a stronger current, moulding it to an exact, but more powerful duplicate of the original. This process is continued through a train of tubes until a duplicate of the original sound current is obtained, which is strong enough to operate the loudspeakers.

AMPLIFIERS

IN FUNCTION, as part of a sound reproduction system, these are panels or cabinets that take sound current from the photoelectric cell (or other source) and use it as a pattern to produce a similar but vastly more powerful current for operation of the loudspeakers. Modern compact apparatus may have an amplifying power of ten billion to one.

Amplifiers today contain their own power supplies, needing only connection with an a.c. or d.c. power line, and dispensing with all auxiliary batteries, generators or rectifiers; and in addition commonly supply polarizing voltage to photocells, and sometimes current to exciter lamps and loudspeaker fields.

Very small, low-power amplifiers may be mounted on the projector, deriving their operating power from the main amplifying system.

ANCHORS FOR CHAIRS

THESE ARE KNOWN as theatre expansion bolts. A leading type anchor consists of an especially long tapered fin head bolt, conical cup, lead sleeve, washer and hexagon nut. For best results these should be placed into a hole ½-inch in diameter. It is suggested that one use a 17/32-inch diameter drill to allow for wear. The bolt is set head downward into the hole. The setting tool furnished with each order, is a hollow piece of rod, which is slipped over the bolt against the washer, and when driven with a few blows of a hammer, expands the conical cup which spreads out, increasing the diameter of the head of the bolt to the absolute diameter of the hole and thereby allowing no lead to be driven past the head of the bolt, and at the same time expands the lead sleeve into everv crevice in the concrete.

Another method, of later development, combines lead and steel jackets and employs lead, a dead metal, for anchorage, a method calculated to eliminate any transmission of vibration to or cracking of masonry.

When placed in a hole and driven down with the application tool, the steel cone expands over the head of the bolt and completely fills all space between the head of bolt and wall of hole, thus preventing the lead from flowing past the head of bolt, and it wedges the bolt head in the hole. The lead jacket expands and flows over the steel cone completely filling the hole around the shank of the bolt and gives a soft but powerful grip between the bolt and masonry throughout the entire length of the lead jacket.

ARCHITECTURAL MATERIALS, DECORATIVE

PROGRESS in chemistry and in manufacturing technique have made available a wide variety of decorative materials to supplement or supplant the familiar marble, stone and terra cotta. Glass, and the plastics known as phenolics, are now obtainable in almost infinite variety of colors and patterns. New manufacturing methods provide marble in thin slabs that are translucent. Wood veneers and fireproof materials having the appearance of wood are offered in large number of grains and colors. Glass and ceramic tiles can be had in great variety.

Materials can be chosen for any decorative scheme, any color scheme, any lighting scheme and any architectural style. Even a translucent marble is now obtainable.

CARBONS, PROJECTION

MOTION PICTURE projection carbons are required for projection in most motion picture theatres (all except those using Mazda light sources). The type and size of carbons required depends upon the type of arc, and in this connection the reader is referred to the several articles in The Equipment Index on projection lamps.

The newer development of a positive carbon of different core composition than previous types, smaller in diameter, and non-rotating, has resulted in the attainment of a much whiter projection light at low and medium amperages than is obtainable from low-intensity and hi-low arcs. This carbon, used with a negative carbon of adapted type, is the source of the so-called "suprex" arc. A report of the Projection Practice Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, has stated:

"A comparison of the Suprex carbon arc with the high-low arc at a current of from 50 to 60 amperes, showed that the Suprex carbon arc provides a light of equal intensity, but with a more even field, and of course at a much lower operating cost."

This carbon is used with a special lamp and certain rectification facilities developed for it.

A still later development in projection carbons (in the United States) is a super-high-intensity carbon for use in very large theatres where the size of screen demands utmost illumination for the best presentation of the picture. It has an effective current capacity of 180 amperes.

CARBON SAVERS

THESE DEVICES, which permit use of carbons down to a very short stub, consist in a metal rod that is clamped into the carbon jaws of the lamp house, one end of the rod being provided with means for holding a stub of carbon that is too short for use in the normal way. There are several methods of attaching the stub to the carbon saver, some of them permitting use of the carbon down to one inch.

CARPETS

CARPETS are selected according to four qualifications.

1. Appearance, which should be in harmony with the general decorative scheme.

2. Durability. It has been found that because of the extreme wear to which theatre carpets are subjected, no economy is effected by buying the cheaper grades.

3. Acoustic considerations—installation of carpet (or of heavier carpet) may aid in overcoming certain acoustical defects in an auditorium.

The standard weaves, in order of cost, from the most to the least expensive are Chenille, Saxony, American Oriental, Winton, Axminster, Velvet and Tapestry.

Padding under the carpet provides a softer and more comfortable footing; increases carpet life very materially by reducing friction and keeping the carpet out of direct contact with the floor; and improves sound absorbing properties, providing increased acoustic absorption per unit area.

CHAIRS, THEATRE

CHAIRS AND general seating arrangements are chosen to provide the optimum compromise between six requirements: maximum seating, maximum comfort, facility of entrance and exit, proper sight lines, local building regulations, and acoustics.

Upon the last point, the ideal chair is one that has precisely the same sound absorption as the human body; in a theatre thus seated it is never necessary to change sound volume with changing audience conditions, and sound quality is always equal to that obtained with a full house. Veneer chairs should never be used.

The importance of well designed chairs to the comfort of the theatre patron—and all possible comfort must be provided—advises careful selection of chairs in the first place, expertly supervised installation, constant maintenance and periodical reseating. Much scientific research with respect to posture and materials has gone into the designing and production of modern theatre chairs, and a similar, painstaking attitude toward seating is indicated on the part of the theatre owner.

Chairs may be procured with full spring construction, or spring-edge seats, and with padded backs. Row end standards may be obtained in special designs to suit a particular decorative scheme. Coverings, of course, are always selected according to the interior treatment of the auditorium (see also articles in The Equipment Index on Chair Covers, Chair Refinishing Materials and Upholstering Materials).

CHAIR COVERS

CHAIR COVERS create an impression of coolness during the summer months, and are especially advised for theatres without any means of cooling the air. Main floor chairs require a full cover, while the slope at which balcony chairs are commonly placed permits use of a quarter-back.

Chair pads for veneer seats are obtainable, as are special chair materials which may help to correct poor acoustics in theatres having veneer chairs.

CHAIR FASTENING CEMENT

THE METAL pieces to which theatre chairs are bolted are firmly fastened to the floor by special cement made for that purpose, which hardens in approximately ten minutes. In reseating a theatre, the old chair bolts are removed from the floor, and new ones inserted and recemented.

CHAIR REFINISHING MATERIALS

CHAIRS MAY be refinished in a short time, in practically any color, and without removing them from the chair frame. Materials now available provide new flexible surfaces that hide worn seat coverings, will not crack or peel, and are impervious to moisture and perspiration. In some cases, costs may make refinishing a suitable method of ameliorating bad seating conditions.

CHANGE MAKERS

OCCUPYING little space in the box office, modern change making machines prevent annoying errors in offering change to a patron and loss to the theatre through mistakes. A touch of the keyboard delivers the correct change into a metal cup, from which it is easily scooped. Not only greater accuracy, but greater speed in handling a line of patrons, make these machines a valuable adjunct to the most important business of the theatre.

CONDENSERS (LENSES)

THE PROJECTION condenser is located between the lamp house and the projector, and serves to focus the light on the aperture. It serves a similar purpose in spotlight projection. The condenser is a single glass lens, unmounted, made in various shapes—moon shape, plano-convex, bi-convex and meniscus. The diameters of projection condensers range from 2¼ to 7¼ inches; of spotlight condensers, from 5 to 8 inches. Focal lengths for theatre work run from 6½ to 9½ inches.

(These lenses should not be confused with electrical condensers, which are used in amplifiers and other portions of the sound equipment, and are not lenses, but pairs of conductors spaced by insulation and mounted in a suitable case.)

CURTAIN CONTROL MACHINES

SMOOTH AND silent opening and closing of curtains are effected, either from backstage or from the projection room controls, by automatic machines that operate at the touch of a button. The curtain may be stopped at any point along the stage, or its motion reversed as desired.

The equipment consists of a motor, a track and a cable, as well as snaps to which the curtain is fastened. The motor may be placed in the grids, which makes it possible to fly the entire mechanism, curtain and all. Special models for small theatres are available at relatively low cost.

CUTOUT MACHINES

EXPLOITATION cutouts for lobby and marquee displays are easily made by tracing the desired pattern on wall board and then guiding a cutout machine along the pattern. A small electric motor driven by power from a lamp socket does the work, and by substitution of cutting edges the machine may be used as an ordinary saw to build the frame and supports for cutouts or any other display.

EFFECT MACHINES

EFFECTS IN lighting and still projection for both stage and screen are obtained with special machines, essentially stereopticons that produce illusions of depth. These are available in various types, depending upon the effects desired. Backgrounds for stage shows, in color, can be projected and changed at pleasure, or the opening of a feature picture be framed in color or given a superimposed, changing pattern.

ELECTRICAL MEASURING INSTRUMENTS

THE DEPENDENCE of the modern theatre upon electricity, and the immensely varied and intricate apparatus used in the projection room, backstage and throughout the house, frequently advise having in the theatre measuring and testing equipment to assist the projectionist, stage electrician and maintenance engineer.

Voltmeters and ohmmeters are essential to finding most electrical troubles if the work is to be done with any reasonable speed. Ammeters, wattmeters, illuminometers, decibel meters and oscilloscopes are valuable adjuncts that pay for themselves in reducing current consumption, avoiding equipment breakdown, making possible faster repairs, and minimizing maintenance costs.

Combinations of most of these instruments are available; thus, a single instrument with suitable auxiliaries mounted on the same panel may serve as voltmeter, ammeter, ohmmeter and decibel meter. Such combinations may, in the latest equipment, be further combined with an oscilloscope.

ANOTHER RECENT TYL-A-MAT INSTALLATION

Perhaps YOUR THEATRE does not warrant such an elaborate TYL-A-MAT as the one which we recently installed in the ←PLAZA THEATRE, Stamford, Conn.

This beautiful mat was made to order in colors of bright red, orange and black. Your requirements, however, may only be for something simple yet durable and inexpensive.

If you are building a new theatre, modernizing your present house or simply want to dress up old, cracked, or otherwise unsightly floors—TYL-A-MAT is the answer. TYL-A-MATS, now more beautiful than ever, can be installed in the smallest house at very reasonable cost. An investment in TYL-A-MATS will cut your cleaning costs because their construction tends to keep dirt outside your auditorium.

Our color-illustrated TYL-A-MAT folder, together with a generous sample of the actual mat, is yours for the asking. Write for it today.

FILM CABINETS

METHODS OF storing film methodically, and in a manner that avoids any chance that the projectionist may use the wrong reel, are provided by modern fireproof film cabinets. They are available in units holding from three to twelve reels, and some are so arranged that on opening the cover the reel is raised and brought within grasp. Each reel occupies an individual compartment heat-insulated from all others. Arrangements for outside ventilation are also provided.

FILM CABINET STANDS

AVAILABLE in sizes that accommodate from one to three film cabinets, these units mount the film cabinets at the most convenient operating height and permit them to be moved about the projection room when necessary. Some models hold the cabinet at an angle that prevents a reel of film being laid on top, compelling the projectionist to store it properly, and leave it stored until the time has come for its use.

Can the Deafened Hear in Your Theatre?

Many theatres are finding an installation of hearing aid equipment proving a source of loyal patrons—patrons who, because of their impairment, have been unable to attend your theatre.

Since the advent of sound, the name TRIMM has been identified with the finest equipment available for the hard of hearing — today it is a symbol of certainty; there is no better equipment available.

A word from you will bring complete information about theatre hearing aid installations as well as our specific recommendations.

You are sincerely invited to write for complete information.

FIRE EXTINGUISHERS

THERE ARE several types of fire extinguishers suitable to theatres—the carbon tetrachloride extinguisher, the soda-and-acid mechanism, the foam type and the portable carbon dioxide hand type. They should be distributed throughout the theatre in accordance with the directions of fire department officials, care being taken that any extinguisher likely to be used in the presence of electrical apparatus is safe for that purpose, and not capable of electrocuting the man who uses it.

FOUNTAINS

ORNAMENTAL fountains are sold as units for installation in lobby, foyer or lounge, alone or in conjunction with statuary. Drinking fountains are offered in plain and decorative types, recessed or pedestal.

Two types of automatic drinking fountains are available; one operating by means of a photocell (the head of the person stooping to drink interrupts a beam of light, which interruption actuates the water valve); the other operates upon the principle of electrical capacitance, the approach of a human head upsetting the balance of a critical electrical circuit, and thus actuating the water valve. The latter type is analogous, in its electrical action, to the "squealer" radios of fifteen years ago, that changed their tuning through the mere approach of the electrical capacitance of a human hand.

HEARING AIDS

THESE ARE receiving instruments (phones) either of air conduction or bone conduction type, to assist patrons whose hearing is impaired. They are plugged into suitable outlet boxes permanently mounted and wired in selected seating locations. Individual volume controls, which the patrons can adjust at will, may be provided either on the outlet boxes or on the cord leading to the receiver.

Sound may be taken from the main theatre system, either directly or through an auxiliary amplifier, or may be picked up via microphone from the screen speakers and passed through a low-power amplifier that is part of the hearing aid system, thus avoiding all direct contact with the sound system proper.

HOW ACOUSTICON INCREASED PATRON RADIUS TWENTY MILES!

Roth's Strand Theatre of Summit, New Jersey, installed ten ACOUSTICON THEATREPHONES. After receiving over 100 cards and letters from grateful hard of hearing persons, Mgr. Kane writes:

> "Formerly our business was confined to the immediate area and did not exceed a radius of five miles. Now we have patrons coming from an area of about twenty-five miles. This was accomplished without the aid of any extensive advertising. I am sure you realize, we are more than pleased with our Acousticon installation."

Observation shows that one deafened person attracted to any one of the scores of theatres featuring ACOUSTICON THEATREPHONES brings, on the average, two other people. And there are 15,000,000 hard of hearing people in this country—10% of the public not able to enjoy sound pictures!

ACOUSTICON THEATREPHONES would be a good investment for you. Write us for the facts and low prices.

HEATING SYSTEMS AND ACCESSORIES

HEATING SYSTEMS used in the theatre present different requirements from those of other public buildings because of the concentration of occupants in the auditorium, and the wide variation in the number that may be present at any given time.

Heat distributing systems are of two general kinds, those using standard steam radiators and those circulating masses of warmed air through a ventilating system. The latter may of course be part of a complete air conditioning system (See Air-Conditioning).

The fuel may be oil, gas or coal. Oil and gas are preferable where automatic control is provided in the system. With coal, automatic stokers reduce labor and insure efficient use of fuel.

HORN LIFTS AND HORN TOWERS

SOUND HORNS or speaker combinations may be struck to make room for stage performances by a number of means, of which one is the horn lift. When the stage is in use, the horns are concealed beneath it. When the screen is in use, an elevator working on hydraulic, drum and cable, or screw principle, lifts a portion of the stage with whatever setup may be on it toward the grid; the horns or speakers follow, rising until they are in correct position behind the screen.

Horn towers are steel structures on which the speaker equipment is mounted at the proper height above the stage; they are often mounted on rubber-tired, ball-bearing casters by means of which they can be moved silently into the wings when the stage is needed.

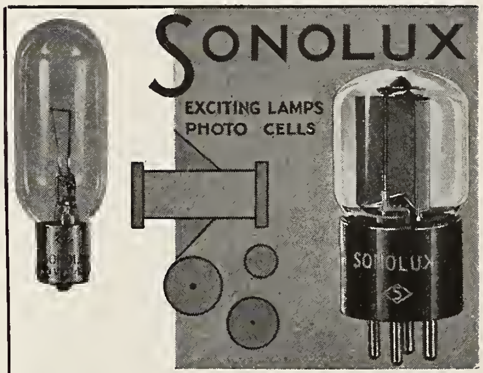
INTERIOR DECORATION

THEATRE DECORATION has evolved into a specialized branch of interior decoration. For at least the finer work, designers and artisans should have had considerable understanding of the functional peculiarities of all divisions of the theatre, and be experienced in the decorating methods advised by illumination factors, acoustics, advertising, projection optics, etc.



Don't neglect the heart of your sound system by using mis-matched sound lamps.

The Sonolux Company has been the recognized specialist in tube manufacturing since the early days of sound motion pictures. By following the leading makers of sound systems who not only use but specify Sonolux as standard equipment, you will obtain the best in projection and sound results.

Your equipment should have the advantage of the high standard created by the Sonolux research laboratories.

In addition to the exciter lamp and photo-electric cells, Sonolux has a 6 and 15 ampere rectifier bulb for arc rectifier, also a 6 and 2 ampere for battery charge. PATENT PENDING.

LAMPS, INCANDESCENT FOR PROJECTION

INCANDESCENT LAMPS for theatre motion picture projection are usually of the low-voltage type for added efficiency and greater source concentration. They cannot be used on the ordinary lighting circuit without a transformer or regulator. The 900-watt, 30-ampere, T-20 bulb lamp usually provides acceptable results on good screens up to 16 feet wide at throws not greater than about 100 feet.

There are also available 1,000-watt prefocus base, and 1,500-watt bipost base, 100-120 volt, T-20 bulb lamps employing the biplane type of filament construction, which is inherently of higher cost but makes possible the requisite source concentration at ordinary circuit voltages and thus saves the cost of auxiliary apparatus. They are preferred where operating schedules are relatively short, and for projectors of the semi-portable type. Screen results equal or surpass those from the 900-watt lamp. The 1,500-watt lamp requires forced ventilation.

For portable 35-mm. projectors there are the 500-watt monoplane filament, and the 750-watt and 1,000-watt biplane filament lamps in short T-20 bulbs with medium prefocus bases. All are of the 100-120 volt type. The 750-watt and 1,000-watt lamps require forced ventilation.

For stereopticon projection there are the 500-watt, short T-20 bulb, medium prefocus base lamp; and the 100-watt, long T-20 bulb mogul prefocus base lamp. Both of the 100-120 volt types employ monoplane filaments.

LAMPS, GENERAL LIGHTING

INCANDESCENT lamps are made for every conceivable lighting use, and are described according to wattage, voltage, bulb shapes, bulb diameter, color or special purpose. Spotlight and floodlight lamps have concentrated filaments, and some types are prefocussed, the filament being mounted with especial accuracy. Colored lamps are available with spray finish inside the glass, and these are particularly suited to applications in which the lamps themselves are visible. Particularly effective in decorative schemes are "lumiline" lamps, which provide a practically continuous line of light.

the STRONG MOGUL

- - - the answer to your demand for more light at lower operating cost.

THE STRONG MOGUL marks a distinct advance in projection arc lamp design and construction, providing many fundamental advantages available only in Strong Lamps.

Designed to deliver a tremendous volume of light — a steady, brilliant light that is distributed uniformly over the complete screen area, projecting a picture full of depth and definition, which fairly sparkles, bringing out all the delicate details and possessing a realistic daylight effect.

The higher efficiencies attained through the modern Strong lamp result in the greatly increased volume of light without a corresponding increase in operating costs.

See a demonstration in your own theatre. Any Independent Theatre Equipment Dealer will, without obligation, demonstrate the lamp meeting your requirements. Write today for the new, interesting and instructive catalog.

LAMPS, LOW INTENSITY

THIS CLASSIFICATION is rather general, inasmuch as it refers to all types of projection lamps designed for theatres requiring light of lower intensity. Lamps in this class are Low Intensity, Hi-Low, Alternating Current Reflector Type and Suprex (the latter using alternating current carbons with direct current). All of these lamps are of the reflector type. The operating amperage for these lamps ranges from 15 to 80.

LAMPS, SUPREX ARC

THESE ARE projection lamps designed for the suprex d.c. arc, which gives, through the use of a non-rotating carbon of specific composition, a much whiter projection light at low and middle amperages than is obtainable with low-intensity and hi-low arcs. At 45 amperes, the d.c. arc has a light intensity as high as 7,000 lumens, as much as hi-low develops at from 70 to 80 amperes, while the low-intensity arc has a light intensity of only about 2,000 lumens at 25 amperes.

LENSES, PROJECTION

THERE ARE two general classes—the condenser lens, which focuses the projection light on the aperture (see Condensers); and the objectives. The latter are commonly referred to as the projection lenses; they focus the light upon the screen. They are made in four standard diameters, with focal length as determined by the size of the screen and its distance from the projector.

LETTERS, ATTRACTION BOARD

CHANGEABLE sign letters permit rapid change of marquee advertising. Such letters have been made of various metals and compositions as well as glass. Usually, however, they are either of cast metal or glass. Glass letters are commonly in panel form, with the letter translucent and the surrounding panel area opaque.

The so-called silhouette marquee letter gained wide usage immediately upon its introduction. It reverses the visual character of the glass translucent letter, being itself opaque, while the surrounding area is illuminated. The silhouette letter is of cast metal and is attached readily to rods or wires in front of translucent glass panels, which latter cover a metal lamp box. The lamp box fits into the structure of the marquee in such a manner as to be really an integral part of it. As many rows of such letters may be arranged in the construction of the lamp box as desired.

MACHINES, TICKET

MOTOR DRIVEN ticket dispensers facilitate the handling of box office peaks, and impart the impression of efficiency, cleanliness and business-like methods; they eliminate all excuses for errors on the part of the cashier (some type of dispensers make the usual errors impossible); and they may be regarded as necessary to any real assurance that box office losses are not occurring through cashier-doorman collusion.

Also available is a ticket dispenser which automatically prints the ticket as it is issued. This mechanism is loaded only with blank rolls of paper tape, and the printed ticket bears both the number of the ticket and the date.

Automatic ticket dispensers are obtainable with from two to five ticket channels, each issuing mechanism being a unit so that a case for five channels will accommodate added mechanisms, up to five, as the business and price policy of the theatre call for at a time following the original installation. The cases are designed with counter tops to set flush with the counter of the box office.

MARQUEES

A MARQUEE is to be regarded as essential to the motion picture theatre. There are exceptions, due to location and form of building, but not many. Its function as a means of protection for patrons from rain and snow has become of less importance than its function as an advertising medium. It advertises the theatre and the program, by distinguishing the building from other commercial establishments on the street, by the theatricalism of its lighting, by announcing the features of the performance.

Marquees today have become more closely associated with the general architectural form of the theatre front than they originally were. They are frequently constructed according to specifications supplied by the architect, who has designed the marquee itself, along with other display and sign elements of the front, as a part of the facade.

Another later development is unit construction of marquees, providing prefabricated marquees to fit any theatre entrance, complete with all attraction board equipment.

Most marquees have been rectangular in shape, but because the greatest amount of announcement space on such marquees cannot be read up and down the street, particularly on the side on which the theatre is located, other shapes have come into vogue, notably one combining rectangular with triangular forms.

Marquees are generally of sheet metal construction, with soffits of metal or glass illuminated by incandescent lamps or lighting troughs. There are, of course, many variations in pattern and illumination; however, the design should always incorporate the attraction boards as integral parts of the structure.

MICROPHONES

THE THEATRE has many uses for microphones, from ballyhoo work on a sound truck, or in connection with the front display, to reinforcement of stage performances, announcements of election returns and sporting events, or emergency talks to pacify an audience in time of trouble. Microphones can be used with separate amplifying and loudspeaker equipment, or can in most cases be operated through the existing sound installation.

The early type of carbon granule microphone has been almost completely replaced by later and superior instruments, the crystal and magnetic microphones. The condenser microphone used in early sound recording, while less favored today, is still decidedly advantageous to meet certain conditions of stage pickup. The crystal microphone, and the various types of magnetic microphone (velocity dynamic) have come into general application to theatre uses.

Put the MARQUEE of TOMORROW on your THEATRE TODAY

A radical departure in marquee design, endorsed by America's leading theatre specialists, and rated by Nela Park Engineers 100% efficient as against all other types at 20%-60%.

THE ZEPHYR UNIT V-TYPE MARQUEE with its modern V-shape, offers for the first time a really high quality marquee at prices unbelievably low, radical reductions being made possible through standardization of basic parts and mass production methods.

Each Zephyr sparkles with individuality, flexibility of appearance being evident in the choice of available effects, color schemes, ornamental trims and uses of neon, which combine to create a perfectly balanced and correctly lighted front that is strikingly different.

Will fit any front.

The highly attractive Zephyr provides abundant space for attraction copy with no wasteful old style marquee front. Comes complete with several hundred new modern Artkraft silhouette letters which are easily read at great distance.

Write for literature, prices and terms, giving width of front and width of sidewalk.

MOTOR GENERATORS

MOTOR-GENERATORS for converting a.c. line power to d.c. for projection arc lamps are available in a variety of types suited to the requirements of various projection installations. They are used in some instances for sound power supply, and where more than one source line is wired to a theatre, for emergency power conversion in the event one line should fail. They are also used in mobile ballyhoo public address systems, for driving amplifier and loudspeakers from the power of automobile or truck storage batteries.

MOTORS, PROJECTOR

THE SYNCHRONOUS type a.c. motor is almost universally used, except in theatres having direct current power supply only, in which case auxiliary speed control equipment becomes essential. The a.c. synchronous motor must be chosen for the precise frequency available, and its speed cannot be varied.

ORGANS

WITH THE exception of the all-electric organ, the only organ suited to the motion picture theatre is a pipe organ, and the theatre pipe organ is usually different from the church type in many of its characteristics. The theatre instrument is capable of simulating a variety of orchestral tones, which are required for effective rendition of the classes of music performed in the theatre. Consoles are most frequently of two-manual type, and may be obtained in a variety of decorative styles.

The all-electric organ produces the tones of a pipe organ (as well as the orchestral effects of which theatre pipe organs are capable), but it has no pipes: the tones are effected by the transmission of electrical frequencies, through suitable amplifiers, to one or more loudspeakers. The console is of standard two-manual type, but in addition to the keys, has certain drawbars with which specific tone-types are created; through the keyboard and tone control devices, the performer varies the frequency of the electrical current which, suitably amplified, actuates the speaker diaphragm.

PAINT, SCREEN

PAINT FOR resurfacing motion picture screens is available in flat white and metallic types. It is adapted to fabric screens of diffusive type. Although no resurfacing material can restore more than a relatively small percentage of the original reflective capacity of a screen, paint of proper mix and pigmentation can effect some improvement if applied with sufficient expertness to insure uniformity of surface. In resurfacing perforated screens, care must be taken to prevent filling of the holes (application of a vacuum cleaner at the rear is recommended).

PERFUMES AND PERFUMERS

PERFUMES are available especially prepared for concealment of disagreeable odors in the theatre. They are particularly aromatic and are effectively diffused by porous containers. The containers, which are usually vase-like in form and decorative, are located at various points along the walls. The perfume saturates the porous clay and gradually penetrates to the air.

Other methods of disseminating perfume are by direct spraying and by placing a suitable disseminator in contact with the ventilating system.

PHOTOELECTRIC CELLS

IN THE THEATRE, photoelectric cells function principally as a vital "organ" of the sound reproduction system, though they have other applications in many fields.

Although they have many applications in many fields, in the theatre the photoelectric cell functions principally as a vital "organ" of the sound reproduction system, transforming the light of the exciter lamp, after it has passed through the sound track of the film, into the electrical energy which, amplified, actuates the loudspeakers.

Some few equipments require photoelectric cells of a certain type differing from the type generally used, and in ordering it is well to specify the make and model of the soundhead.

PORTABLE PROJECTORS

PORTABLE PROJECTORS are motion picture projection machines which are designed to be set up only temporarily and not for permanent installation in a regular theatre, as a rule, although used there. They are particularly adapted for use in schools, clubs, etc., and may be obtained for installation in connection with leading makes of sound equipment or with sound apparatus built in.

Semi-portable projectors are standard motion picture machines which may be utilized for either temporary or permanent installations and are well adapted to smaller theatres not operating on a "grind" policy. These projectors, while sturdily constructed, are comparatively light in weight and may be moved from rooms or buildings more easily than the standard theatre projector. Sound apparatus specially

POSTER PROJECTORS

USED FOR making posters for lobby displays and similar services, these devices project opaque surfaces upon any desired screen. The artist projects a drawing or photograph from a press sheet or other prepared advertising matter upon the surface on which his own drawing is to be made. Image size is controlled by moving the projector nearer to or farther from the surface in question. The image is in the same direction and proportions as the original, and the artist merely traces along the lines and fills in the colors indicated.

PROJECTION ROOMS AND ACCESSORIES

THE DESIGN of the vital nerve center of the motion picture theatre involves many factors, including local building regulations and general safety, as well as provisions for efficient and competent work on the part of the men who produce the commodity the theatre sells.

Ventilation is essential, and fireproof construction mandatory. To secure uninterrupted attendance to operations on the part of the projectionist, washroom and toilet facilities are highly desirable. The projection room proper should not be less than 15 feet wide and 10 feet deep to accommodate two projectors, a stereopticon and effect machine, amplifier panels, rewinder and film cabinet, while for proper ventilation the ceiling should not be less than 12 feet high. (The various kinds of projection equipment and accessories are discussed under their own titles.)

PROJECTOR PARTS

THE WEAR to which projectors are subjected requires close observation of all parts and prompt replacement or repair before any that have become defective injure others that must work with them. Neglect of reasonable and necessary replacement results in unnecessary deterioration of the entire mechanism, makes expensive overhauling or replacement necessary later on, and is also a threat to the performance.

theatre installation (see Portable Projectors).

It is the expressed belief of theatre owners and projectionists that practically ideal projection is possible with equipment available at present, provided it is in the hands of a competent projectionist. Modern projectors are the result of many years of improvement and development to meet the ever-growing requirements for the best possible screen results.

All late model standard projectors are either constructed specially for sound picture projection or are readily adapted to any make or model of sound apparatus.

PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEMS

SUCH A SYSTEM provides means for amplifying stage sound, for managers' announcements, for lobby ballyhoo, on sound trucks in street exploitation, also over the marquee, and even in association with theatre billboards.

In the theatre the public address system may consist of microphones suitably connected to the standard sound installation, or an entirely separate system, with its own amplification, wiring and also speakers, may be employed. Hearing aids may be used in association with any type of theatre public address reproduction.

RECTIFIERS AND POWER UNITS

RECTIFIERS are devices that employ rectifying tubes or copper compound rectifying assemblies (dry type) for the purpose of converting alternating current to direct current. The larger sizes are fan-cooled, and supply direct current to the projection arc.

The smaller sizes are of somewhat different design electrically, incorporating electrical filters to insure smooth d.c. output, and to supply power to exciter lamps, speaker fields, tube filaments and other parts of the sound system.

Century-Roth 2-Bearing Actodector

Unvarying Brilliance on the Screen

The unvarying brilliance necessary to good screen projection is assured by the use of Century-Roth Actodectors — Multiple-arc Motor Generator Sets which supply a continuously steady source of direct current which reduces lamp flicker to a minimum even during change over . . . Furnished in 2- and 4-Bearing Types.

for "SUPREX" carbons

A new Century-Roth Actodector for "Suprex" carbons has been developed, which supplies a uniform direct current voltage with rapidly drooping voltage characteristics beyond the normal working range. This limits the current at striking the arc to less than twice normal current—and prevents destroying the crater, thus insuring proper light while a new crater is being formed.

Definite Advantages of Century-Roth Actodectors

Simplicity . . No small complicated parts, tubes or relays.

Stability . . Electrically independent of power supply—not directly affected by voltage variation in alternating current power source.

Efficiency . . No transformers or choke coils. Performance characteristics unaffected by age.

Capacity. . . Will withstand heavy momentary overloads.

REELS

REELS NECESSARY for takeup magazines of projectors and also otherwise constantly utilized in the projection room, are available in a number of sizes and types of construction. The standard reel in the United States (since September 1, 1936) has a diameter of 14½ inches, and a 4½-inch hub for the accommodation of the film lengths up to 2,000 feet. Reels are also available in the former American standard size (diameter 10 inches, hub 2 inches) while another available size adapted to the standard American film length of 2,000 feet has a diameter of 15 inches. (See Takeup, Film.)

Some reels have embossed sides, some wire welded or die cast sides, and while a particularly flexible reel (resisting so-called "dishing") has tempered band spokes and rims and is available for both 35-mm. and 16-mm. film in the 15-inch size.

REWINDERS, FILM

FILM REWINDERS are available in two general types, open and fireproof enclosed. The open type is offered in a number of different models, either as a single unit or as two separate units that are clamped to the work bench, or bolted in place. The enclosed type is a single unit.

Both open and enclosed types may be hand-driven or motor-driven, may have sleeve bearings or ball bearings, may accommodate either one or two thousand foot reels, or both, and may have either one or several driving speeds.

Some of the motor-driven types incorporate accessories by means of which the same motor can be used for general machine work, such as grinding and polishing.

RHEOSTATS

THESE ARE devices that introduce an electrical resistance into any circuit, the value of the resistance being variable at will. There are several methods of varying resistance, one being to move a contact lever over a series of switch points, one being to move a slider over the coil of the resistance wire itself, and one being to compress carbon or graphite discs or powder.

Rheostats may be very large in size, suited to operation in the projection arc circuit, or extremely small for use in certain sound circuits. They are rated according to the range of resistances available, and the current or wattage with which they can safely be used.

SAFE, BOX OFFICE

PROTECTION against hold-up losses higher than the amount of cash on hand for the purpose of making change is afforded by a safe connecting through a slot or chute with the box office counter. Surplus coins or bills not needed for change are dropped into the slot and reach the safe through the metal chute. Another type of safe is anchored inside the box office. Theatres equipped with such safes are allowed lower rates of robbery and burglary insurance than they otherwise would be.

SCREENS

THEATRE SCREENS are classified according to their construction, surface and reflective characteristics. Four general types of construction are in use—solid, porous, perforated and translucent (the latter for rear projection).

Surfaces (except for the translucent screen) may be diffusive or specular. The latter is specified for narrow, relatively deep auditoriums since the light is concentrated upon seats directly in front of the screen. Wider theatres must use the diffusive type.

The light reflection and sound transmission characteristics of screens can be measured and screens bought according to definite specifications.

SIGNS (ELECTRIC) FOR THEATRE NAME

ELECTRIC SIGNS (metal framework with illumination provisions) are available in a wide variety of designs more or less closely associated with the architecture of the theatre front. They frequently are specially designed, but there are also stock designs often adaptable to the theatre front. Gas tube (neon) and incandescent lamp illumination has been found effective for these signs in combination as well as alone, and either type of lighting can be flashed.

Horizontal name signs have normally been more closely associated with the marquee than the vertical sign has, but often the vertical sign can be effectively related to the marquee and entrance by continuing the sign illumination scheme down to the marquee and even across its soffit.

SLIDES, PROJECTION

SLIDES FOR the projection of song lyrics, advertising and effects are made either of glass or other material suitably transparent. The more elaborate slides, carrying pictorial matter or designs, are usually of glass, while a flexible transparent material permits the ready preparation of an announcement slide on a typewriter, the blank material being kept on hand and, when written upon, inserted into a frame.

SOUND EQUIPMENT, COMPLETE

SOUND SYSTEMS have followed a steady evolution toward simplicity and compactness since their first introduction. Only the larger theatres now use sound power supplies disassociated from the sound amplifier; in smaller equipment the two commonly constitute a single unit, or at most two units in a single compact cabinet. The majority of modern systems consist of a single amplifier-power supply unit, two sound heads, and suitable loudspeakers.

More elaborate apparatus may include complex speaker assemblies with sound filter systems, an amplifier rack mounting decibel meter and other accessories, and an emergency amplifier.

SEMI-BEVEL SILHOUETTE

No. 5 in the series of Wagner Silhouette Sign Letters is now ready. It fits in with a family of letters—Egyptian, Gothic, Duo-Silo, Poster, in all sizes from 6- to 12-inch—and the new Semi-Bevel retains the advantage of the straight-side letter with an added finished appearance. No "halo" is created by the crossing of light rays as occurs in full bevel-edged letters. Note in lower portion of diagram how light rays are spread—compare with upper view. Full contrast between aluminum, white background and jet-black face—with a broad stroke—increases reading distance. Ask your local sign man and send at once for our latest descriptive circular.

SOUNDHEADS

THIS REPRODUCTION apparatus, mounted between the projector and lower magazine, guides the film between the exciter lamp and the photoelectric cell, which are mounted within it. Striking improvements have been made in this item of equipment, producing steadier film motion and hence finer sound, with reduced strain on the film and less wear and friction in the soundhead itself.

SPEAKERS AND HORNS

TO CONVERT the electrical product of amplification into audible sound, speaker "units" are available in considerable variety. The trend toward using several types of speakers to reproduce selected bands of sound frequencies has been countered by the development of units said to be capable of faithful reproduction of every tone recorded on modern extended range sound tracks.

Speakers are available in a.c. types, in a great variety of d.c. types, and in the new permanent magnet types that need no field excitation.

Baffles are required with every speaker. The simplest is flat board, behind which the speaker is mounted, large enough to provide baffling for the lowest frequency to be reproduced. In many auditoriums, however, proper distribution of sound cannot be secured without directional baffles, or trumpets, to point the sound toward locations otherwise "dead" and away from locations where it is not desired, particularly reflecting surfaces likely to cause echo or excessive reverberation. Directional trumpets or baffles are now also used for high-frequency speakers or tweeters, clusters of small trumpets operated by a single tweeter being favored. These arrangements secure better distribution of the high frequencies, which have a normal tendency to travel in straight lines, over-supplying some seats and missing many others entirely. Clusters of directional baffles applied to the tweeters correct this tendency and improve sound in every seat.

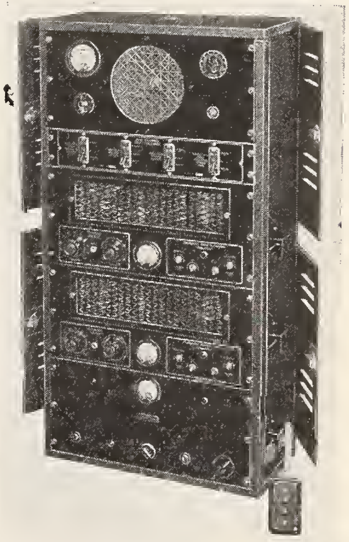
Lafayette 40 Watt Theatre Amplifier

LAFAYETTE offers the Model 705-P and associated systems which are designed to act either as a complete unit by themselves or to augment any existing equipment. By use of the emergency amplifier and the selector panel, all standard tests including volume indicator readings, buzz track and adjustment of exciter lamp, photographic check of sprocket hole interference, etc., can be made on one projector while the other carries on the show.

Five fundamental units illustrated above, compose this Lafayette Theatre equipment.

1. THE D.C. EXCITER PANEL . . .
2. THE A.C. EXCITER PANEL . . .
3. THE MONITOR PANEL . . .
4. THE DUAL CHANNEL SELECTOR PANEL . . .
5. THE AMPLIFIER . . .

By properly choosing these units, a system can be assembled to practically meet any requirement of sound on film work. Consult with our engineering staff who will be glad to advise on the most economical system to fit your particular needs. Write for free copy of catalogs on Theatre Amplifiers.



For the smaller theatre and portable shows, Lafayette offers the 15 Watt Model 410-A amplifier and power supply unit, illustrated below.

STAGE SCENERY AND DRAPERIES

DRAPERIES at the proscenium and wings give stage and all that takes place thereon a frame removed from reality; they soften hard angles and architectural lines; they dress up doorways and arches, providing a pleasant impression of softness and luxury. In motion picture theatres, stage scenery kept on hand for general use consists in conventional drops and cycloramas, made according to specification.

SWITCHBOARDS

INDISPENSABLE adjuncts to proper stage lighting are switchboards for the control of all stage illumination. A lighting schedule can be preset to provide rapid changes of lighting according to cue, with a single motion.

Some types use grid-control tubes in place of rheostats. Few or many banks of switches and controls can be installed, according to the requirements of the theatre; additional banks can be added to an existing installation and tied in electrically and mechanically to constitute a single unit of increased size.

TEMPERATURE CONTROL APPPARATUS

TEMPERATURE control apparatus of the automatic variety can be installed on any type of heating, ventilating or air-conditioning system to maintain desired conditions. Apparatus sensitive to temperature, either inside or outside, or relative humidity, or pressure will operate instantly or with time lag, valves and dampers, or start and stop oil burners.

There are two main classes of equipment, pneumatic and electrical. Pneumatic equipment requires a small compressor, a storage tank for the air which operates the various units, and the necessary pipes or tubing connecting the units. Electrical equipment requires either a low or high-voltage source of power and wire connecting the various units to be operated.

UNIFORMS

THEATRE PRESTIGE emphasized through the training of ushers, doormen and other attendants, is greatly enhanced by costumes worn by such employees.

Uniforms should be made to individual measurements to assure perfect fit and neatness at all times. Catalogues are available containing appropriate suggestions as to proper styles for each class of personnel, and as to summer and winter fabrics.

UPHOLSTERING MATERIALS

MANUFACTURERS of auditorium seating, and furniture for lobbies, foyers and lounges can supply upholstery coverings in a great variety of materials, patterns and colors, but the hard usage such furnishings normally get in the theatre makes durability a prime consideration.

Among the better fabrics suited to auditorium chairs are velour and mohair.

Imitation leather (which, as produced today, is indistinguishable from real leather to most people) is also well adapted to auditorium chairs. It is also suited to other theatre furniture, particularly that in men's lounges, although in white or gay colors it has been effectively employed for women's lounges as well. Wool weaves in colorful patterns, rayon and damask are among upholstery coverings well suited to lobby, foyer and lounge furniture.

USHER SIGNAL SYSTEMS

THESE ARE electrical means for convenient direction of theatre traffic in the auditorium. In general they consist in an indicating board supervised by the head usher; on the board is a tiny lamp for each seat, and by suitable wiring and switches, occupancy of a seat turns out the lamp corresponding to that seat. One system also provides a row end light to indicate when there is a vacancy in the row.

VACUUM CLEANING EQUIPMENT

VACUUM CLEANING is usually the most satisfactory kind for carpets, upholstery, drapes and fabrics. Central vacuum systems, with pipes leading to various locations, provide maximum economy in the larger theatre. Heavy-duty unit vacuum cleaners are commonly used in the smaller houses. Both types are frequently supplemented by small vacuum cleaners of the domestic type for use where the other equipment cannot conveniently be applied.

GOODBYE DUST!
HELLO CUSTOMERS!

Remember the first time you opened your theatre? New seats—new rugs—new decorations — everything to attract and hold the public. Why not keep it that way?

You can't stop the public from tracking dirt in, but with a Spencer Vacuum Cleaning System you can remove it before it becomes dust and before it spreads to all parts of the house.

The finest dust is the part that wears the floors and carpets, lodges on decorations and eventually gets into the projection room. Spencer Vacuum is the one method that can quickly and surely reach down into a rug, pull dirt from under the seats, and remove the finest dust from the stage or the smoothest or roughest floor surfaces in the building.

Spencer Systems save cleaning time, increase the degree of cleanliness and are built to give reliable and efficient service over long periods of time.

Bulletins on theatre cleaning on request.

NEWS IN ADVERTISING

- For intelligent buying of theatre equipment and furnishings, advertisements are invaluable sources of information, not merely an appeal of a manufacturer. The advertising columns of Better Theatres, as well as the editorial columns, contain news and suggestions about vital affairs of the theatre. The shrewd buyer reads the ads.
- For the reader's convenience, a complete cross-index of advertisers and Equipment Index classifications appears on page 4.

The auditorium is of two-floor plan with a total of 1,050 seats, 436 in the balcony. The seating is arranged in four banks with two wall aisles, two side aisles and a center aisle. There are 30 rows on the main floor, and ten in the balcony. Chairs (by the International Seating Company) have green end standards, backs of orange, patterned velour, and seats of white and green leather. The arm rests are white wood.

The projection room is of eccentric shape, 8 feet deep at one end, and 14 feet deep at the other, with a mean width of about 20 feet. It is painted an apple green throughout. The angle of projection is 10°, while the throw is 120 feet. The screen image is 24 feet wide. Projection equipment includes two Super-Simplex projectors with Brenkert Enarc lamps supplied from motor-generators. The sound is Western Electric "Mirrophonic."

The entire theatre is completely air-conditioned with automatic control. Cooling is by mechanical refrigeration (Kelvinator units). Oil is the fuel used for heating.

Attention: Mr. Bert King

Dear Sir:

My R. C. A. equipment has now been installed almost a week and I am sure that you might want to know something as to how the situation stands. I have for the past five years been experimenting with so-called trick sounds and sound equipment and feel that I am well qualified to give you an opinion both authoritative and comparative manner.

May I say beforehand that the man who installed this equipment, Mr. C. W. Butt did a fine job. I am pleased in every respect with his work and find him both cooperative and willing to deal with the situation as he found it. I can only say the best for him and his work.

Since this equipment has been installed, I have had many comments from both friends and patrons, praising the quality of the reproduction. I was agreeably surprised at the difference myself. I do not hesitate to say that it is the finest machinery that I have ever seen and it is the biggest break that the small exhibitor ever had to be able to secure this equipment for the price offered.

Thanking you, I remain,

Yours very truly,

M M Lewis

THOUGHTS ON TAXES

IN addition to all of their other normal and routine contributions to the operation of government through taxation of individuals and business, the exhibitor showmen of the United States paid federal admission taxes for the fiscal year of 1936 totaling $17,112,174. That is a conspicuous figure, but vastly more is paid by the motion picture industry in indirect taxes that turn up under the guise of costs. What can happen when tax assessors discover conspicuous currents of cash is evidenced in the plight of the motor car operator who is buying about as much tax as he is gasoline every time he fills his tank. Taxation tends to keep pace with reductions in production and distribution cost, leaving the consumer where he was and not especially encouraging industry to cut costs.

PINK CHRISTIAN

THAT militant palladium of the faith, our contemporary The Christian Century regales the reader with a piece of editorial correspondence from Moscow extolling the virtues of the Soviet governmental cinema along with adverse criticism of the American motion picture for its share in and sympathy with the American economic system. The distinguished Christian Century, it appears, finds the screen altogether satisfactory when made a tool, instrument and servant of a government also engaged in writing off God Almighty and organized religion.

WHAT PAULETTE THINKS

EXTRAORDINARY, even if not profound, sensations are to be derived by regarding the no less than precocious expressions of Miss Paulette Goddard recorded by the metropolitan press incident to her visit to Broadway before beginning the rehearsals of Mr. Charles Chaplin's impending opus known as "Production No. 6."

Now is revealed some part of what can happen to a pretty young person from the great school of Ziegfeld when subjected to the simultaneous pressures of Hollywood, the brooding, recluse philosopher Mr. Chaplin and the continuously brooding-and-hatching Mr. H. G. Wells, best known in our tight little industry as a writer on the staff of Mr. Alexander Korda. Miss Goddard, it is to be remembered, has come to fame about equally for her work in "Modern Times" and related matters, and as Hollywood hostess to Mr. Wells, when he was over this side coloring his cinema meerschaum last year.

It now appears that the bombardment of Paulette's pretty head by such emanations as the beta rays, or maybe even Phi Beta Kappa rays, from big minds is causing her to give forth sparkling social, political and economic thought. Specimens from the press include the young lady's discovery that short-sighted Hollywood stars are easy victims for fascism; that fascism is "fast outdistancing communism" in the film colony; that income tax dodgers would like to transplant Hollywood to Italy and that Italy, without natural resources of the soil, needs a big money-making industry like the screen—especially now that Ethiopia seems to be no Golconda, or words to that general effect.

Do not be hasty, either. The press really did ask Miss Goddard about another matter on which she might be expected to be even more authoritative but the reporters got what they call "Chaplin reticence."

What this all adds up to is that Mr. Charles Spencer Chaplin is a tremendously able public relations counsel. His technique of opportune silences requires the press to do his publicity job for him, with a minimum of effort on his part. Mr. Chaplin with his mouth shut gets really better notices than Mr. George Bernard Shaw, who talks all the time.

HONORING "F. H. R."

A PLEASANT glow of appreciation attends our marking here the anniversary of Mr. Frank H. Richardson, technical editor of Motion Picture Herald and author of the famous institutional series of Bluebooks on the art and science of projection. Mr. Richardson's thirty years of militantly enthusiastic attentions and service in this key department of motion picture presentation is being signally recognized by his friends, fellows and contemporaries, as recorded in other pages. It is given to few men indeed to so long and consistently pursue such a straight-line career of specialization and for so long a time maintain a position of authority.

THEY CAN'T HELP IT

THERE'S a subtle something about Hollywood and its influences that is as inescapable as gravity. A glance over the photographic publicity material of the new grandiose British studios, including just now the glories of Pinewood, its country club, lounges, gardens and cocktailing facilities, shows us Hollywood again, in British format. And from Moscow comes the tidings that the Soviet cinema is to have its own exotic film colony in the subtropical glamours of the Crimea. We thought they were of sterner stuff.

This Week

Radio and Hollywood

Hollywood is to be given the dubious honor of becoming the "country's most modern broadcasting center," Columbia Broadcasting System this week announcing a budget of $1,000,000 with which to invade the fertile talent fields of the motion picture. National Broadcasting Company is already established on the ground for the same purpose. Still exhibitors' complaints continue against radio's use of screen stars on commercial air broadcasts. They charge "unfair competition" to theatre box offices.

Radio's newest invasion of the Hollywood talent source is described on page 13.

Admissions Higher

The trend toward increased admission prices is continuing with exhibitors advancing their scales in several cities. House records continue to fall in unusual numbers as the new product is released despite the fact that managers, in many cases, advance prices for showings of the bigger pictures.

Reports from many points on both these aspects of the current season are included in the story on page 14.

Lower Quotas Asked

Modification of the British Quota Law to place it upon a cost basis, with the quota for exhibitors less than that for distributors, has been proposed by distribution representatives before the Department Committee on Cinematographic Films. This is brought out in the second volume of the minutes of evidence. The 82 pages of the volume contain 110,000 words.

Further details in the article on page 37.

Lauds British Progress

New and complete studios in England make it possible for British producers to make pictures equal in quality to American product, in the opinion of Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia. There is plenty of room in both the English and American markets for such pictures, he believes, and their sale in both countries would be advantageous to the industry as a whole. Columbia has made arrangements for production of several pictures in England this year.

Mr. Cohn's report on his recent trip to London is cited on page 48.

47 in Production

Forty-seven feature pictures were in active production as of the week-end, with seven completed and eleven started during the period.

For particulars see page 45.

New French Association

Completion of organization of the Confederation Generale de la Cinematographie, representing the four large branches of the industry in France, production, distribution, exhibition and technics, is the answer to the Government's threat that it would undertake the reorganizing if the film leaders themselves did not act. Jules Demaria heads the Confederation.

Programs for Pupils

The Schools' Motion Picture Committee, representing some 50 private and public schools whose 50,000 pupils influence an additional 150,000 potential box office patrons, has been formed in New York to review theatre programs and select theatres that may be attended by young folks over weekends with the assurance of seeing features and short subjects free of "the vulgar, the horrid and the risque." This movement is not to be confused with the various "kiddie" programs being presented by several of the circuits and independent theatres, for it is primarily for audiences ranging from 12 to 18 years.

A discussion of the organization, its methods of operation and its aims are found in the story on page 30.

Films Not the Target

Exhibitors who have had misgivings over the campaign being conducted by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association to prohibit free publicity from the news columns of papers can be reassured by the statement, made by a spokesman for the ANPA, that the campaign is not directed against news or reviews of motion pictures, nor against legitimate news of any kind or from any source. Publishers in eight large cities have adopted the ban.

The purposes and conduct of the drive are detailed on page 20.

Taxation Problems

Taxation problems this week centered around New York City, where exchanges serving theatres in Northern New Jersey again are finding it difficult to collect the municipal sales tax. The Jersey exhibitors at first paid the tax under protest and now have stopped altogether. City attorneys insist the exhibitors are liable for the amounts but until the court case now pending before the court of appeals at Albany is cleared, there appears to be no immediate remedy.

Other legislative measures, such as Sunday "blue" laws and overseating ordinances, are also discussed in the story on page 40.

New "Camille"

Five times between 1917 and 1927 the screen gave its audience Alexander Dumas' "Camille," each successive version embodying the technological developments of its interval. Now Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is producing it with Greta Garbo and Robert Taylor in the leading roles and George Cukor directing.

U.S. Protests

Last summer Carlo Roncoroni, head of the motion picture division of the Italian government, visited America in an effort to obtain agreements with Hollywood producers to use the new Italian studio now nearing completion outside Rome. Walter Wanger was the only American who signified any willingness to produce in Italy, and, upon his departure, Signor Roncoroni hinted that changes in Italy's financial regulations governing the withdrawal of revenue from the country by motion picture countries might be expected as the result of the apparent lack of American cooperation.

This week it was revealed in Washington that the State Department is instructing the Roman Ambassador to act on behalf of American interests in opposing the Italian government's proposed legislation restricting the amount of monies that can be withdrawn by film companies.

Details of the situation are found in the story on page 40.

Bette Davis' Contract

Bette Davis must remain a "slave" drawing a pittance of $3,000 a week, a British court ruled this week in granting an injunction, on application of Warner Brothers, restraining the actress from appearing in films for any company other than Warner Brothers during the life of her contract. Miss Davis had signed for the leading role in "I'll Take the Low Road," a production planned by Ludovico Toeplitz of Toeplitz Productions, Ltd. Mr. Toeplitz' Italian connections and background have caused much speculation in the British film industry.

Miss Davis' harsh future and the career of Mr. Toeplitz are related on page 21.

To Play or Not to Play

Whether to follow Balaban and Katz into the double feature policy is the question before Chicago exhibitors. Executives of the circuits say they're well pleased with a business increase. Yet officials of other circuits insist they have felt no loss at the box office since the duals started in the B & K houses.

ASCAP Conference

Withdrawal from Canada of music controlled by the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, a step previously considered, will be discussed on Monday of next week when E. C. Mills, general manager, confers with Leslie J. Boosey, representative of the International Council of Performing Rights Societies of London, in New York.

The story is on page 44.

Financial Progress

General financial improvement for the industry was indicated this week in optimistic reports on earnings from three companies and a general increase in value of motion picture issues in the stock and bond markets. One explanation for the stock advance was believed to rest in the reports that most large companies are working on plans for consolidation or dissolution of subsidiaries in a general move for simplification. Increased dividends are expected to result.

Brief financial news from Universal, Paramount and Columbia and an account of the simplification movement are given on page 18.

Concessions Near

While at the Chicsa hotel in Memphis last weekend for the semiannual convention of the Tri-States Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association, Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, said that certain concessions asked by his organization from major distribution companies, for establishing fair trade practices, will soon be forthcoming. Mr. Kuykendall was not at liberty to reveal what these concessions were, but developments in New York indicate the points he has been asking will be granted.

See the story on page 22.

Exhibitors Gather

Exhibitor activities this week centered around the conventions of Pennsylvania's western counties and owners in the tri-state section of Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas, where annual and semi-annual conventions were held. At the same time, Ohio's operators decided on December 1-2 as the date of their annual meeting, which will be held this year in the Deshler Hotel in Columbus.

Details of the various meetings, with the names of new officers, are found on page 26.

RKO Plan Near

The final emergence of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation with a plan of reorganization appears, finally, to be only a matter of a few days. Both Wall Street and Broadway look for it to be presented to the federal court before the end of this week. Indications are, however, that under the plan which is said to be ready for the courts, provisions will be made for unsecured creditors, but unsecured claims may be made later.

Details of the present status of the plan may be found in the story appearing on page 48, along with other discussions of RKO's corporate affairs that figure in the news of this week.

GB Deal Statemented

John Maxwell of Associated British Pictures, who is acquiring the Ostrer brothers' holdings in Metropolis and Bradford Trust, controlling owner of Gaumont British, has refused to purchase the minority interest held by 20th Century-Fox in M and B on the terms offered. Sidney R. Kent, president of the American company, who has been conducting the negotiations in London following the collapse of the original Fox agreement with Isidore Ostrer, was scheduled to sail for home this week. The long and involved negotiations thus end with control of GB remaining in England but with Fox still holding its 49 per cent interest.

Statements issued by Mr. Kent and Mr. Maxwell and a preliminary GB financial report are detailed on page 25.

Paramount Session

Presided over by Neil F. Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales, home office and divisional sales executives of Paramount Pictures met in St. Louis last weekend for a two-day sales convention, the highlight of which was a message from President Barney Balaban.

The meeting is discussed in the story found on page 40.

William Fox's Troubles

William Fox's many court actions against others returned to harass him this week when he was openly accused by Hiram Steelman, trustee in bankruptcy, in the New Jersey courts, of plotting to defraud his creditors as far back as 1930. At the same time the court ordered the Fox family to show cause why the All-Continent Corporation assets should not be used to pay off Mr. Fox's debts. The All-Continent Corporation, controlled by Mrs. Fox and her two daughters, now has all the former assets of the film executive. The United States supreme court this week also consented to hear the appeal of Mr. Fox from a $235,082 penalty imposed on him by the New York courts.

Details of the various actions are found on page 26.

RKO Hearing

Hearing of the case of RKO Distributing Corporation versus John W. Bricker, attorney general, and others, seeking to invalidate the Ohio statute making it unlawful to enforce preferred playing time, has been set for November 20 in the United States district court at Columbus.

The preferred playing time bill was passed by the legislature, March 20, 1935, and automatically became a law three months later.

This Week in Pictures

ADDRESS. Dr. A. H. Giannini, United Artists president, told members of the Association of Foreign Correspondents at a luncheon last week that films have important part in world relations. (L. to r.) Nino Martini, Paulette Goddard, A. Bernard Maloney, Dr. Giannini, Walter Huston, Rouben Mamoulian and William Wyler.

AMERICAN AIRLINES

RETURNS. Back on the screen after three years, Lenore Ulric plays the role of Olympe in "Camille," MGM production.

ARRIVAL. Adolph Wohlbruck, Continental star, arrives in the United States to make his American screen debut in RKO Radio's "Michael Strogoff," from the novel by Jules Verne.

SOUTH. Richard Day, art director, Commander Lucien B. Green, USN, and Percy Ikerd, assistant director, set out for American Samoa, location of the Samuel Goldwyn production, "Hurricane," to be joined later by a complete production unit.

START. Les Pollock, manager of Loew's Rochester (N. Y.) theatre, entertained the Rochester Better Films Committee and the press at dinner in the mezzanine, by way of launching the new motion picture season.

DEPARTURE. Herbert Marshall leaves for a brief vacation in Europe, having signed a term contract with Columbia for two pictures a year and completed work in "A Woman Rebelled."

RESUMES. Myrtle Steadman returns to the screen in "Three Men on a Horse," the stage hit Mervyn LeRoy is directing for First National.

LISTENING. F. H. Richardson, writer on technological subjects for Motion Picture Herald, listens to Dr. C. E. K. Mees, of the Eastern Kodak Company, during a lull in the SMPE convention held in Rochester.

EN ROUTE. On its way to Hollywood is the League of Nations Gold Medal awarded David O. Selznick for "Little Lord Fauntleroy." League Committee Secretary M. Pillat is shown (left) presenting the medal to United Artists Representative Curtis Melnitz in Paris.

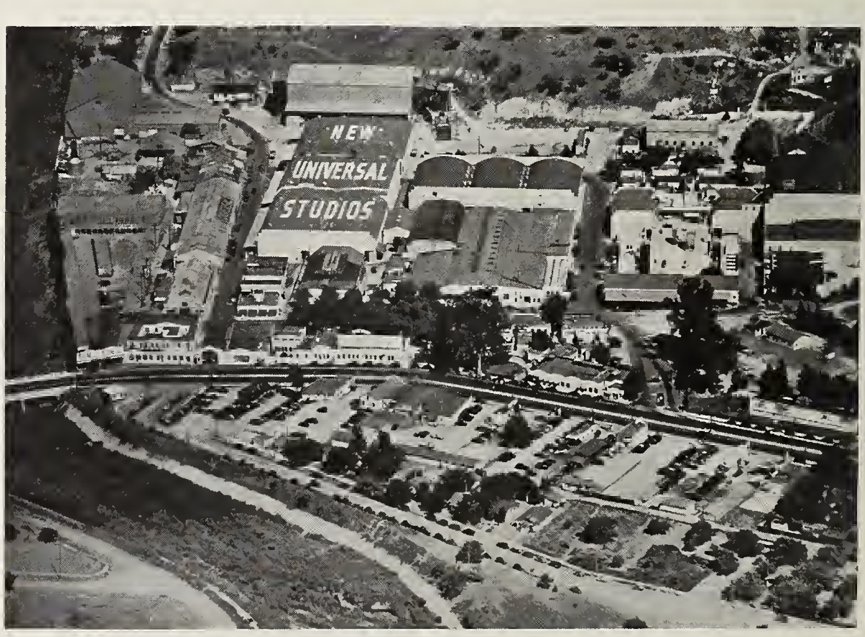
DAILY and SUNDAY

HONORED. Harry Hershfield was honored on his birthday, October 13, and the eve of his departure for Hollywood to fulfill a Warner contract, by a luncheon at the Hotel Commodore, New York. From left to right are Chet Bahn, Jack Halpin, George S. Luddington, Charles Einfeld, Jack Alicoate, Samuel E. Morris, Harry Warner, Jack Warner, Major Albert Warner, Hon. Carlos D'Avila, Nick Kenny, Mr. Hershfield, Donald Flamm, Bugs Baer, Gene Buck and I. J. Fox.

KNOW HER? She's Dorothy Parker, humorist, in Hollywood with her husband, Alan Campbell, to write the screen play of "A Star Is Born" for David O. Selznick. The dog is Jack, and he's only one of the seven family pets.

FIND. Beverly Arnett, winner of the MGM Traveling Studio Contest, has been awarded a contract and is preparing for serious screen work at the studio school.

HURRIED. Anatole Litvak, Russian French director, arrives in the United States to direct Claudette Colbert in Warners' "Joan of Arc" and may be forgiven, therefore, indecorous haste.



NEW UNIVERSAL STUDIOS

NEW UNIVERSAL. Attention of the film industry has been sharply drawn to the affairs of Universal, known by common reference as the new Universal since its sale by Carl Laemmle early this year, and the Universal studios, abuzz with renewed activity, looked like this to an aviator-photographer on a recent flight over the plant.

CBS STUDIO IN HOLLYWOOD TO BROADCAST FILM STARS

Columbia System Plans to Build $1,000,000 Broadcasting Center on Sunset Boulevard, To Be Ready Next Fall

Radio broadcasters this week promised that Hollywood will definitely become the "country's most modern broadcasting center," thus giving tangible evidence that their determination is stronger than ever to concentrate their talent-building ambitions on Hollywood's motion picture roster, despite the pronounced protestations of many theatre owners against the increasing use of Hollywood stars on the air in "unfair" competition to box-offices, the while others seek to adopt radio as an exploitation medium.

Already tenanted by the expensive and expansive studios of National Broadcasting Corporation, Hollywood faces a second big pumping by radio of its screen talent well, this time by Columbia Broadcasting System, second only to NBC in networks size. The CBS radio structure, of which William Paley is president, will undertake an invasion of the Hollywood talent field in much the same manner as NBC, by building a broadcasting center costing $1,000,000.

Arrangements for the purchase of a site in Hollywood by CBS were announced this week in New York by Columbia. Plans were said to be nearing completion. Work is to be started in January and the date for occupancy is set at about October 1, 1937.

On Sunset Boulevard

Columbia's radio center will front on Sunset Boulevard, between Gower and El Centro streets, conveniently adjacent to the film studios. Experimental television studios will be part of the project, of which William Lescaze, architect and designer, is in charge.

Apparently unconcerned over the vigorous protests of exhibitors and exhibitor organizations against the practice of using film stars on commercial air programs, radio has been trying for months to effect some sort of "cooperative" arrangement with Hollywood for an assured source of talent for the air.

Merlin H. Aylesworth, of the NBC-RKO interests, in July called on Will H. Hays and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and on the individual components of the film business, to sit in "friendly round table discussion" with the broadcasters to effect a tangible plan for bringing together America's two leading entertainment institutions, radio and the screen.

Complaints Stentorious

Mr. Aylesworth, so far as is known, has received no acceptances of his invitation, but, instead, there have developed even louder complaints by exhibitors against radio's "unfair" competitive aspects in the using of screen talent for its broadcasts. There is hardly an organized exhibitor group in the country that has not protested.

Denying that radio is a competitor to the screen, Mr. Aylesworth, evidently expressing the general opinion of broadcasters, has declared that radio's invasion of the Hollywood talent field is "a natural development."

Films have "a moral obligation to cooperate with radio," he added. "Then, too, advertising sponsors are insisting on picking up the great names of the screen for their commercial broadcasts, for the entertainment values which they offer."

Mr. Aylesworth conceded that sponsors' desires explained the reason why NBC had invaded Hollywood with its "million-dollar" broadcasting center, to be followed now by Columbia Broadcasting.

Second Large Air Studio

NBC opened its Hollywood "air center" on Saturday evening, December 7, 1935, the dedicatory program consisting almost entirely of motion picture names and concerning itself in every respect with endeavors to utilize screen fame and the public's interest in the motion picture.

For almost a year—to be followed now by Columbia in another year—NBC has been uninterruptedly distilling screen fame into advertising, building for the motion picture's greatest star names an association in the public mind with soap, lubricating oil, pickles and patent medicines, to say nothing of tin cans, cheese and hair tonics.

The speeches of the radio officials on hand at the NBC Hollywood dedication—principally those of Mr. Aylesworth and Richard Patterson, then an executive vice-president of NBC—were remarkably clear on the point that they had brought to Hollywood the plant and machinery and plan of operation for taking personalities held by the screen at a price for the box office patrons and delivering them free to the millions "in hovels," and so on.

Many Film Stars in Radio

Scores of prominent box office names of the screen since have been placed on the air from Hollywood by such NBC sponsors as the programs known as "Hollywood Hotel" and "Packard-Fred Astaire Hour." Many hours on the radio are now being brightened by musical numbers developed not in the Hollywood studios of radio but in the motion picture studios of Hollywood. Dramatic sketches, too, are found on frequent occasion to have the same point of emanation. Meanwhile, some 15,000 motion picture theatres will continue seeking to hold customers, some protesting radio's competition, some trying to use it as an ally.

"Lady Be Careful" Is Title, Company Warns Exhibitor

When a script title is rejected by the Production Code Administration for specific reasons, exhibitors will find difficulty in exploiting the original title instead of the one labeled for the picture completed from an accepted script.

Arthur Mayer, manager of the Rialto, New York, billed "Lady Be Careful" for a few hours on his marquee under its original title of "Sailor Beware," after the stage play. Officials of Paramount, distributor of the film, telephoned him to remind him that the franchise called for "Lady Be Careful" and no other title. Mr. Mayer changed his billing.

Although Paramount did not invoke any legal threats, it was pointed out that the company holds title to the copyright on the title "Sailor Beware" and could prevent its use in any manner.

When the script of the comedy was submitted to the Code Administration after purchase, it was rejected. Paramount changed the title and the story in parts, and the completed picture was accepted.

Radio Law Changes Urged in Washington

The allocation of radio facilities on a basis of business opportunity, rather than strict engineering deductions, was urged this week in Washington on the Federal Communications Commission by E. J. Gough, vice-president of Hearst Radio, Inc.

Mr. Gough proposed that the allocation of radio facilities in the future be made on the basis of the number of radio-owning families located in an area.

HIGHER ADMISSIONS MAINTAINED; NEW HOUSE RECORDS ESTABLISHED

Independents and Large Circuits Alike Increase Charges; Warner's New England Experiment Is Being Watched

Admission prices have continued the upward trend begun during the summer, with independent theatres and circuits raising scales almost everywhere. Too, additional houses records have been broken in many situations, both in attendance figures and in gross receipts, with the large number of outstanding pictures now available.

The movement for increased admissions has been particularly strong in New England, where the Warner circuit is feeling its way with higher scales. Prices have been raised from 25 and 35 cents to 30 and 40 cents at the State in Waterbury, and the Cameo in Bristol, Conn. Matinee prices also have been increased to 30 cents. No conclusions can as yet be drawn as to the advisability of the move, B. E. Hoffman, manager, reports. No comparative increases in grosses have been recorded. The entire scale has been advanced five cents at Loew's Palace and Leo Ricci's Capitol in Meriden, Conn.

The RKO Palace in Columbus, Ohio, advanced matinee and evening admissions from 30 to 40 cents to 35 cents until 1 P. M., 42 cents until 6 P. M. and 60 cents in the evening for a stage engagement of "Folies Parisienne." "Two in a Crowd" was the screen feature.

Second Detroit Raise Planned

Plans for the second neighborhood price increase in Detroit are under way, with east side houses in the present move. A group of 20 houses already have increased prices five cents on the west side. M. Richey, general manager, of Allied Theatres of Michigan, is unofficially sponsoring the move for increases. The Fisher and Riviera theatres, operated by United Detroit, will advance prices five cents to 35 cents as soon as competing houses agree, according to George W. Trendle, president. Michigan Avenue theatres, which recently increased their Saturday, Sunday and holiday prices by five cents, are making the increase effective for weekdays also.

For the first time since 1930 a large Houston, Texas, theatre has raised admission prices. The Loew's State top price has been advanced to 50 cents from 40, in effect after 3 P. M. Tickets bought before that hour are 35 cents and the balcony seats remain at 25 cents all day.

The conviction that admissions should be raised is accepted in the middle west, but exhibitors have had little success in reaching unanimity on the method. Recently Glen W. Dickinson's Dickinson at Herrington, Kan., advertised "A Whale of a Show at Minnow Prices." Previously the house had had varied admission prices, going as low as seven cents, and on one occasion two adults for 10 cents and two children for a nickel. The Dickinson advertised, on September 27th, a showing of "My Man Godfrey" for four days, "Jack Pot" all four nights, five cents each adult admission goes to the "Jack Pot." The posters noted that "The producers of 'My Man Godfrey' insist that we increase our admission to matinee 10 and 15 cents, night 10 and 25 cents."

"MR. DEEDS" RUN IN SIXTH MONTH

"Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" is in the sixth month of a record run at the Blue Mouse in Portland, Ore. The film's engagement is figured by months instead of the usual weeks. Unique contests devised by Herb Sobottka, manager, have so helped to stimulate civic interest as to make the picture something of a Portland institution.

The plan under which New York exhibitors have generally eliminated "early bird" matinees and established a 5 P. M. beginning of evening admission prices is working out "very satisfactorily," according to Max Cohen, executive secretary of the exhibitor committee in charge of the move.

"There have been complaints in connection with the plan," Mr. Cohen said, but he denied that the committee has been balked in its efforts to persuade Broadway houses to adopt the arrangement.

After four weeks at a considerably higher admission the Stanley in Pittsburgh returned to its regular "early bird" price of 25 cents with the opening of "Stage Struck." During September the scale was 35 cents from opening to 6 P. M. and then 50 cents. The evening price, a 10-cent increase over the scale in effect for the last year, remains, however. The Warner theatre in Pittsburgh raised its prices for "Swing Time," the matinee price going from 26 to 37 cents and the evening scale from 42 to 52 cents.

Ready to Increase Price

The Varsity in Lincoln, Neb., is planning a price increase to lead the way in that city, according to Milton Overman, executive of the Westland Theatres. The present top price is 25 cents and the new scale will be 20 cents for "early bird" matinees, 25 cents to 6 P. M. and 35 cents for the evening.

All three Fox West Coast first-run houses in San Francisco, the Paramount, Warfield and Fox, are now charging 55 cents in the afternoon and 75 cents at night for loge seats. The St. Francis, subsequent run theatre, is continuing the old scale with a 40-cent top.

Equivalent to a price reduction from the established 42-cent rate, including tax, at the Mayfair, independent house in Cincinnati is the sale of patrons' tickets, which are offered at $2 for six admissions. The tickets are good for any show at any time.

New Season Product Bringing All-Time High Grosses in Many Sections; 113,262 at New York Roxy in Four Days

The new season's pictures are continuing to break house records in spite of increased admission prices often charged during their runs. "The Great Ziegfeld" broke all house records at the Orpheum in Denver during its first week with prices advanced from 25, 35 and 40 cents to 30, 40 and 50 cents. The same picture, and "The Gorgeous Hussy," also a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release, have been held over on 90 per cent of their engagements, according to the MGM home office.

The Plaza, a Fox Midwest subsequent-run house in Kansas City, broke all attendance records for a Sunday when Paramount's "Rhythm on the Range" played to 6,000 persons. This was in spite of rain and the Jubilesta, a 125,000 eight-day show with which Kansas City introduced its new municipal auditorium.

"The Big Broadcast of 1937," also by Paramount, exceeded weekly average grosses by large percentages on 16 first runs and broke several records. The picture set an opening day record at the Florida theatre in Jacksonville and broke records on four successive days at the Main Street theatre in Kansas City. All Sunday records were broken by the picture at the Malco in Memphis on the third day of its run, the gross being more than $1,700.

New Record at the Roxy

"Dimples," 20th Century-Fox's new vehicle for Shirley Temple, set a new four-day attendance record at the Roxy in New York. During the first four days of the run 113,262 persons visited the theatre, a figure far greater than any previously recorded during the receivership and trusteeship of Howard S. Cullman. The gross for the four days totalled $41,350.

Samuel Goldwyn's "Dodsworth," released by United Artists, is the seventh picture to play four weeks or more in the last two years at the Rivoli in New York. The film had the biggest third week of any picture at the theatre. During the first five days of its second week the picture equalled the attendance record set by Charlie Chaplin's "Modern Times." Over the second weekend "Dodsworth" surpassed all records for the house for the last five years.

Pittsburgh Record Run

"My Man Godfrey" was held over for a seventh week at the Fulton in Pittsburgh, establishing the longest run of any picture to play the territory since 1929, when "The Broadway Melody" stayed eight weeks at Loew's Aldine. The Universal picture broke the house run record set by "The Count of Monte Cristo" two years ago.

Warner Brothers' "Anthony Adverse" broke records with a dual engagement at the Paramount and Fenway theatres in Boston. The first five days' business exceeded that done by the previous record holder. "Captain Blood," which had played both theatres during Christmas week. "Give Me Your Heart," also a Warner release, set new records at the Strand in Albany when it opened on a Saturday to the biggest business in the history of the house.

CAGNEY IS ORGANIZING FILM STARS TO TOUR COUNTRY IN STAGE SHOWS

Pat O'Brien, Robert Montgomery and William Gargan Recruited for "Flying Circus" to Give Legitimate a "Break"

Hollywood's second move in a week to revive interest in its erstwhile competitor of the legitimate drama finds a group of Hollywood motion picture stars, led by the red-headed James Cagney, organizing a theatrical "flying circus" to tour the country, visiting towns of consequence under 100,000 population, for the expressed purpose of giving theatregoers "a break" by appearing in and producing for them "worthwhile stage attractions."

RKO Radio in Hollywood, as mentioned last week, announced to the radio listening public that it, too, is going to give the "dying" stage a big hand to re-establish itself by lending its young motion picture stars, free of charge, to any legitimate theatre, stock company or little theatre of the drama which may formally request their services for one week or two.

"We all think it would be grand fun," Mr. Cagney explained even as he was preparing in Hollywood to appear in a motion picture for Grand National Films, at a salary reported to be $50,000.

Mr. Cagney already has recruited Pat O'Brien, Robert Montgomery and William Gargan.

Announcement of the Cagney plan for building up the stage came on Monday, strangely, from the motion picture publicity offices of Edward Finney at Grand National's headquarters in New York. Mr. Cagney is under contract to Grand National to appear in two pictures a year over a long period. Apparently he intends invading the field with his stage plan between pictures.

Fought Warner Contract

The star previously had been with Warner Brothers, ending his acting association with the Jack Warner studio at Burbank last winter during a hotly-contested court fight which he had instigated in order to break his contract and become a "free-lance" player. Warner Brothers lost the suit, and so Mr. Cagney found his way to the talent roster of the new, independent Grand National company.

Variously between the time he left Warners and joined his present producing employer, Mr. Cagney had spoken freely to the press about being "blackballed" by the "Big Eight," socalled, for his behavior in forcing the termination of his Warner contract.

The chief complaint of Cagney in the Warner matter was that he was being "overworked"—at $4,500 salary per week. The star haled the Warners to public trial, during which the news press of the country and abroad gave much attention to the heated trade arguments of both sides. The public never before had had the opportunity of listening at first hand to such choice epithets on studio-star "inside" relations as those offered in the open courtroom. Thus Mr. Cagney, in the public eye, became in fact the fighting type of star for which he had been noted at the box office.

The present action of Mr. Cagney, as announced by Grand National's press statement, is explained thus: "The red-headed star is organizing a theatrical 'circus' intended to revive interest in the legitimate drama in communities which have heretofore had difficulty in securing worthwhile attractions."

Time Between Pictures

The announcement, however, gave no indication as to whether Mr. Cagney's "flying circus" will refrain from putting on their contemplated stage productions in those communities where such dramatic stagings would work to the competitive disadvantage of established motion picture theatres. Nor was there any intimation, formal or through the Hollywood "grapevine," that Mr. Cagney now aims to give vent to his previously admitted feelings toward the large producers by "bucking" either their product or theatres in the field.

Grand National's statement added that "Cagney is first obligated to make 'Great Guy,' but since his Grand National deal calls for only two pictures a year, he will have ample time to carry out his idea between pictures."

Round-Robin Plan

"Their plays will be presented under a round-robin idea," continued the announcement, "with the various stars alternating in the roles on different nights."

Mr. Cagney was quoted by Grand National as saying he hoped to be able to do things in his new stage venture that he has been unable to do in Hollywood. There was no explanation of what he has in mind, save the observation by Mr. Cagney that "we have a lot of ideas we can work out in this way that we haven't been able to do on the screen," adding that he sees the opportunity "to meet theatre managers and to work with real audiences."

"We don't expect to make money out of the tour, but we do hope to cover expenses," Mr. Cagney explained. "We can thus give the public a break and at the same time take one for ourselves."

The action of RKO Radio in lending stars and of Mr. Cagney in staging plays, both containing assurances of reviving the "dying" stage to some extent, could be construed as answers to the pleas of Actors' Equity Association that the motion picture aid the legitimate drama. Equity, a players' union, existing on dues paid by its working members, has been campaigning for months in the open to induce what they term the "wise movie men" to supplant motion pictures at some of their theatres, exclusively or otherwise, with stage shows of the type of the legitimate drama, in order to put more Equity actors to work.

Supply Dealers Hear Patman at Chicago Session

The Independent Theatre Supply Dealers' Association have concluded a three-day weekend meeting at Chicago's Congress hotel, discussing the effects the Patman-Robinson law would have on their business.

On Sunday afternoon Congressman Patman spoke at a closed meeting. The dealers were reported to have agreed that the law would stop many unfair practices which they claim the manufacturers are now using in order to dispose of their products.

The parts of the speech of most interest to the dealers concerned prices. Representative Patman pointed out that once a price was set it remained that way to all buyers. Special prices for quantity lots could not be made unless the dealer could prove that by selling in such a quantity he could offer a lower price.

The main point of business at the Monday session, it is reported, was a discussion of possible formation of a number of manufacturers and dealers into a group similar to National Theatre Supply Company. Such a group would be harmful to the independents' association, some delegates said, and efforts will be made to stop it. According to executives of the independent group the other plan is merely a sales plan. Others, however, seemed to think differently and indicated that the new organization probably would be ready to function within the next 30 days.

Several local equipment dealers displayed their product at the meeting.

Carriers to Form Delivery System

The National Film Carriers' Association, which held its annual meeting this week at the Palmer House in Chicago, unanimously passed a resolution calling upon each carrier to set up his own system of distribution similar to the Horlacher system now in use in Philadelphia. The system will be available for all motion picture companies.

Speakers at the meeting included Theodore V. Rogers, president of the American Trucking Association; John V. Lawrence, general manager of the same organization, and J. L. Rogers, director of the motor carrier bureau, Interstate Commerce Commission. In general discussion was the Motor Carrier Act and its connection with the industry as regards the pickup and distribution of films.

"CAMILLE" CLASSIC ROLE

FIVE TIMES in the decade dated 1917–27 the screen gave its public a picturization of "Camille." Veterans remember that "Camille" was a favorite, too, sometimes under its proper title and sometimes under others, in the dim days of one- and two-reel films trademarked AB for American Biograph and E for Edison. It has been called everything from tear-jerker to classic and, by evidence of the world's box offices since and prior to the coming of the cinema, it is each and all of these.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, acutely aware of the import of names in this modern day, has elected to feature a gayer and more sparkling Greta Garbo and the meteoric Robert Taylor in its production of "Camille." Assignment, as it pertains to Miss Garbo, seems particularly wise. In her preceding picture, "Anna Karenina," in which she retained her stature as the acknowledged peer of dramatic screen artists, she also gave pleasing demonstration of her natural, spirited character. As the glamorous Parisian siren of Dumas' "Camille," the star will be given ample opportunity further to demonstrate her inherent and but lately discovered character in comparison with the manner in which many stage greats, Sarah Bernhardt, Helena Mojeska, Ada Gray, Olga Nethersole and Mme. Duse, essayed the same role.

George Cukor, whose "Little Women," "David Copperfield" and "Romeo and Juliet" have won him acclaim as a superior director of films based on classic stories, is staging "Camille" with the same opulence and lavish scope that characterized these screen efforts. Production effects, sensibly, will receive proper attention. But, to the end that name merit shall be of primary consideration, a cast of supporting principals has been recruited from the screen and New York and London stages. It includes Lionel Barrymore, Henry Clive and King Baggott, among the better known personalities, and in it is listed Leonore Ulric, star of such stage plays as "Bird of Paradise," "Kiki" and "Lulu Belle," returning to the screen after a three-year absence.

Costuming of the stars and support, the time being the middle years of the past century, constituted quite a problem for Adrian. The extent of wardrobe required is seen in the fact that Miss Garbo has 18 changes and Mr. Taylor 14. Twenty-seven different costumes were designed for the principal male supports and 350 for the male extras. For the principal feminine supports and minor players, 300 costumes were produced.

Dances which are incidental to the action and atmosphere within the theatre and during the course of the story are being directed by Val Raset.

William Daniels is the photographer, the man behind the camera on "Anna Karenina," "Painted Veil" and "Queen Christina," other recent Garbo pictures, whose credits also include the photography of "Rose Marie," "Naughty Marietta," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and "Dinner At Eight."

Original preparatory detail of the picture and initial shooting came under the personal guidance of the late Irving Thalberg. The film is being carried to conclusion by George Cukor and others close to Mr. Thalberg, who knew what he had visioned, and who are exerting their utmost efforts to assure a production of which Mr. Thalberg would have been proud.

SIMPLIFIED CORPORATE STRUCTURES SEEN AS FURTHER AID TO EARNINGS

General Financial Gains Reflected in Three Companies' Reports and in Marked Increase in Values of Stock

General financial gains in the industry were reflected this week in reports from three companies and in a marked increase in stock values. Universal announced that more than $500,000 of questionable assets will be written off in order to place the company in a favorable position for earnings next year. Stanton Griffis, chairman of the executive committee of Paramount, in discussing the company's present position said that it is making money in every department and this was indicated in a pronounced rise in the preferred stock on the exchange. Columbia voted a quarterly dividend of 68¾ cents a share on the $2.75 convertible preferred stock.

The write-offs of Universal assets, announced by J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, are expected to result in a loss being shown for the fiscal year ending November 1st, but they will place the company in a more favorable earnings position for the new fiscal year. The write-offs follow a survey of Universal's domestic and foreign units made by the new management during the six months which it has been in control.

In addition to involving questionable assets, the write-offs will include a number of employment contracts which were considered unwise by the new management and are being bought up, it was said.

"These sweeping changes will place the company in a perfectly healthy condition to start its new fiscal year next month," Mr. Cowdin said. "They will put Universal in a position to capitalize fully on the striking general gains throughout the industry. Current operations are on a very satisfactory basis."

New budgets for the 1937-38 production season, which provide for an increase in the company's schedule to 46 features and six westerns, have been approved by the board. The improvement in studio operations under Charles R. Rogers and William Koenig will be evidenced in the release of 36 features during the current season. Of the current schedule 17 pictures have been completed, two are in work and four are set to start this week.

$150,000 Saving in Talent Cost

A saving of more than $150,000 has been effected, Mr. Cowdin said, in the allowance for the unused time of players through the building up of the company's stock talent to 72 players from a former 15. The saving, it was said, represents an appreciable improvement in what has been a large item of studio expense in recent years.

Paramount, in a few brief months, has been transformed into a smooth running money making company, Mr. Griffis said in discussing briefly the position of the company after the preferred shares had touched new highs on the stock exchange. Last week the stock passed the 100 mark for the first time and continued to climb from there, being quoted at 112¾ on Tuesday. Other stocks showed corresponding gains.

SEPTEMBER TICKET TAXES SHOW GAIN

Registering a sharp increase, admission tax collections in September reached a total of $1,670,044, compared with $1,384,107 in August and $1,173,507 in September, 1935, the Bureau of Internal Revenue in Washington revealed this week.

The September collections were the highest in a long period, and were more than $100,000 over the previous 1936 high of $1,568,487, recorded in the month of July, it was said.

For the first nine months of the current year, admission tax receipts of the Treasury totaled $12,859,943, about $1,564,000 over the $11,295,124 reported for the corresponding period the year before. For the third quarter, ended with September, collections were $4,622,639, as against $4,117,380 in the preceding quarter and $3,764,073 in the corresponding quarter last year.

Paramount Earnings Up

The report for the third quarter, which will not be issued for some time, will be "very good," Mr. Griffis said. He expressed the view that Paramount's earnings from now on will compare favorably with those of any previous period.

Mr. Griffis paid a tribute to Barney Balaban, elected president on July 2nd after John E. Otterson, former head of the company, left the office in June. The management is now in harmony, he said, with Adolf Zukor, chairman of the board, running the coast studios, and the company now is making money on picture production as well as in theatres.

Stock Showing Strength

The Wall Street Journal took notice of the strong tone of motion picture issues in a report which said, in part:

"Movie stocks are showing more determined strength than in some time. The strength coincides with remarks made by M. H. Aylesworth, chairman of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at Rochester. Higher general admission prices and an early end to double features were foreseen. Assuming the public is ready for these changes, an important turning point in movie company earnings may well be at hand. Some of the bulls on the industry point out that there has been little construction of new theatres for several years and with the growth in population and the recent residential building developments in suburban areas, the companies with large theatre circuits are in a position to benefit."

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company and its 23 associated companies, including Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc., reported a net, for the quarter ending August 31st, of $42,942,001, equal to $2.30 a share.

Savings Seen under Amalgamations of Subsidiaries Now Required to Pay 15 Per Cent Dividend Tax under Federal Law

Substantial increases in profits are expected to accrue from plans undertaken by most of the large companies under which practically all their subsidiaries will be dissolved and their operations turned over to the parent companies. The fact that nearly all the companies are reported to be working on revision of corporate structures is believed to be one explanation of the rise in film issues on the stock and bond markets in the last week.

Under the present federal laws, each subsidiary declaring a dividend must pay a dividend tax of 15 per cent. With elimination of the individual operating units the parent companies will benefit by this 15 per cent, it has been pointed out by an attorney for one of the large companies. In the amalgamation of the many units the companies will be able to consolidate losses with the profitable operations.

The realization is present, particularly among large circuit operators, that the reorganizations will remove the limited liability aspects of their present setup and open the way to a wholesale liability on the part of the parent companies, but their attitude is that the savings in taxes through dissolution of subsidiaries will more than offset possible litigation.

Most of the companies which have undertaken the work are well along with the simplification. Paramount already has dissolved or consolidated its former top holding companies for both foreign and domestic distribution, production and theatre interests. The company is now engaged in further breaking down the intricate structure of its theatre owning and operating interests.

Loew's has made considerable progress toward elimination of dispensable subsidiaries under the MGM banner.

Warner Brothers recently dissolved First National Pictures and is now studying a possible simplification of its theatre structure.

Although Universal is considering similar action company officials are of the opinion that another 60 to 90 days may be required to develop an acceptable plan. Indications are that either Universal Corporation, the present holding company controlling the organization, or a new company which may be organized later in its place, will emerge as the new parent company.

RKO plans to eliminate various studio and distributing companies soon, but probably will not disturb its present theatre corporation setup. Its most profitable theatre subsidiary is Keith-Albee-Orpheum, which is not a wholly owned company and, therefore, cannot be dissolved.

Attorneys for National Theatres, holding company for more than 400 Fox theatres, are studying means of consolidation. Fox Wisconsin, Fox Midwest, Evergreen States, Fox Rocky Mountain and Fox West Coast are among the important subsidiary operating units. Each of the theatres in the five groups is operated by an individual corporation. Whether attorneys will merge the individual units with regional companies or consolidate them all in the realignment is among the factors now being weighed by circuit executives.

PUBLISHERS DENY PUBLICITY BAN IN NEWSPAPERS INVOLVES FILMS

Newspapers in Eight Cities Are Agreed to Prohibit "Free Publicity" but Space for News Is Retained for the Most Part

A campaign to eliminate "free publicity" from the news columns of America's daily publications, being conducted through the American Newspaper Publishers Association, is not directed, except in a few instances, against motion picture news or reviews which are usually carried on the amusement pages.

Newspaper publishers in eight cities—Atlanta and Augusta, Ga,; Columbia, S. C.; Binghamton and Syracuse, N. Y.; Los Angeles, Nashville and Pittsburgh—have agreed to ban "free publicity," and newspaper proprietors in many other cities are considering similar agreements. In those cities where the plan has been tried the newspapers reported that both advertisers and readers were for the most part pleased with the results.

Fears of theatre owners and circuit operators that the campaign would result in elimination of motion picture news of exploitation value were allayed by the assurance that newspapers which have adopted the ban will not cut down their dramatic or motion picture editorial staffs nor reduce the space devoted to motion picture or amusement news.

Some publishers said that the volume of press agent material and releases from persons interested in getting the name of some product, from cheese and onions to beauty preparations and liquor, before the public eye without paying for advertising, had grown to such proportions that city desks were hampered in their handling of real news. A spokesman for the ANPA, in explaining the publishers' stand, said:

"Newspapers are organized to carry messages to the public for pay, much as the telegraph companies or other communication systems carry messages. The efforts of over-enthusiastic or, in some cases, dishonest partisans of a particular product, movement, industry, or whatever, to get their releases published as news, without paying for it, give rise to resentment among advertisers who are paying for their message."

$6,000,000 Free Publicity

An example cited was the achievement of a press bureau which last year received $20,000 from the Nova Scotia board of trade for acting as "press relations counsel." The bureau, in literature designed to attract other clients, boasted that it had obtained $6,000,000 worth of free publicity for Nova Scotia.

Recent bulletins of the ANPA have warned publishers of specific instances in other directions. In several cases sample stories sent out by various press bureaus or agents were set up and printed as advertisements, showing the type of material which floods editors' desks under the guise of legitimate news. In preparation is a list of industries, trade associations and other agencies concerned with hundreds of products, which are disseminating publicity as news.

Among releases against which publishers were warned were such examples as stories, designed for women's page, extolling the value of Roquefort cheese for slenderizing purposes, issued by an association of cheese manufacturers, and similar health stories featuring onions, issued by an onion grower's group.

The point was emphasized, however, by ANPA officials that the movement was by no means directed against stories of real interest to readers even when such stories were received from press agent sources. Into this category, it was pointed out, falls most of the material used in the motion picture columns of newspapers.

Executives cited the instance of the hundreds of news writers who are in Hollywood engaged in sending out regular columns and feature stories for syndicates and newspapers. Such material is expected and read avidly by subscribers, hence was classified as legitimate news.

Similarly, exploitation material sent out by exhibitors to their local newspapers is entirely concerned with pictures which are being shown or are scheduled for future dates at the local theatres. The majority of newspaper readers are actively interested in more news about the theatre's program than is usually contained in the advertisements, it was added.

The two leading papers in Nashville, the Banner and the Tennesseean, recently adopted the ban, the publishers declaring in a joint statement that "the unwarranted amount of so-called publicity which our newspapers have been carrying is beginning to undermine reader confidence."

The statement, which was addressed to all advertisers in the two newspapers, continued: "In the mutual interests of you and ourselves, we have decided to discontinue publicity stories and pictures, except in those instances where the subject discussed is of such public news interest that it would be deserving of comment in our newspapers without regard to advertising, or when such publicity is included in the charge for advertising."

The daily theatrical notices, usually sparse, have been eliminated, but the Sunday theatrical page and picture layout are continuing. Copy for the Sunday page has been invariably "puff" material supplied by the local theatres. Tony Sudekum, president of the Crescent Amusement Company, said:

"The usual page is given on Sunday with a page or more devoted to the coming week's programs, with pictures in a layout. The ruling applies to the weekday stories, but where there is a picture or program of special interest, an exception is made."

Statements similar to that issued by the Nashville papers have been made in other cities where the ban has been adopted. Ralph E. Bennett, general manager of the Binghamton Press, in a letter to his advertisers said:

"Operative at once, store publicity will not be handled in the news columns of the Binghamton Press, excepting such as can stand 'on its own feet' for its genuine news value.

"This rule has become necessary because of the constantly increasing budget of publicity flooding the city editor's desk. The volume has grown to such proportions that it is difficult to handle the local and general news of the day which the subscriber expects and to which he is entitled.

"From this date the editorial department will accept only such material as in its judgment can pass muster on a news basis."

Syracuse Theatres Certain the Agreement Has a Negative Effect but Refuse to Enter Any Campaign of Retaliation

Mr. Bennett, in a later report to the New York State Publishers Association on the success of the plan, pointed out that the editorial department has been given full authority to decide on any piece of copy, with news value the sole basis for judgment. Advertisers who offer publicity material are told it will be submitted to the editorial department for use or rejection at the editor's discretion.

"Newspapers have weakened the value of their advertising in the minds of their patrons by running a grab-bag propaganda paper filled with impossible claims and statements to boost this or that product or to tickle the vanity of the vice-president or some other official of a manuacturing company located perhaps a thousand miles from the home office of the newspaper," Mr. Bennett said.

According to officials of the ANPA the only obstacle to universal adoption of the prohibition is the difficulty found in persuading publishers of competing newspapers to agree.

Retaliation Denied

Reports that Syracuse theatre managers are contemplating withdrawal of all amusement advertising from three local newspapers in retaliation for the "free publicity" ban voted by Syracuse publishers were found to be false.

Local exhibitors say such a move is practically unthinkable. Though the theatre managers, along with other business men, have been severely hit by the agreement, all local film officials refuse to take individual exception for their theatres, explaining that the ban affects everyone.

A checkup of national advertising schedules for both Loew's and RKO Schine, which control the five major theatre outlets in Syracuse, show that there has been no slicing in this classification since the agreement went into effect on September 21st.

Edward McBride, speaking for the Loew's management, said: "Loew's has continued its advertising, both nationally and locally, and we intend to do so."

Gus W. Lampe, director of the four RKO Schine houses, said he viewed the publicity ban as aimed at all commercial enterprises. He said the RKO Schine interests expect to continue their present local and national advertising schedule.

Newspapers involved are Post-Standard, morning daily, published by Jerome D. Barnum, president of the ANPA; Journal-American, Hearst afternoon daily, and the Herald, independent afternoon daily. All three papers publish on Sunday.

Under the new plan all outside cooperative advertising must be paid for at the amusement rate, which means virtual abandonment of the exhibitors' former practice of obtaining full page cooperatives.

Goldwyn Demurrer Overruled

A demurrer filed by Herman P. Selvin, attorney for Samuel Goldwyn in a suit involving the services of Gary Cooper, has been overruled by Federal Judge James in Los Angeles on the ground that the Paramount complaint sets forth a just cause for action. The case will be set for trial after Mr. Goldwyn files an answer.

BETTE DAVIS MUST "SLAVE" FOR WARNER AT $3,000, BRITISH RULE

King's Bench Grants Company Injunction Against Star Who Left Hollywood to Appear in Toeplitz Production

Justice Says Player Won't Be "Driven to Perform Contract" but May Be "Tempted to Perform It"

London's courts have ruled that Bette Davis must continue in "bondage" to Warner Brothers—at $3,000 a week.

After a brief hearing at which Miss Davis was characterized as "a naughty little girl who wants more money," and she pitifully told reporters that "you have no idea how these body and soul contracts bind you," an English court granted an injunction restraining the actress from appearing in motion pictures or other performances in England for any company except Warner Brothers.

The injunction was granted by Justice Sir George Branson in King's Bench Division upon application by the American film company after it was announced that Miss Davis intended to appear in a picture for Ludovico Toeplitz of Toeplitz Productions, Ltd. The action was called the first time in which an American star and company have engaged in litigation in an English court under such circumstances.

The testimony was avidly seized upon by both the British and American press and in many cases was quoted in full in American papers with the "naughty girl," "slave" and "body and soul" aspects played to their fullest in headlines. British motion picture fans crowded the courtroom during the hearings.

Miss Davis left the Warner lot last summer, refusing to accept a role in "God's Country and the Woman." She went to London immediately afterword and was offered the starring role in "I'll Take the Low Road," by Mr. Toeplitz.

Justice Branson's decision, finding for Warner Brothers in the suit, agreed with the film company's attorneys that Miss Davis had left Warner Brothers for "no discoverable reason except that she wanted more money." He pointed out in his decision that the actress is a "person of intelligence and means," and that although she might find employment in some other field than acting, "she will not be driven to perform the contract, although she may be tempted to perform it."

The plaintiff's testimony closed with the appearance for Warner Brothers of Alexander Korda, who observed that "an actress does not always understand her will or what she wants to do."

Toeplitz Counsel Protests

Counsel for Mr. Toeplitz was in court on the second day and protested the accusation made previously that his client was guilty of bribery, a criminal offense, in signing Miss Davis.

The injunction granted at the conclusion of the hearing will not go into effect until November 2d, to give the actress an opportunity to file an appeal. It specifies that Miss Davis is prohibited from working for anyone but Warner Brothers for the remainder of her contract with that company, or for the next three years, whichever period is shorter.

COMPANIES MODIFY THEIR "BLACK LIST"

Settlement of a distributor-exhibitor dispute which at one time threatened to extend into the territory of the law was formally announced in the official report of the last General Council meeting of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association. Protesting against the listing of certain exhibitors by the Kinematograph Renters Society on the terms that they would be supplied with films only on percentage instead of flat rates, the CEA has obtained the concession from the KRS that, while it retains the right to prepare such a list of exhibitors it will be left to individual distributors to decide on what terms they will supply them with films.

Gently underlining the fact that, it seems, it has scored an unusual though perhaps illusory success, the CEA remarks that "every member who was placed upon the list which was the cause of the trouble has been removed from it and has been able to book with renters as he has normally done."

Toeplitz from Italy

Mr. Toeplitz, holder of the title "de Grand Ry" from the King of Italy, is managing director of Toeplitz Productions, Inc., Ltd., was formerly joint managing director with Alexander Korda in London Films, Ltd., and earlier a producer for Cines-Pittaluga of Rome. His Italian origin, his association with the political movements which established the present regime in Italy, and the fact that, at a time when the export of capital from Italy is prohibited and Italian nationals abroad are required to transfer the bulk of their money to Italy, he continues to make $500,000 pictures in England, have given rise to much speculation concerning him in the British film industry.

The producer was born in Genoa Feb. 21, 1893, the son of Giuseppe Toeplitz, managing director and later president of the Banca Commerciale Italiana. Giuseppe Toeplitz retired more than a year ago, a very wealthy man, but not the multi-millionaire he is reputed to be.

The Banca Commerciale is an institution with a history and a stability comparable to that of the British "Big Six" and is said to be one of the pre-Mussolini institutions in Italy which have retained some semblance of independence. The Toeplitz family connection with the institution is of long standing.

Ludovico Toeplitz, educated at the universities of Milan, Bologna, and Fribourg, at the age of 22 volunteered for the Italian Army and served until 1918 on the Italian front. He won promotion, the Medalgia al Valore, and the Croce di Guerra.

In the post-War disturbances in Italy he began the activities which now cause so much speculation about his present significance. Right hand man to Gabriele D'Annunzio in the occupation of Fiume, he was the poet-revolutionary's Minister of Foreign Affairs during the hectic life of the D'Annunzio government.

In 1923, Mr. Toeplitz, scorning the ready-made success waiting for him as the son of his father, head of the biggest bank in Italy, sought commercial experience abroad. For three years he worked for D. Heineman, electrical magnate of Brussels, then returned to Italy as general manager of the Terni Electricity Works; later he became a director. In his leisure hours he wrote and published poems and short stories and novels on mythological subjects.

Produced for Pittaluga

He entered the film world with the Cines-Pittaluga when it was still one of the biggest production companies on the continent. In four years he produced 20 pictures, including "Garibaldi" and "L'Armata Azzura," a successful pageant of Italian air power which Warner Brothers remade in an English version as "The Blue Squadron," retaining Mr. Toeplitz's most spectacular sequences.

The producer, eager for distinction in the world market, went to England, he says, because he saw England looming larger than America in production for European as well as for English-speaking markets. When he arrived, London Film Productions, with a record of mixed achievement and not unlimited financial resources, needed reorganization.

He achieved the reorganization in combination with Alexander Korda and supplied the money for the "big pictures only" policy which produced "The Private Life of Henry VIII" and "Catherine the Great." Then Mr. Korda and Mr. Toeplitz, strong men both, differed about the identity of the one strong man needed by London Film Productions. Mr. Toeplitz founded his own production company with the Tower Bridge instead of Big Ben as a trade mark and the slogan, "From London to the World."

Later Productions

For Toeplitz Productions, Ltd., he has made "The Dictator," with Clive Brook and Madeleine Carroll, released by Gaumont-

British, and "The Beloved Vagabond," with Maurice Chevalier, shortly to be released by Columbia in America. In preparation he has the comedy "I'll Take the Low Road," with Monty Banks, also Italian, directing. This is the picture for which Miss Davis was signed. Nigel Bruce and Douglass Montgomery were to support her.

Priding himself on his ability to organize production on a business basis, Mr. Toeplitz takes special pleasure in the fact that "The Dictator" was completed exactly in the twelve weeks shooting schedule he had laid down for it, and that that schedule was precisely the same as the shooting time of "Henry VIII." As a producer be believes in personal attention to matters on the floor and a degree of supervision of directors which not all directors like. Al Santell, first choice as man in charge of "The Dictator," walked out after a few scenes had been shot, with Mr. Toeplitz's assistance.

Source of Finances

Surmise about the source of Mr. Toeplitz's finance, giving rise to the suggestion that Mussolini may have relaxed stringent financial degrees in favor of an unofficial film ambassador, arises largely from the fact that "The Dictator" was an indifferent box-office picture in England and America. Admitting this fact freely, Toeplitz associates deny the conclusion generally drawn that Toeplitz Productions lost money on the picture and had to get more capital, from Italian sources.

Firstly, they say, "The Dictator" recovered its cost. European sales were big; in Italy it tied with "The Scarlet Pimpernel" and beat the figures of "Henry VIII." Secondly, it is asserted, the picture which succeeded "The Dictator" was made without a penny of Italian money. The financing of "The Beloved Vagabond" was all-British, and more than half of the capital used in "The Dictator" was British too, it is said.

From Insurance Companies

Carrying the explanation further, Toeplitz executives assert that Mr. Toeplitz now gets all the money he wants from British insurance and finance concerns before he starts a picture because he is able to show guarantees of distribution in all European countries as well as the United Kingdom and the United States, which definitely cover the cost of production.

When there was Italian money in the Toeplitz ventures, it is said, it was Toeplitz money, not that of the Banca Commerciale Italiana. The money invested in London Films was recovered with a profit, and part of it reinvested in "The Dictator," which demonstrated Toeplitz's ability to make profitable pictures and made personal investment no longer necessary.

Entirely British Production

The set-up which enables him to conduct a totally British production company consists, in its essential parts, of a highly efficient Continental organization, with offices at Paris, Rome and Berlin under the general charge of Paul Graetz, once of Ufa, who, working from Paris, is said to have obtained guarantees from the Continent on "The Beloved Vagabond" more than double those obtained from America and England together.

That it is not possible to export profits either from Germany or from Italy is a point not enlarged upon, but in this connection Mr. Toeplitz's international banking connections are not overlooked.

Conceding that Mr. Toeplitz's profits made in Italy as a British producer must remain there, his associates say further that probably some day he will make a picture or several pictures in Mussolini's new studios near Rome, since the money is accumulating there and cannot be withdrawn. They insist, however, that if and when he does he will do so purely as a British producer, not as a returned and perfected production expert for the Fascist Government. Mr. Toeplitz's record in England is made more British by the fact that the British Government, traditionally touchy about propaganda, finds nothing to object to in Toeplitz productions.

Concessions Near, MPTOA Believes

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, within a week, will have a definite announcement on certain concessions from distributors as requested by that organization in its 10-point program for establishing fair trade practices in order to bring about more harmonious relations between distributors and exhibitors, Ed Kuykendall, president, said Monday in Memphis, where he had been attending the semi-annual convention of the Tri-States M.P.T.O. at the Chicsa Hotel.

"I cannot reveal the nature of the announcement," he said, "but it is along the line toward which we have been negotiating."

In New York, at the same time, distributors reported that definite progress was being made on sales policy revisions within individual companies to embrace concessions in line with the trade practice reforms which are sought by the M.P.T.O.A. Indications are that the first list of concessions will be made known by one of the major distributors before the end of the week and the decisions of other companies will be revealed shortly thereafter.

In general, a majority of companies are expected to make concessions which will include unrestricted cancellation, elimination of the score charge, adoption of the short form of exhibition contract and the establishment of local conciliation boards in exchange centers to handle local trade practice complaints. The concessions probably will vary in detail and some companies may not agree to all of these four major points of the exhibitor program, but basically the concessions to be made will represent significant gains for exhibitors, it was indicated.

Jesse Lasky Joins Radio to Work As Unit Producer

Jesse L. Lasky, prominent pioneer of the motion picture, this week signed a long-term contract with RKO Radio as a unit producer. Mr. Lasky will produce about six pictures a year, one of the first of which will star Nino Martini, who is under personal contract to Mr. Lasky.

Mr. Lasky recently dissolved Pickford-Lasky Productions, which he had formed with Mary Pickford, despite the success of their latest effort, "The Gay Desperado."

It was in 1914 that Mr. Lasky, Cecil B. DeMille and Samuel Goldwyn formed a partnership, after a fling at producing plays on Broadway, and organized the Jesse Lasky Feature Play Company. Mr. Lasky, being a native Californian, induced the others to go there with him and make motion pictures. As the years went on, Mr. Lasky was associated mostly with Famous Players, but later became an official of Paramount, Fox, and more recently, his own Pickford-Lasky Productions, Inc.

Immediately after Mr. Lasky joined Radio, word came that his first effort for that company would star Mr. Martini and Lily Pons, reuniting the famous Metropolitan Opera team. The press reported, however, that Miss Pons balked at this, saying one opera star in a picture was enough. Later, she denied making such a statement.

Producers Receive Copyright Reports

The producers copyright committee, of which E. P. Kilroe of Twentieth Century-Fox is chairman, were to meet this Thursday to receive the written report outlining the conditions on which the motion picture industry would recommend that the United States become a member of the Berne international copyright convention.

Four major changes in the Berne convention's present regulations are desired by the industry, Mr. Kilroe said in an oral report to the committee several weeks ago. He expressed the opinion then that the changes to be recommended probably would be accepted by the Berne convention.

Fights "Ecstasy" Eliminations

An effort to prevent the elimination of three scenes from "Ecstasy" is being made in Sacramento by Charles Holtz, manager of the Sierra. The deletions were ordered by the authorities who viewed the picture after the City Better Films Board complained of the nudity in some scenes.

KENT WITHDRAWS 20th–FOX OFFER, LEAVING GAUMONT CONTROL IN U.K.

Control of Gaumont British Stays in England Through Pending Sale of Ostrer Brothers' Interests to Maxwell

20th Century - Fox Still Owns 49 Per Cent of Metropolis and Bradford; Kent Returning After Canceling Deal

Negotiations for acquisition of a further interest in Gaumont British, other than that already acquired, by John Maxwell of Associated British Pictures, have ended, at least for a time, with Sidney R. Kent, president of 20th Century-Fox, scheduled to leave England for New York on Thursday. The long and involved negotiations, which started with a plan for triple ownership of GB by the Ostrer brothers, 20th Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, thus conclude with control of GB remaining in England through the agreement of Mr. Maxwell to buy the Ostrer interests.

The situation was first disturbed by the entrance of Mr. Maxwell, who offered to buy the Ostrer interests at a price reported more advantageous to them than the terms of the agreement with Joseph M. and Nicholas Schenck, representing Fox and MGM. Mr. Maxwell's announced intention was to prevent the passing of GB control to American hands.

The purchase by the ABP head at first seemed blocked by a clause in the agreement under which the Ostrers and Fox jointly owned Metropolis and Bradford Trust, holding company for the controlling shares of GB. The clause provides that neither can sell its interest to an outside party without the consent of the other. This point is still in question, with British legal opinion inclining to the view that interpretation of the clause allows the sale to become valid if consent is not unanimously refused by the GB directors within two months.

The secretary of Associated British Pictures on Tuesday issued a statement to stockholders giving details of the deal with the Ostrer brothers. The price paid for the Ostrers' 'B' shares is £325,000 ($1,625,000) cash and £300,000 in ABP five shilling ordinary shares, the statement said. ABP now is unable to carry out its promise to shareholders to allow them to subscribe for 1,800,000 ordinaries at bonus rates as these unissued shares are now earmarked for purposes of the deal, it was pointed out. It also was announced that the ABP profit for the half year was £150,000 more than last year. The statement confirmed the announcement that the first half of the Ostrer deal, under which Mr. Maxwell acquired the 'B' shares, has been completed.

Negotiations Off, Says Kent

A statement issued by GB following press announcements that control of GB had passed to Mr. Maxwell declared that "the chairman of Gaumont British wishes to make it perfectly clear that all such statements are incorrect. No such change has taken place in the voting position of the Metropolis company controlling GB and control remains as heretofore. The second part of the deal (under which Mr. Maxwell would acquire the Ostrers' 'A' shares) has not yet gone through and the Ostrers still hold the 5,100 'A' shares of Metropolis."

Before sailing Mr. Kent said that negotiations for the sale of the Fox interest in M and B to Mr. Maxwell would not be conducted at this time. The outlook is not clear, he added, and he could not predict what might take place in the next few months.

Still Owns 49 Per Cent

There is no indication that the position of the American company is weakened by the turn that events have taken, since it still owns 49 per cent of the M and B 'A' shares with the remaining 51 per cent, formerly owned by the Ostrers, about to pass to Mr. Maxwell, who has purchased 250,000 'B' shares of M and B with the transfer of the 'A' shares dependent only upon the legal entanglements surrounding the consent clause.

Mr. Kent's statement follows:

"After lengthy telephone conversations with our board of directors in New York and with Joseph M. Schenck, my associate, in Hollywood, I have been advised to terminate all negotiations for the sale of our interests in Metropolis and Bradford Trust to John Maxwell or Associated British Pictures Corporation.

"Upon finishing my work here I shall return to New York. We do not consider the present atmosphere conducive to well thought out negotiations, while the outlook for the future is not clear enough to indicate what our attitude during a period of time will be.

"We intend to make use of every resource at our command to protect legally the position we occupy. We have no intention of doing anything just for the sake of causing trouble, and we make this statement with a feeling of friendliness toward all concerned.

"Our determination to terminate negotiations is the result of strict business considerations."

Terminated, Says Maxwell

Following a conference with Isidore and Mark Ostrer, Mr. Maxwell also issued a statement in which he said:

"We have been negotiating for some time for the acquisition of the 20th Century-Fox holdings in Metropolis and Bradford Trust. This was not a necessary part of our agreement, but we regarded it as desirable if it could be achieved for a reasonable price.

"We came to the conclusion that the price and other conditions were more than we could reasonably agree to and discussions for the acquisition of the 20th Century-Fox interests have been terminated for the time being. The agreement with the Ostrers for the acquisition of the controlling interest in Metropolis and Bradford remains in full force in accordance with the previous announcement, and we are advised that it can be carried through completely without the acquisition of any other interests.

U. S. Unit To Continue

"Our discussions with Mr. Kent were carried out in a most friendly reciprocal atmosphere and terminated with mutual assurances of good will."

The Gaumont British selling organization in America will be maintained without alteration under John Maxwell, Jeffrey Bernerd said in London this week. Mr. Bernerd has resumed his duties as general manager of G. B. Distributors, the company which handles selling of GB product throughout the world, and David Ostrer has been returned to his old post in charge of foreign sales.

Any deals which may have been pending for the sale of British International product in the United States have been held up pending completion of the negotiations. It has been reported that the Maxwell interests are seriously considering formation of a new exchange system in the United States on a scale more extensive than GB's present system, for the purpose of handling BIP as well as GB product. At present GB maintains its own sales force, with headquarters in the 20th Century-Fox exchanges and utilizing the physical facilities of the Fox organization.

Under the originally proposed 20th Century-Fox MGM deal the GB sales force was to be maintained intact probably until the completion of sales for the 1936-37 product next spring. The ultimate plan had called for elimination of the force and addition of at least five GB pictures a year to the schedules of both the American companies.

GB Net Shows Slight Drop

Official Gaumont British financial statements for the year to March 31st show a net profit of £715,514, a decrease of £4,969 from the previous year. With the balance brought forward the total is £865,779 against £855,358. After deduction of income tax, debenture interest, reserves and preference dividend the balance is £347,021 against £360,265.

The directors recommended the placing of £200,000 in a special reserve fund and the carrying forward of £147,021 as against £150,265 last year. These details of the report were made known in London without official comment. There was no dividend recommendation. Last year seven per cent was paid.

It is probable that public holders of the ordinary shares will protest the allotment to reserve in place of a dividend. No indication was given as to when the full financial report will be ready, or the date of the annual meeting.

Comment Divided

Financial editors of the London daily newspapers made divided comment on the figures. The Mail and the News Chronicle praised the return to conservative finance, hinting that the Maxwell influence is working. The Telegraph commented, "The mystery of the recent negotiations for the purchase of the Ostrer holdings thickens. It appears that arrangements were made for the sale at 16 shillings of 10 shilling shares which receive no distribution. A clear explanation of the whole position is obviously desirable."

"Full accounts will be awaited for an explanation of the necessity of so large a transfer to a special reserve," the Morning Post said.

Asks for Adjustment

The Financial Times in a leading article again called for full accounts in view "of the urgency of the position which the preliminary figures suggest. Something more explicit than the reports and accounts issued in previous years is called for if shareholders are to appreciate the true state of the company's affairs." The article also said that an adjustment of asset values was overdue and hinted that the £200,000 special reserve was for this purpose. It concluded that the directors should carry out "a thorough purge of the accounts forthwith."

WILLIAM FOX'S COURT FIGHTS NEAR CLIMAX

Court Orders Family To Show Cause Nov. 10 Why $7,000,000 Should Not Go to Creditors

William Fox's multitudinous court troubles pressed upon him this week when New Jersey's courts ordered Mr. Fox's family to show cause on November 10th why their reputed $7,000,000 to $8,000,000 holdings should not be turned over to Mr. Fox's creditors in his own receivership case. At the same time Mr. Fox sought relief from the United States supreme court at Washington from a $235,082 penalty imposed on him in another matter by the federal courts in New York. The New Jersey court fight, waged for many weeks, now paves the way for turning over assets to the William Fox creditors, by force, from the All-Continent Corporation, on the grounds that "William Fox and the All-Continent Corporation are one and the same."

The legal fight to take away the All-Continent Corporation from the wife and daughters of Mr. Fox and to turn over its assets to the trustee in his bankruptcy action, took place in the New Jersey chancery court, and it was there that Vice-Chancellor Frank W. Sooy ordered the corporation's officers (Mrs. Eva Fox and the Misses Mona and Belle Fox) to show cause on November 10 why the All-Continent assets should not be turned over to Hiram Steelman, trustee in bankruptcy. Meanwhile, he granted to Mr. Steelman an ad interim injunction restraining them from disposing of the assets before that date.

The petition by Mr. Steelman made the request on the theory that the All-Continent assets, estimated between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000, belong to William Fox despite his story of turning them over to the members of his family through a trust agreement. Mr. Steelman also asked the return of various other gifts which Mr. Fox had made to his wife and daughters, including the estate at Woodmere, L. I.

Accused of Fraud Plan

Earlier in the week, Mr. Fox stood definitely accused of planning to defraud his creditors as far back as 1930. This was one of the claims in the petition filed by Mr. Steelman, the full text of which was made public for the first time this week.

"Complaint avers," the bill of complaint read, "that All-Continent Corporation (the nearly $7,000,000 collection of Fox assets which Mr. Fox claims he set aside as an irrevocable family trust) was formed and organized by William Fox for the express purpose of defrauding his creditors then existing as well as those to whom he might in the future become indebted.

"Complaint further avers that Fox and All-Continent are one and the same, and that the real object sought in forming All-Continent was to thwart creditors and to retain for himself and his family the full and unmolested enjoyment of his assets." The petition also alleged that all of the things done "by and between" Mr. Fox and All-Continent from 1930 onward "were part of a general scheme and plan" devised by Mr. Fox, and that his wife and daughters knew this all the time "and either permitted or assisted."

Recalled to Stand

Meanwhile, Mr. Fox was recalled to the witness stand in the receivership case and told to be prepared "to testify all day," after the proceedings had been halted by Mr. Fox's illness.

With the filing of further briefs by both Mr. Fox and the Capital Company in Washington this week, the way finally was paved for the hearing of arguments by the United States supreme court on Mr. Fox's appeal from an order of the United States district court in New York imposing a penalty of $235,082 for contempt, representing the unpaid balance of a judgment for $297,412, and $10,000, representing the fees and disbursements of attorneys for the Capital Company.

The court had consented to review the case last May, but was unable to do so before adjournment of the term and it was placed on the calendar for argument this fall.

Fine Imposed

The judgment was entered by confession in the district court in July, 1935, and a subpoena in supplementary proceedings was issued September 28 and served on Mr. Fox on a railroad train in Pennsylvania. He failed to appear in court and was charged with contempt, later making the defense that the court had no jurisdiction because the subpoena was served on him outside the district. The court refused to entertain the defense, and Mr. Fox appealed to the circuit court, which held that no final order had been entered and the appeal was premature.

Holding that the subpoena had been properly served and that Mr. Fox was in contempt, the court thereupon imposed a fine in the amount of the unpaid balance of the judgment and also assessed the $10,000 for costs and ordered Mr. Fox's arrest and imprisonment until the fine and fees had been paid or until he submitted to examination.

Mr. Fox again appealed and the case again was dismissed by the circuit court, whereupon he sought relief from the supreme court, which consented to review the question of jurisdiction but refused to consider the case itself, in the absence of a final order.

Comerford Plans Three

Plans of the Comerford Amusement Company at Wilkes-Barre, Pa., call for the construction next year in that city of three new theatres. W. E. Schmidt, assistant general manager, has moved his office staff from Scranton to Wilkes-Barre so that he can handle the details of the construction work.

Exhibitors of Four States in Sessions; Ohio Sets Dec. 1

Exhibitors throughout Pennsylvania's western counties and owners in the "tri-state" section of Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas met this week in annual convention, and at the same time Ohio's operators decided on December 1st and 2nd for the dates of their annual meeting, to be held at the Deshler Hotel, in Columbus.

The Connecticut Independent Motion Picture Theatre Owners have postponed to October 27 a membership vote on the proposed affiliation with Allied States Exhibitors, while the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the District of Columbia has again nominated A. Julian Brylawski as president for the ensuing year and named Sidney B. Lust as a candidate for vice-president, Dr. William P. Herbst, for treasurer and Nat. B. Browne for secretary.

The M.P.T.O. of Western Pennsylvania began a two-day convention at the Hotel Schenley in Pittsburgh on Monday with approximately 100 members present. The first day was devoted to routine business and the second day was featured by the address of Abram F. Myers, general counsel of Allied States. Edward Golden, general sales manager of Chesterfield and Invincible, outlined the company's plans for Allied members. Al Steffes, Minnesota Allied leader, urged independent exhibitors to contribute liberally to the national fund being raised by the Allied special defense committee which is fighting to divorce the distribution and exhibition fields. The convention concluded with the banquet which was held the last night.

The semi-annual convention of the M.P.T.O. of Arkansas, Tennessee and Mississippi was presided over by M. A. Lightman and over 150 delegates from some 10 states were present at the Chicsa Hotel in Memphis when the meeting was called to order. Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, discussed his organization's program of fair trade practices and other speakers included Fred Wehrenberg of St. Louis, L. C. Griffith of Oklahoma and Fred M. Jack, southern sales manager for Warners.

In the election of officers, Robert X. Williams, exhibitor and mayor of Oxford, Miss., was elected president to succeed Mr. Lightman, who, in turn, replaces Emma Cox, of Osceola, Ark., as chairman of the board. Other officers are: H. W. Evans, Marks, Miss., successor to Mr. Williams as secretary and treasurer; J. A. West of Louisville, vice-president for Mississippi; L. F. Havens of Blytheville, vice-president for Arkansas and W. F. Ruffin of Covington, vice-president for Tennessee.

Directors are: Arkansas—Harry Sanders of Little Rock, Cecil Cupp of Arkadelphia, J. F. Norman of England, M. S. McCord of Little Rock, H. D. Wharton of Warren, O. W. McCutchen of Blytheville and Emma Cox of Osceola. Mississippi—W. S. Tyson of Water Valley, W. H. Baker of Macon and W. A. Rush of Houston. Tennessee—Y. D. Moore of Memphis, Tom Ballas of Columbia and Cecil Vogel and Mr. Lightman of Memphis.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

Evidently convinced that a career in Hollywood under John Barrymore's auspices is all too uncertain, Miss Elaine Barrie (Elaine Jacobs) is back on Broadway planning to be a singer now. Elaine, so Leonard Lyons reports, is rehearsing a new song which Abner Silver has written expressly for the occasion, a little ditty entitled "It Wasn't for Publicity That I Loved Him!"

The anecdotes about the building of the Rockefeller fortune are many and varied, all of them having an indirect relation to the motion picture, through the Rockefeller investments in Radio City, which has given to the film world two theatres and office headquarters for many a motion picture corporation—Quigley Publications, RKO, Universal, March of Time, et al.

Added to the anecdotes already told about true Rockefeller conservatism is the story which goes back to the days when ol' John D. was a little fellow. A so-called "Indian doctor" visited the town with a cure-all, and, to get trade started from his corner soapbox, took out a bright new silver dollar which he announced he would auction off.

"How much am I bid" he asked, "for this bright silver dollar?"

But the crowd was cautious, silent, suspicious. No bids came.

"How much am I bid?" shouted the doctor.

"I bid a nickel," piped young Rockefeller.

"The dollar is your's, boy," advised the medicine man, "Hand up your nickel."

"Take it out of the dollar," piped John D. again, "an' gimme 95 cents change."

One of the forlorn, two-by-two, down-at-the-heel nightclub cafes niched in the West 52nd street sector of New York was discovered by Odd McIntyre to be using an old Hollywood dido to boost business over a dull period. It rigged up camera lights and motion picture paraphernalia at the entrance to create the impression it was on the brink of a celebrity stampede. And as a result that assorted "crashing" crowd of Park Avenue and Broadway flocked to the empty tables in the hope of achieving a pinch of space in the society pages, or a flash in a tabloid pictorial section. That's New York!

In Rene Clair's last United Artists production, the side-splitting "Ghost Goes West," one of the most hilarious sequences showed the bumptious American chain-store tycoon presiding at a dinner for the formal opening of the century-old Scottish castle which he had transplanted, stone by stone, plus family ghost, to his Florida estate by the sea.

The elaborate, not to say colossal, opening dinner is preceded by a band of Harlem colored jazz-hounds, parading in full kilted and sporraned Scots costume—and playing the very Scottish "Campbells Are Coming." All of which, at the time of its first showings, caused many Londoners to observe, "Marvelous how Rene Clair satirizes crude American civilization." BUT:—the United Press now offers this:

> Balmoral Castle, Scotland—King Edward VIII ordered the nine pipers at Balmoral Castle to play "The St. Louis Blues" today to entertain Mrs. Ernest Simpson and his other guests, on his vacation in Scotland, who were forced to spend most of the day indoors because of rain and high winds.

> The King is instructing the Scottish pipers in the mysteries of syncopation.

Seems that the old-world civilization is quite capable of satirizing itself.

Sidney Skolsky writes from Hollywood about the producer who was making an important musical film and who kept insisting to his chief song writer that he wanted another song like Cole Porter's "Night and Day." No matter what ditty the songwriter turned in—and he submitted dozens of tunes—the producer was not satisfied. "Give me a 'Night and Day,'" he stormed. "I want a 'Night and Day.'" The songwriter was quite perturbed, but he kept trying, interrupting his continuous night-and-day efforts only for a brief spell of relaxation when he invited the producer to his house for dinner. While they were eating, the song writer turned on his Victrola and played dance records. After the first record, he played a second, and then the producer jumped to his feet. "Great! That's what I want! What song was that?"

"That was 'Night and Day,'" answered the songsmith.

The idolized heroes of the momentous days of early American history have come to life on the motion picture screen in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "We, the People," a dramatic story of the turbulent times just before and right after the creation of the Constitution of the United States of America.

Accordingly, the studio researchers spent weeks on end looking for a facial likeness of George Washington for use in making up Claude King in that role. They checked dozens of replicas of various acknowledged paintings of the First President, but none suited Hollywood's idea of what George Washington should look like. They were about to give up when someone suggested to Producer John Cherok that he look at the portrait of Washington that decorates the United States Treasurer's one-dollar bills, and, sure enough, from his pocket he drew a dollar and engraved on it was the very face of Washington that he had been searching for so long and so far.

One farmer after another boasted how large his crops had been when Old Mother Nature was bountiful, and gradually these oral harvests assumed incredulous proportions. Finally, when Lincoln's patience with this bragging was exhausted, he cleared his throat and took the floor. "One year," he commenced, "my father's crop of hay was so large we had to store as much as we could outdoors, and what we couldn't get outdoors we put in the barn."

50 SCHOOLS AND 45 THEATRES WILL PICK PROGRAMS FOR 50,000 PUPILS

Committee "Not Censors" but Leave Theatres Off Recommended Lists in Newspapers If Deletions Are Refused

Convinced that attempts at motion picture surveillance for juveniles have achieved only partial success because the vigil has been limited to feature length productions, parents and faculty members representing more than 50 public and private schools in New York City have formed the Schools' Motion Picture Committee to select "appropriate" weekend programs in which newsreels and short subjects will be selected as well as the features. Forty-five theatres already are cooperating.

The committee, composed of Mrs. Alonzo Klaw, of the Friends' Seminary, chairman; Mrs. William Barclay Parsons, Jr., president of the Parents' League, vice-chairman, and Mrs. Irving Heyman, of the United Parents' Association, secretary, will be aided by an executive committee composed of Mrs. William T. Kennedy, Mrs. Russel Patterson and Mrs. William Platt.

According to Mrs. Heyman, the main purpose of the movement is to assure for junior and senior high school students a program which their parents can approve "from beginning to end," and in selecting the programs, the committee employs the set of standards used for several years by the Horace Mann School Bulletin. Pictures in which the following qualities predominate are considered unsuitable:

Glorification of war, mediocrity, oversentimentality, uncalled-for drinking, unnecessary brutality or killing, passionate love scenes, risque sex situations ("sex may be an incident, but not the whole theme"), undue sympathy for the immoral or criminal, and superficiality.

When the committee was founded a few months ago, only five theatres lent their support to the plan and, with the closing of schools for the summer, no others were solicited. This fall, however, the committee issued a report revealing that the theatres cooperating had increased to more than 45 and others were joining from week to week and that the lists of recommended programs had attained a popularity beyond the hopes of the compilers. It is claimed that some 50,000 students are being influenced in their picture choosing by the findings of the committee and that the total of students, parents and other family members comprise a potential weekend audience of approximately 200,000, all under the guidance of the Schools' Motion Picture Committee.

Censorship Not the Aim

According to Mrs. Heyman, censorship is not the aim behind the movement. "We do not want to act as censors of motion pictures nor do we want that impression to be spread about," she said. "We merely ask for permission to view certain programs so that we may request the manager to delete sections we feel harmful. We do not order this to be done and in no way do we bring pressure to bear to have it done. If there is a scene in a picture we object to and the manager leaves it in his program, we merely do not add his theatre to our recommended list."

SEVEN STANDARDS FOR GROUP'S ACTION

Seven standards set by the Schools Motion Picture Committee in determining whether a production is suitable entertainment for pupils are classified as follows:

ADVENTURE — Especially for the Elementary School and part of the Junior High School.

EDUCATION — Biographical, geographical and historical subjects.

ENTERTAINMENT—Clever acting, interesting plot and story and sincere portrayal.

HUMOR—Real wit, and certainly devoid of vulgarity.

INSPIRATION — Pictures for the young should so far as possible correspond to truth and the higher values of life.

ROMANCE—Not to be confused with sentimentality.

Several members of the organization are reviewing programs and passing on their fitness for young audiences. These members once a week attend screenings of all the newsreels at the Universal Newsreel headquarters. If there are any parts to which the reviewers object, the theatres in which their children are to see them are requested to omit these shots. "Up to now," said Mrs. Heyman, "we have requested only the deletion of six scenes from all the reels and most of these were shots of Dillinger's body."

The decisions of the committee of reviewers are made known to the public through the schools and especially through the columns of the amusement sections of the World-Telegram, Herald-Tribune and the Times, as well as in Cue, weekly amusement guide, the Horace Mann Bulletin and the Parents' League Bulletin. Several of the news and dramatic commentators on radio station WNYC also comment on the committee's findings.

Not every theatre visited by the reviewing committee is given a clean bill of health, and in most cases the managers have refused to alter their programs. In one of the most recent lists published in the newspapers, out of the 45 eligible theatres, only 14 theatres were recommended. Two of the 14 were newsreel theatres and only five were first-run Broadway houses. In most instances it was a short subject that failed to gain the stamp of approval for the house; the feature was entirely suitable.

In a recent letter to Frank Nugent, motion picture editor of the New York Times, part of which Mr. Nugent printed in his columns in discussing the organization, Mrs. Klaw said:

"The Schools Motion Picture Committee did not start out to recommend pictures for small children, but to prepare lists of weekend programs, suitable in their entirety, for boys and girls from 12 to 18. The word 'children,' so often applied to our recommendations, is misleading to parents and somewhat antagonizes the very young people we want to reach.

"We are trying to provide weekend entertainment for the growing boy and girl. As they are often more intelligently critical than adults, our choice must first of all provide amusement.

"In either newsreel or feature pictures we heartily support any presentation of a social problem, provided it is done truthfully and not merely for sensation. For example, we would certainly not delete any integral part of the films of the Spanish civil war, although we might ask to have a shot of a particularly gruesome and nauseating corpse omitted if it added nothing but one more horror to the truth of the pictures.

"But with the listing of these carefully previewed programs we stop. The individual parent must decide whether a certain picture will give nightmares to a delicate and highstrung 8-year-old, or whether another actress' performance may be too sophisticated for a carefully guarded daughter. But, at long last, the choice must be made by the boys and girls themselves. If they like our recommendations the lists will continue to be used and serve the purpose for which they are made."

Circuits Organize Own Saturday Morning "Kiddie Shows" for Children 6 to 10 Years; Confined to Short Subjects

Another series of programs, aimed at much younger audiences and not to be confused with those of the Schools' Motion Picture Committee, are those known as "Kiddie Shows." New York theatre managers are holding more and more of these shows, which usually are given on Saturday or holiday mornings before the regular run of the theatre starts and for audiences made up exclusively of boys and girls between the ages of 6 and 10. The Skouras Circuit is using this policy in 33 of its houses; RKO has 23 theatres in the metropolitan area showing exclusively to children on holiday mornings, and almost all of Loew's houses have followed suit.

The programs are made up of short product, including cartoon subjects, new and old, with a scattering of travelogues and sport reels. The theatre managers themselves usually select the programs, but in the cases of neighborhood theatres in some localities a group of parents and teachers meet once a week to review and select material for their children's amusement.

NEW FRENCH TRADE ASSOCIATION AVERTS ACTION BY GOVERNMENT

Each Vice-President of Industry Directs One of Four Branches in General Confederation Headed by Jules Demaria

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

The Confederation Generale de la Cinematographie, an organization representative of virtually all branches of the French industry, at last has been officially established.

Internally conceived, and in various stages of formation for a long period, the Confederation was none the less strongly urged by the French Government in unofficial fashion. It amounts, in effect, to a reorganization of the industry.

The most important aspect is that the organization will serve to scotch definitely the threats of the present Government to nationalize the industry, which in effect had declared, "If you don't organize your industry, we will do it for you."

Entire Industry Represented

The four chief branches of the industry, technical, producing, distributing and exhibiting, are represented in the Confederation, which is headed by Jules Demaria, owner of a large equipment company and a veteran of the French industry.

Under the executive scheme devised, a managing committee has been named, including four representatives of each of the associations which have joined the major organization. The board of the Confederation includes the following members: M. Demaria, president and chairman; M. Chollat, technical; Felix Gandera, production; George Lourau, distribution; Raymond Lussiez, exhibition, vice-presidents; Leopold Maurice, technician, treasurer. Each of the vice-presidents is the president of the association representative of his branch.

Delac Group Not Included

Not included in the Confederation is the Chambre Syndicale, headed by Charles Delac, which was formed a year ago. The majority of its members have gone over to the new organization. The basic principle of the Delac group is the "defense of the French film against foreign pictures."

Now, however, with official recognition of the new organization as the only trade group of the industry, it is expected that the influence formerly exercised by the Delac organization will be at an end, and that the unit eventually will be dissolved.

Mickey Mouse European Merchandise 20 Millions

The latest entrant into the ranks of Big Business in Europe is Mickey Mouse, where merchandise employing his name or likeness now has an annual gross sale of $20,000,000, according to George Kamen, who handles the commercial activities and publicity abroad for Walt Disney-Mickey Mouse, Ltd., and who returned to New York from his London headquarters this week en route to Hollywood for conferences with Mr. Disney.

The Mickey Mouse foreign merchandise business now has 285 licensees operating in 14 European countries, all supervised by either the London headquarters or the Paris office. Merchandise using the Mickey Mouse brand varies from breakfast foods and hot water bottles to soap and toothbrushes. In addition, the London office publishes 2,000,000 copies of Mickey Mouse books and magazines in England, France and Italy, with circulations of 500,000 weekly in each country.

"Business is fine," said Mr. Kamen, "and if we could get our money out of Central Europe it would be unsurpassed."

National Decency Legion Classifies Seven New Pictures

Of seven new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency during the past week, five were noted as unobjectionable for general patronage, one as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The new films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "California Mail," "Code of the Range," "15 Maiden Lane," "Polo Joe," "Tundra." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "The Man I Marry." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "The Man Who Lived Again."

Picketing by Musicians Halted in Philadelphia

At the request of Mayor Wilson, of Philadelphia, Local 77, musicians union, has discontinued picketing of downtown theatres for one week while the mayor attempts to work out a settlement between the union and theatres in the musicians' fight for $10 a day minimum.

Philadelphia exhibitors were troubled also by other unions, members of the Billposters' Union having started picketing independent film houses in an effort to get window card distribution rights.

New Buying Combination Is Started in Wisconsin

Approximately 15 theatres, all members of the Independent Theatres Protective Association in Milwaukee, have organized a new buying combine. Current product will be bought through a committee of three consisting of E. F. Maertz, Ross Baldwin and R. A. Tesch. It is expected that other houses which have not as yet brought their product for this season will join.

Norma Shearer, stricken with pneumonia last week, was reported by physicians on Wednesday to be winning her fight against the malady which brought death to her husband, Irving Thalberg, on September 14th.

Giannini Lauds New Standards

Speaking at a Hotel Lombardy luncheon of the Association of Foreign Press Correspondents in New York this week, Dr. A. H. Giannini, president and chairman of the board of United Artists, praised American producers for the improvement in their standards and emphasized the willingness of the public at large to accept quality in its motion pictures regardless of the point of origin.

"I hear everywhere today of foreign entanglements," he said. "I advocate friendly and sympathetic cooperation with foreign nations and I do not believe in narrow nationalism. The recent tercentenary of Harvard University where scholars and savants from all over the world met to discuss progress in the sciences and in the humanities and the conference of the British scientists at Blackpool illustrate what I mean.

"Just as these two meetings contributed much, so does the tripartite agreement between England, France and the United States on the gold standard. An established currency cements commercial relations and sound commercial relations make for universal peace.

"Motion pictures are playing their part in this movement. When I was in London last I heard much about domination by the American film and a great deal about the kind of American films being sent to all parts of the world. It was also said in London that the nation reaching dominance in film production also would dominate the world.

"However, I know that today producers in this country are much more careful than in years past, that they are actually endeavoring to deliver a finished and wholesome product."

Other members of the industry who attended the luncheon included Paulette Goddard, Walter Huston, Rouben Mamoulian, William Wyler and Nino Martini.

Injunction Issued Against Harriscolor

Alleging the transfer of assets from Harriscolor Films, Inc., to Newdeal Syndicate, Inc., on March 25, 1933, to have been fraudulent, H. Albert Young, Wilmington attorney, and receiver for the former company, caused to be issued by Chancellor Josiah O. Wolcott in Chancery court in Wilmington this week an order restraining Newdeal Syndicate from disposing of or distributing assets until the settlement of the injunction action.

Mr. Wolcott's order directs Newdeal, its officers and directors, to appear in court November 13 and show cause why a permanent injunction should not be issued restraining them from disposing of the assets, and why the assets should not be declared a part of the Harriscolor receivership estate.

COST BASIS FOR BRITISH QUOTA PROPOSED TO GOVERNMENT GROUP

Maxwell Calls Obligation of 15 to 18 Features a Mistake; Attacks Financing Methods for British Production

Eckman Clashes with Committee Member on Showing of "Quickies"; Rowson Proposes Cost Clause in Quota

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Modification of the Quota Law to place it upon a cost basis, with the quota for the exhibitors smaller than for distributors, is proposed in the second volume of the "Minutes of Evidence taken before the Department Committee on Cinematograph Films."

The 82-page volume of 110,000 words, covering the proceedings of the fifth to eighth days of the committee's sittings, provides, with the 96-page first volume, a complete record of all the statements presented by trade bodies and of the oral examination of these groups' representatives and of other witnesses.

The Minutes of Appointment of the Committee stated that it should "consider the position of British films, having in mind the approaching expiring of the Cinematograph Films Act, 1927, and advise whether any, and if so what, measures are still required in the public interest to promote the production, renting and exhibition of such films."

The members are: Lord Moyne, chairman; A. C. Cameron, M. C.; Joseph Stanley Holmes, M. P.; J. J. Mallon; the Hon. Eleanor Plumer; Lt. Col. Sir Arnold Wilson, K. C. I. E., C. S. I., C. M. G., D. S. O., M. P.

The committee has completed the taking of evidence and on the facts published in the two Bluebooks is preparing its report to the Board of Trade, the Government department responsible for administration of the Films Act. It is understood that this report will be presented before the end of the year.

The KRS Case

Most important of the features of the present Minutes are the memoranda of the Kinematograph Renters Society, with its supporting evidence, and the Report of the Cinematograph Films Act Advisory Committee. This body, a statutory committee appointed under the Act, with a part-trade, part-public membership, made a confidential report to the Board of Trade late last year. The present Moyne Committee was appointed to make further investigations and the Advisory Committee's report was forwarded to it, as the starting point of its inquiry. It is now published for the first time.

The KRS submitted two memoranda. The first, from the Council of the Society, made a brief statement of the principles upon which it was suggested an equitable quota of British films should be based. The second, presented by John Maxwell on behalf of the members of the Society, elaborated this case, giving reasons for an amended quota and specific facts in criticism of the present scale.

BRITISH ORGANIZE THEIR OWN "ACADEMY"

With the intention that it shall perform in the British industry some of the functions cared for in America by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the British Institute of Cinematography has been formed with Lt. Col. J. T. C. Moore-Brabazon, M.P., as chairman of council and among its founder governors; Irving Asher, Michael Balcon, John Corfield, Paul Czinner, Basil Dean, the Marquis of Ely, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Julius Hagen, Leslie Howard, Robert T. Kane, Alexander Korda, Lothar Mendes, Walter Mycroft, Erich Pommer, Joe Rock, Victor Saville, Max Schach, S. W. Smith, Paul Soskin, Herbert Wilcox, and Ludovico Toeplitz de Grand Ry.

Seton Margrave, film critic of the Daily Mail, is chairman of the Awards Committe, and W. E. Chadwick is honorary secretary. Murray Silverston is an honorary member.

The chief function of the Institute will be to make annual awards of Gold Medals and other trophies for the best British film of the year, and for achievements in direction, art direction, photography, sound-recording and editing. There will also be two "best performance" awards, for man and woman stars.

The first memorandum asserted:

"The obligation put upon distributors of foreign films. . . . implying as it does the production of as many as 15 or 18 feature pictures in one year, is an obligation so heavy as to be practically impossible of effective performance. . . .

"An obligation which calls upon distributors to produce five or six feature pictures. . . . would more effectively serve the desired purpose of securing a reasonable supply of worthwhile British pictures, provided always it is accompanied by safeguards that this modified number of pictures are produced under conditions as to cost and otherwise that will ensure their being effective and creditable British pictures."

This statement concluded by saying that the KRS Council has been "greatly influenced by the definite and emphatic assurances from members representing foreign interests that, if the obligation upon them is so reduced as to make it really workable, they will whole-heartedly comply with the stipulations as to cost and otherwise necessary to insure the production of worthwhile British films."

Blames Quota Films' Quality

The memorandum presented by Mr. Maxwell said, in chief:

"It is practically impossible for any of these (American) agencies to undertake the making of such a number (15 to 18) of pictures a year, if made on a proper standard of quality and cost. . . . My own company has tried to increase the number of pictures beyond twenty or so, but has found it impossible to get the talent and skilled personnel.

"The poor quality of pictures acquired for quota has done a great deal of harm to the standing and prestige of British pictures.

"If the number of pictures required for quota remains at the present figure or is increased, and if it were possible that these should all be good quality marketable pictures, the results on the fortunes of the native British producers would be serious, owing to the greatly increased quantity of pictures they would find competing with them.

"Any increase of quota would in all probability be an inducement to a rush of mushroom companies and prospectuses, as happened when the Act was first passed, and also probably followed by a sequence of bankruptcies and liquidations as happened before."

Points in Mr. Maxwell's verbal evidence, in examination by the Committee, are considered later.

Advisory Committee Suggestions

The Report to the Rt. Hon. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, from the Cinematograph Films Act Advisory Committee, had these chief points:

The booking restrictions section of the Act (imposing a six months booking limit and prohibiting blind booking) should be retained, with the addition of the requirement that on application for the registration of any film a statutory declaration should be made that it had not been booked in contravention of the Act (that is, had not been booked blind). After three convictions for breach of this undertaking, the license of a distributor or exhibitor to be liable to forfeiture.

All British films registered for distributors' quota to cost not less than £2 a foot, excluding the cost of story, music, author's fee and director's fee. A distributor to be granted a reduction in quota footage obligation in proportion to the cost of films above the minimum price scale, up to a maximum of £4 a foot. (A film costing £4 a foot would cover the same quota obligation as two films at £2 a foot). A special committee to admit for quota any films, costing less than £2 a foot, of "outstanding merit."

Quota to be limited to features only.

Exhibitors' quota to be 15 per cent against distributors' quota of 20 per cent.

Abolition of clause demanding a British scenario writer.

Various reservations to these conclusions were expressed by members of the Committee. Mr. Maxwell (producer-exhibitor) suggested that greater latitude be given to foreign companies to import and pay for foreign stars, directors, and so on. (The present Act stipulates 75 per cent of salary costs to British subjects). A. B. King (exhibitor) urged an exhibitors' quota of 10 per cent. C. P. Metcalfe (exhibitor) urged a quality test for films in place of a minimum cost clause. F. W. Baker (producer) asked that all British films should rank for exhibitor quota and that the cost clause should only govern registration for distributors' quota. It is probable that the number and diversity of these "reservations" were responsible for the Board of Trade deciding on further investigation by the present Departmental Committee.

Plea for Smaller Quota

Mr. Maxwell, at the outset of his evidence, was asked why United Artists was able to handle twice the number of British films demanded by the Act, while other companies found difficulty in complying with the quota. He replied that United was a distributing and not a producing company and that it had a relatively small American output. Other companies had fifty pictures of their own to handle, he said, and they could not find or organize the creative talent necessary for making British pictures of a comparable scale. Alexander Korda, said Mr. Maxwell, had announced ten pictures as a program but had made from three to five because, with all his prestige and unlimited financial resources, he came up against the problem of personnel.

Questioned about the alleged breakdown of the booking restriction clauses of the Act, Mr. Maxwell said that such evasion as there had been was such as was inevitable under any law. Asked if he thought the clauses should come out he said : "No, I think they are most valuable clauses. If anything can be done to strengthen them, let it be done." The "gentlemen's agreements" on advance bookings which have been alleged to exist on a large scale he called "a trifling thing which will always exist in any business."

Calls Protection Unnecessary

Asked if it were possible to contemplate a state of affairs in which no protection would be necessary for British films, Mr. Maxwell made the striking reply:

"I do not think we need it today. I think British production is well enough set to go right ahead. We have the money, we have the studios and we are gradually creating the personnel. . . . I think as a producer I can maintain myself and sell my pictures on their merits, and that with the special appeal British pictures have for British audiences we can hold our own even in competition with the American picture that has cost five times mine."

At the conclusion of Mr. Maxwell's evidence, when production costs and the effects of labor demands were being discussed, Mr. Maxwell made an outspoken attack on the present methods of financing British production.

"These foreign producers who have come over here get millions from insurance companies to chuck about," he said, "and they do chuck it about, to make sure of it while it lasts and before the inevitable bankruptcy intervenes. . . . In a year or two, when insurance companies learn sense, we shall be able to do better and get the business stablized on a basis of permanency."

Asked if more than one insurance company was involved, Mr. Maxwell said:

"Yes. Groups of underwriters are doing it. They are not lending money directly on pictures. They are issuing Guarantee Policies to banks who give overdrafts and that brings it within the ostensible purpose of insurance underwriting. . . . The bank takes a mortgage charge on the picture and collects its proceeds and when in a year or two the loss (as it usually is) is ascertained, the underwriters pay up the shortage to the bank."

MARY GARDEN LEAVES OPERA FOR PICTURES

Mary Garden, long one of the more prominent grand opera stars, said in Paris this week that she was retiring from that field and would launch "an entirely new career" in motion pictures. She will leave France shortly for Hollywood.

Last December, Miss Garden signed a contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to advise and assist in production of pictures having musical sequences. She has recently been travelling in Europe in connection with this work.

Remarking that "this is a new form of inflation to me," Sir Arnold Wilson asked Mr. Maxwell whether "the average sum of 2:6d per week which the working man is induced to pay to industrial insurance companies actually helps to debauch your industry?"

To this Mr. Maxwell said: "I might go further and say that the penny and twopence premium of the industrial worker may go, indirectly of course, in gambling in making films."

Compares Investments

The other outstanding point in the Maxwell evidence was his comment on the attitude of his own company and Gaumont-British in dissenting from the policy of the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries. It had been asserted by Norman Loudon in evidence that ABP and GB represented about one-seventh of the investment represented in the FBI group.

"In regard to money permanently invested in production the two dissentient companies have at least double the whole of the other FBI companies put together," said Mr. Maxwell.

The importance of this statement is that the FBI, in championing a much more stringent Act, have appeared as the representative body of British producers.

American Companies Questioned

Interrupting the course of Mr. Maxwell's evidence there were exchanges which on one or two occasions threatened to become heated between members of the Committee and other representatives on the KRS delegation, which consisted of D. E. Griffiths of First National (President) Sam Eckman, Jr., of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and J. C. Graham of Paramount, with Frank Hill, the secretary, also present.

One of the difficult moments came when Mr. Eckman was being questioned by Sir Arnold Wilson. The following passages arose:

Sir Arnold: What was your purpose in making, or causing to be made, or procuring, definitely and admittedly inferior British films for the purposes of quota?

Mr. Eckman: I do not admit that. We have released British films that have cost as much as £50,000. . . .

Question: Have you not been a leading exponent of the quota quickie?

Answer: I do not think so.

Question: It has been suggested in evidence here that you hoped to discredit British production by the extended use of the British quickie?

Answer: Well, I think if I knew who made those statements the law of the land would protect me in that respect.

Sir Arnold: It has been explained in evidence before us and therefore it is privileged.

Mr. Maxwell: But was Mr. Eckman's name mentioned?

The Chairman: Perhaps Mr. Echman misunderstood.

Sir Arnold: I am not referring to a particular individual but to American renters generally. I asked you as representing American renters.

Mr. Eckman: I see.

"Misuse" of British Films

Later Mr. Eckman was questioned about the misuse of British films in West End theatres controlled by American companies. Sir Arnold Wilson was still the questioner in the following passages.

Question: It has been suggested to us that the British quota pictures have frequently been shown at times when the theatre is being cleaned and at other moments calculated to throw discredit on the films?

Answer: As far as the house we own is concerned that has not been the case.

Question: You definitely deny the validity of evidence to that effect?

Answer: That we have played films at hours when the theatre was closed? I definitely deny that.

Question: The rumor has never reached your ears?

Answer: Yes, just as I have heard we purposely and maliciously play bad British films at the Empire to discredit British films generally. I have made repeated efforts to get the best British films available and have offered more money than most West End cinemas can pay, but most good British films are controlled by companies that have their own West End cinemas.

Maxwell Intervenes

Quoting the KRS memorandum reference to the promise of American companies to "comply whole-heartedly" with reduced quota demands, Sir Arnold asked:

Question: You are good enough to make a promise that you will obey the law if it is modified to suit you?

Answer: Whatever the law is, it will quite naturally be obeyed.

Question: It is rather a pity you should put in your evidence that if the obligation is reduced you will try to comply with the law?

Mr. Maxwell: That was not the intention. I myself prepared the resolution. . . . It is the first time the Americans have been able to say what they believe they really can do and will do in providing a supply of worthwhile British pictures. They have never been asked before.

Sir Arnold: If the Act is not modified you will sit back?

Mr. Maxwell: Personally I will not blame them if they do, to be frank with you.

Mr. Eckman made it plain in his evidence that American companies favored a quota plan under which there would be a minimum cost per foot, with a provision that if two or three times that amount were spent the distributor should be given credit in his quota obligations.

Commenting, Mr. Maxwell made it clear that the KRS proposal would "carry out in a different way the Advisory Committee's report."

Questioned whether there had not been abuse and lack of goodwill in working the present Act, Mr. Maxwell said, "I do not think they (the Americans) have had any alternative in recent years. I still say a physically impossible burden was put upon them."

Asked if he could suggest any further safeguard Mr. Maxwell said: "I cannot think of anything but cost." It was a case, he said, of "Tempt the donkey with a carrot. 'If you are good and make expensive pictures, we will allow you to make less pictures.'"

Quality Test Discussed

An interesting feature of the evidence of G. R. Hall Caine, representing the Advisory Committee was a discussion of the respective values of a cost clause or a quality clause as a means of obtaining good British films. The following were questions and answers:

J. S. Holmes: Do you think it is a feasible thing to have a Government department which would look after not merely moral and ethical standards but quality as well?

Answer: Yes, I do.

Question: And if that were adopted you think all this difficulty would disappear?

Answer: I think that would be the better way to do it.

Another method by which a quality clause might be operated was suggested in a supplementary memorandum from the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, which proposed a committee of five composed of a producer, a distributor, two exhibitors and an independent chairman.

Cinema Industry Control Board

During the examination of Simon Rowson by the Committee there was further reference to the possibility of setting up a semi-official Control Board for the industry. This proposal was recorded in the first volume of Minutes. In the second volume it appears in more than one place and appears to have the particular approval of Sir Arnold Wilson, who questioned Mr. Rowson on the point.

Question: Do you think it would be possible in practice for the Board of Trade to act as the arbiter and the interpreter of an Act of Parliament giving effect to your ideas? Would it not be necessary to establish a cinema industry control board in some form to take over responsibility both on behalf of the Government and the industry at large?

Answer: I think it is a very interesting suggestion.

Question: You appreciate that the general policy of the Government for many years has been to endeavor to cooperate with industry by means of boards rather than to exercise executive authority when large commercial interests are involved. We have parallels in the Sugar Reorganization Committee, the Milk Marketing Board, the Import Duties Advisory Board, the Electricity Commissioners.

Answer: I think that is so and that was one of the objects which were aimed at in America by the NRA. An actual code was drawn up for the film industry which had to be cancelled when the NRA went by the board but the code was already in existence and there would have been a code authority.

[Later it was stated that the Committee would be provided with copies of Motion Picture Industry Study Work Materials, No. 34.]

Mr. Rowson advocated a cost clause, a gradual rise in distributors' quota from 15 per cent (an immediate reduction of the present quota) to 25 per cent by 2½% each year, a similar treatment of exhibitors' quota, more even release of British films, and provision for exemption from quota obligations of foreign distributors who invested in, and gave an American release to, British pictures.

Expanding this last suggestion, Mr. Rowson in his written statement said: "The intention is to encourage by declaration in an Act of Parliament the reciprocity scheme between the British and American industries which, more than any other arrangement that has been devised, would stabilize and encourage the industry in this country." He suggested that the Board of Trade should have authority to suspend the quota in favor of any country or any individual company which actively cooperated with British production.

INDUSTRY DINNER FOR RICHARDSON SATURDAY

Equipment manufacturers, motion picture executives, projectionists and theatre owners of the East, on Saturday evening, will attend the testimonial midnight dinner and dance to be given by the American Projectionist Society to Frank H. Richardson, writer on technological subjects in Motion Picture Herald, on the occasion of Mr. Richardson's 30*th anniversary in the projection field.*

John A. May, controller of the Schine circuit, with headquarters at Gloversville, N. Y., will be among the guest speakers.

The committees and their chairmen are: Arrangements, Alfred R. T. Bishop; past presidents, Joseph D. Basson; S.M.P.E., Dr. A. N. Goldsmith; exhibitors, George Skouras; theatre equipment executives, Will C. Smith; entertainment, M. D. O'Brien; honorary members, George C. Edwards; I.A.T.S.E., George S. Browne; publicity, P. A. McGuire; radio executives, Louis K. Sidney; technical, Harry Rubin; theatrical managers, Al Rosen; finance, Charles Horstman; 10*th District, I.A.T.S.E., Glenn H. Humphrey; metropolitan I.A., Thomas Murtha; southern I.A., Frank Sutton; Pioneer Projectionists' Association, Ben Norton; Canadian, William C. Covert; eastern I.A., Arthur Martens; New Jersey, Louis Kaufman; west coast, Sidney Burton; reception, Frank McMahon.*

Booking Relief Proposed

Another original suggestion by Mr. Rowson was the need of an amendment of the Act to legalize exhibitor-distribution schemes in which an essential part was an agreement on the part of exhibitors to book product.

Referring as it does to unmade films, such an agreement is illegal under the existing booking restriction clauses of the Act. On the necessity of some relief, Mr. Rowson said: "It would merely extend to a combination of exhibitors the same practice as is now carried out by producer-exhibitor organizations."

Questioned by Miss Plumer on this point Mr. Rowson said:

"I do not think there would be any monopoly. In America the biggest stimulus to production took place when this scheme was adopted in 1921-22 (First National)."

Miss Plumer: Do you envisage counter action on the part of renters?

Answer: I should think they would hesitate to come out in open hostility to a policy which is expressly sanctioned by law.

Wing Commander W. E. Wynn presented a suggestion for assisting British films by a series of rebates on a new tax on all films of three shillings a foot, the rebates being governed by such diverse factors, among others, as the percentage of British talent employed and, in the case of a foreign film, by the number of British films bought in its country of origin.

Chief interest in Commander Wynn's communication may seem to lie in his comment that "rumors have recently been current that the British government desires to end the present entente between Hollywood and British studios" and that America would inevitably "begin to think of measures of retaliation" against any punitive revision of the Films Act.

Evidence, either written or oral, was brought before the Committee by the Trade Union Congress General Council, the National Association of Theatrical Employees, the Electrical Trade Union and by various representatives of specialized film interests, but for the most part these interests supported one or other of the policies already described.

Odeon Buys the Alhambra

Oscar Deutsch of Odeon Theatres, Ltd., made his most spectacular purchase by acquiring from Sir Oswald Stoll the Alhambra, Leicester Square, with the intention of razing the building and erecting on the site a 2,500 seater comparing in every detail with the finest existing buildings in the West End.

Mr. Deutsch, founder of the Odeon circuit, aiming at an early total of 200 theatres previously confined his activities to provincial cities and to London neighborhoods. His acquirement of a West End key house emphasizes the importance of the Odeon as a major group ranking with the G-B and ABC circuits.

Concurrently it was announced by Murray Silverstone that the Odeon would play United Artists product on a long run basis and that the opening attraction, about the time of the Coronation next year, would be the London Films "I Claudius," now in production at Denham with Charles Laughton.

The Odeon investment will probably total £800,000-£900,000 before the building is completed.

APPH Profit Increased

Associated Provincial Picture Houses, Ltd., a Gaumont-British subsidiary, made a profit of £115,236 ($576,000) in the past year, an increase of £12,360 over the previous year. A final dividend of 4 per cent is to be paid on the ordinary shares, making the year's distribution 6 per cent. The general reserve is credited with £15,000, bringing it to £65,000. An increase in mortgages by £181,400 (making a total of £424,000) is ascribed to the exercise of options to acquire freehold reversions in the Regent, Portsmouth, and the Plaza, Southsea, and to acquire control of a company which had obtained an important site close to two of the company's theatres. Cash in hand at £47,231 shows an increase of £33,760.

Theatres Still Refuse to Pay New York Tax

Taxation measures in the industry this week centered around New York City, where theatres in New Jersey being served from Manhattan exchanges are still refusing to pay the sales tax required by the municipal government. Other legislative measures appeared in Pennsylvania, Texas, South Carolina and northern New York.

After many months of paying under protest, most of the northern New Jersey theatres being served from New York exchanges are again refusing to pay the sales tax ordered for the city's emergency relief measures. Most of the distributors are continuing to send out bills to the theatres but the operators are ignoring them. The New York supreme court recently ruled that the exhibitors did not have to pay the tax, but the city has appealed the case to the court of appeals at Albany. However, the case can not come up for at least another month because of the crowded court calendar. More than $3,000,000 is estimated to be involved in the attempt to apply the tax to film rentals up to this time.

Sunday shows in Columbia, S. C., will be tested in the courts as a result of the selling of a ticket to a director of the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Columbia by F. S. Faulkenburg, theatre manager. The chamber sponsored the Sunday performance in order to bring about a test case.

In Anson, Texas, Sunday films have been legalized by a vote of 183 to 52. A special election was called to settle the question.

The courts at Uniontown, Pa., have turned down the application for a vote on Sunday shows next month for the cities of Connellsville, Brownsville and Uniontown. The court pointed out that the question can come up before the voters only once in five years, and the three towns voted last year.

Jackson D. Wheat, in Ellicott City, Md., has been convicted by a jury of operating on Sunday in violation of a law passed in 1723. He was fined $60, plus $30 court costs by the circuit court.

In Buffalo, N. Y., the city council has ordered the police department to enforce the ordinance prohibiting admission of more persons than there are seats in theatres. An appeal is indicated.

PARAMOUNT PLANNING ZUKOR SILVER JUBILEE

Plans for a Paramount International Silver Jubilee celebration for Adolph Zukor in commemoration of the founder of the company's 25 years of service to the motion picture industry were announced last weekend at a meeting of Paramount district and division managers at St. Louis by Neil Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales. The celebration will begin January 7, Mr. Zukor's birthday, and continue for four months.

U.S. Protesting Italian Curb upon Cash Withdrawal

The State Department in Washington this week, acting on the protest of major motion picture companies, has instructed Ambassador Phillips at Rome to act on behalf of the American motion picture industry in opposing the Italian government's proposed legislation which would restrict the amount of money American companies could withdraw from Italy, and direct the application of the balance to film production in Italy.

The Italian government has been drawing up plans for regulations of this nature since last August with the object of insuring support of the new $10,000,000 studio project near Rome, which will be opened next June. While American companies have been aware of the trend of proposed regulations in Italy, only recently have these taken definite shape to warrant a formal protest. It is understood that the Italian authorities now favor a proposal limiting to 8,000,000 lire annually the amount of motion picture revenue which could be removed from the country by American companies. This amounts to merely 25 per cent of the revenue derived from the Italian market by these companies. The remaining 75 per cent would be impounded in Italy with restrictions on its use which would make it nearly obligatory to apply the monies to production at the new Italian studio. American companies, in their protest to the State Department, described the effect of the proposed regulations as "unthinkable."

Last summer Carlo Roncoroni, head of the Italian government's motion picture division, visited New York and Hollywood in an effort to obtain voluntary agreements with American producers to use the new studio near Rome and the envoy intimated on several occasions during his visit that if American producers failed to "cooperate" in the new studio venture changes in Italy's regulations governing the withdrawal of revenue from the country might be expected.

Paramount Sales Forces Meet In St. Louis

Headed by Neil F. Agnew, vice-president in charge of sales, home office and divisional sales executives of Paramount Pictures met in St. Louis last weekend for a two-day sales convention at the Coronado Hotel.

In a message to the gathering, Barney Balaban, president, said:

"The progress made by Paramount the past three and a half months is substantial and most encouraging. Our company has definitely emerged from the conditions which so long clouded our horizon.

"I am confident that we are well on our way toward the complete realization of our hope and aspiration—the re-establishment of our unquestioned leadership and the self-confidence which goes with it.

"Nothing has contributed so much to our progress as the quality of product which our studio is turning out under the able direction of Adolph Zukor. To his experience and judgment, coupled with the reassurance which his leadership has inspired throughout the Paramount lot, can be attributed the success of such pictures as 'The General Died at Dawn,' 'The Texas Rangers,' 'Valiant Is the Word for Carrie' and 'The Big Broadcast of 1937.'

"With such productions as 'Champagne Waltz,' 'The Plainsman,' 'Maid of Salem' and 'Go West, Young Man,' I am confident we will still further strengthen our position.

"To the distribution department I extend my greetings. We in the home office know that you will continue your good work, to the end that the record of achievement of our entire organization may be complete."

Interlude

Comedy Romance with Music

A different kind of story has been provided for Grace Moore for her fourth appearance under Columbia's banner. While she will be given adequate opportunity to demonstrate her accomplished vocal ability, the light dramatic quality of the motivating love interest story will seek further to permit her to exhibit her flair for comedy. In it she is presented as an operatic diva, a rather vain personage, who enjoys the sham attentions of three false flatterers. Her only real affection is toward an old maestro who made her career possible. To get into America to participate in a music festival to repay her teacher for all he has done for her, passport difficulties are remedied when she marries a temperamental American artist in Mexico. Comedy complications upon the unexpected arrival of her husband in New York are followed by the music festival. Both are instrumental in awakening the vain opportunist to an appreciation of the real things in life.

The original story is by Cedric Worth. It was adapted by Robert Riskin, who has been a collaborator with Frank Capra in several of that director's most notable pictures. Also worthy of note from a showmanship point of view is the fact that Riskin herewith is given his first directorial opportunity in cooperation with Harry Lachman.

Special music which Miss Moore will sing was prepared by Jerome Kern and Dorothy Fields. Operatic and classic portions of the star's music have been selected from the works of Shubert and Puccini.

With Cary Grant featured opposite Miss Moore, supporting principals listed are Aline MacMahon, Henry Stephenson, Catherine Doucet, Edgar Kennedy, Gerald Oliver Smith and Barnett Parker.

Mad Holiday

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Comedy-Mystery-Drama

The idea behind this production, an angle that quickly cues exploitation, is to give those who take their mystery films with a grain of salt exactly what they are looking for. While it promises plenty that is legitimate to satisfy the confirmed mystery addicts, it is being aimed directly at the laugh hunters who prefer to absorb their blood-chilling thrillers with their tongues in their cheeks.

It's all about a moving picture player, star of scores of baffling "who done its," who becomes bored with his job and decides to take a holiday. The studio, from executive to publicity department, goes wild as it sees its top box office personality walking out. Meantime the star, who has solved dozens of baffling mysteries in pictures, is whirled into a double dyed in the wool actual mystery murder drama which takes the extra twist of having the super screen sleuth become a suspect. To the tune of much ludicrous carrying on, in which the standby mystery elements are gayly ridiculed, the crime is solved. While all the comedy-drama is going on, there is also a romantic twist. In that the hero falls for a girl and does not learn until the climax that she, rather than a man, is the author of all the stories in which he has appeared on the screen.

Edmund Lowe is the picture star sleuth. Elissa Landi, returning to the screen after a long absence, is the girl. Edmund Gwenn, now prominent in "Anthony Adverse," has an important role, and comedy content is taken care of by Zasu Pitts, Ted Healy and Edgar Kennedy. Other players to be seen are Walter Kingsford, Herbert Rawlinson, Raymond Hatton, Rafaela Ottiano, Harlan Briggs and Gustav von Seyffertitz.

The original story by Joseph Santley was adapted by Florence Ryerson and Edgar Allan Woolf. George B. Seitz, maker of "The Last of the Mohicans," is director.

Hideaway Girl

(Paramount)

Comedy

Story content, substantiating production detail, the music and the personalities featured are being depended upon by the makers of this film to give exhibitors a running start in exploitation. The motivation is farce comedy romance, embellished with equally farcical crook mystery complications. A personable young man, rescuing an attractive young lady from an embarrassing situation, is stunned to hear her "introduce" him to his fiancee as married. With that situation serving as a starter, enter groups of play boy and girl friends of the surprised unwed benedict, hordes of police searching for stolen jewels and gangs of crooks determined to recover their loot, to complicate and give unique twists to anything that might resemble sense or reason. A story book story, it naturally has a story book romantic ending, in which all concerned get just what's coming to them.

The yarn is based on a story that appeared recently in Red Book under the title "Cabin Cruiser," written by David Garth. The screen play is by Joseph Moncure March, whose versatile talents are attested by participation in preparation of such photoplays as "And Sudden Death," "Let 'Em Have It," "Rumba," "Transatlantic Merry Go Round" and "Jenny Gerhardt." Direction by George Archainbaud. A quintet of writers provided the several musical numbers.

Shirley Ross, featured in the forthcoming "Big Broadcast of 1937," and Robert Cummings play the leads. Martha Raye, remembered for "Rhythm on the Range" and prominent in "Big Broadcast" is featured. Well known screen names listed in the supporting cast include Monroe Owsley, Elizabeth Russell, Louis DaPron, Ray Walker, Wilma Francis, Edward Brophy, James Eagles, Robert Middlemass and Kenneth Harlan.

Miss Raye sings one specialty comedy number and Miss Ross has two, both of which are of the romantic type.

Street Girl

(Tentative Title)

(RKO Radio)

Comedy Romance with Music

The second vehicle chosen for Lily Pons, opera and radio headliner, since her screen debut in "I Dream Too Much," is a re-creation of a previously made film. Then titled "Manhattan Street Girl," made by FBO shortly after the introduction of sound in films, it was adapted from W. Carey Wonderly's original, "Viennese Charmer," by Jane Murfin. In that Jack Oakie and Betty Compson were featured. Oakie is also in this version. The present screen work is credited to P. J. Wolfson and Dorothy Yost.

Currently timed, localed in Paris, aboard an ocean liner and in New York, the story is comedy-romance with music. Miss Pons, fleeing a commercial marriage, becomes associated with an American swing band composed of Gene Raymond, Jack Oakie, Mischa Auer and Frank Jenks. Stowing away aboard boat, to occasional humorous complications, she further attaches herself to the quartet. Romantic complications arising and immigration officials interfering, nevertheless her operatic debut becomes a commercial and artistic success when the boys who came to bust up the show remained to cheer, and Raymond saves her from another potential marriage for convenience by staging a hectic elopement.

When Miss Pons appears in a picture, her singing looms as the predominant exploitation quality. In this production she will sing four modern topical numbers and several operatic arias. The modern numbers are by Arthur Schwarts, and Eddie Heyman wrote the lyrics. Classics include a Tarantella, "Blue Danube Waltz" and an excerpt from "Barber of Se-

The Beloved Rogue

(Republic)

Romantic Drama

Because this production is Republic's first attempt at a picture in color, it becomes a more than usual subject of exhibitor interest. The process used is Magnacolor, similar to that used by George Hirliman in "The Devil on Horseback" and "Captain Calamity." The story is a dramatic romance of early California. Practically all action is being shot out of doors, where full advantage is being taken of natural scenic beauties. Generally the story follows a Robin Hood theme.

The hero essays a dual character. In one role he is the idol of Indians, whom he is seeking to deliver from the persecutions of rapacious whites. As such he is accused of murdering the heroine's father. In the other, he is a perfumed fop, withal a skilled swordsman and daring bull fighter, paying court to the girl. His objective in this part is to focus the girl's attentions on the plight of the Indians. In both identities he is called upon to participate in sequences laden with high adventure. Yet the girl is the only one to suspect his dual personality. When he saves her life, meanwhile upsetting the plans of her enemies and his people's foes, there is a romantic climax.

Robert Livingstone and Heather Angel are the leading players. Both have been together in previous Republic pictures, Miss Angel also having been featured in "Last of the Mohicans." The principal support seems to be of unusual quality, but nothing more than one would expect when a studio ventures its first color production. It includes Sigfried Rumann, Ian Wolf, Robert Warwick, Emily Fitzroy, Charles Stevens, Walter Long and Ferdinand Munier. Scores of extras appear as Indians and whites.

Wells Root, directing, is also credited with the original screen play, which is based on an idea suggested by Johnston McCully.

The Big Show

(Republic)

Comedy with Music

Although this production capitalizes on the public interest attached to the celebrations being held in connection with the Texas Centennial, it actually is a Hollywood satire. In this vein it differs noticeably from the routine treatment of the secondary subject. While the same player is seen in both parts, the double is glorified over the star performer.

While the major locale is Dallas and much of the production detail depicts features and events in connection with the exposition there, the atmosphere is essentially Hollywood. A studio, unable to locate a vacationizing singing western star for a personal appearance, substitutes his voice double. While making a sensation for himself, the humble double also falls in love. As the mechanics of some of the most carefully guarded Hollywood intimate production secrets are bared, blackmailers attempt to hold up Hollywood for an exorbitant sum as the price of their silence. However, as the double has been such a sensation, the deception is readily admitted by the producers, who realize that a new star has been discovered. Incidentally, to give logic to the romantic interludes, the girl whom the double loves is signed as a picture player.

Gene Autry plays the dual roles. Kay Hughes is the girl. Practically all the supporting roles are secondary from a viewpoint of audience or exhibitor interest. Musical content is taken care of by a trio of Pacific Coast organizations. Yet the cast includes Sally Payne, William Newell, Max Terhune, Charles King and Harry Worth among the better known personalities.

The story is an original screen play by Dorrell and Stuart E. McGowan. Direction is in the hands of Mack V. Wright, who has done several recent Republic productions.

Avramenko To Produce Native Ukranian Films

Wasile Avramenko has organized Avramenko Film Productions, Inc., to produce a series of six musical pictures in the Ukrainian language in New York with Madame Thalia Sabanieeva, Metropolitan Opera star, singing the leads. Distribution will be through Kinotrade, with Roman Rebush in charge.

Paramount News is completely modernizing the amplifying equipment of all its newsreel channels by introducing a new compact Erpi amplifier especially designed for newsreel service.

ASCAP Canada Withdrawal Is Discussed Again

The Law Committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., will meet in New York Monday with E. C. Mills, general manager of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, and Leslie J. Boosey, representative of the International Council of Performing Rights Societies of London to discuss the society's withdrawal of its music from Canada.

Mr. Boosey, who returned to New York from England this week, favors the continuation of the Canadian Performing Rights Society, which is controlled by his organization and by ASCAP, but revised rates are said to be the only basis under which the society will allow it to continue in the Dominion. The withdrawal from Canada of the Performing Rights Society would present grave difficulties to the major companies as it might leave them unable to play their pictures there.

Indications are, however, that the Canadian Government will be asked to increase the scale of authorized music fees in order to avoid the dissolution of the Canadian licensing organization and the confusion and litigation which, it is believed, would result.

On the inauguration of the new Canadian legislation last summer, Mr. Mills said that his organization would withdraw from licensing activities there because the new scale of fees no longer made it financially worthwhile to operate in the Dominion.

The organization of the new Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, the Federal Government enterprise for the control of all broadcasting and licensing of studios and owners of receiving sets, was completed this week with the arrival in Ottawa from England of Major W. E. Gladstone Murray, general manager.

Ferd M. Simon Dies; Theatrical Agent

Ferd M. Simon, a leading theatrical agent on Broadway, and one of the pioneer exhibitors in the country, died Tuesday at his home in Forest Hills, Long Island, of a heart ailment. He was 41 years old. He was head of the agency bearing his name, with headquarters in New York and offices in Hollywood and London.

Equity Passes Amendment

The membership of Actors' Equity, in a national referendum, this week approved an amendment to the association's constitution providing that junior members cannot obtain senior rating until they have had 50 paid weeks in the theatre, either acting or rehearsal.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

47 in Production

If there's magic in that 7-11 numerology devoutly credited by so many variously assorted persons, the week covered in this report may be set down as significant. Eleven pictures were started. Seven were finished. That circumstance left 47 productions in active work, a total regarded as eminently satisfactory by all concerned.

Now in the cutting rooms are 56 features and 24 short subjects, and 22 features are scheduled to go before the cameras within the fortnight, maintaining the present pace. Finishing, of course, is another and more or less variable matter.

Columbia accounted for three of the pictures started. They are "Interlude," "Lady of New York" and "Rio Grande Ranger," representing both geographical and topical variety. Warners started work on two, "San Quentin" and "Justice After Dark," while the remainder included the following:

Paramount, "One Man's Home."
RKO-Radio, "Happy Go Lucky."
Republic, "Top O' the Town."
Supreme, "Lawless Land."

Columbia has 7 features shooting, Samuel Goldwyn 1, MGM 4, Paramount 6, Republic 1, RKO-Radio 3, Hal Roach 2, Twentieth Century-Fox 8, Universal 3, Walter Wanger 1 and Warner Brothers 8.

Changeover

Professional opinion, notably flexible, changed over swiftly from pro to con, if that's the phrase for it, when Hollywood learned of the finding against Bette Davis in London. Sentiment in the matter was never loudly expressed, for such is the nature of such things, but players disposed to uphold the studio position in the case were in marked and silent minority. Wishfully, perhaps, the sort of sympathy that finds expression between cocktails and after dinner wherever actors foregather was strongly pro-player.

It was more or less natural that this should be so. The British production field has risen steadily in the esteem of the talent. It was, and is, a convenient and congenial place to go, either on vacation or "between pictures," and the practice of filling in a lax schedule by doing a bit of acting on the other side had grown up quickly to be regarded with practically undiluted favor. It would have been nice, from the player point of view, to know that a contract with an American studio would not be an obstacle in the path of a player electing, for one reason or another, to vend his services abroad.

Now that the English legal view of the matter is known, of course, there will be no grumbling. There will be, instead, I-told-you-sos and serves-her-rights; for that is the way of Hollywood, a one-opinion town if there ever was one from the minute the correct opinion is made known. As to whether there will be more cases in kind, nobody does or can know. Of almost any comparable community, if there are any, a definite negative could be written. Not of Hollywood.

OH TEMPERAMENT, OH OVERHEAD

Artistic temperament, still a major item of industry expense, flashed and sizzled on three sectors during an otherwise calm, autumnal week.

Lily Pons declined to appear in a film with Nino Martini and the gentleman reciprocated, each expressing artistic admiration of the other and holding one opera star per picture to be ample.

Robert Montgomery declined to work in "Marriage Clause" under direction of Busby Berkeley and the studio colony recalled that he had declined, similarly, to enact the lead in a film that turned out to be the prize-winning "It Happened One Night."

Helen Broderick absented herself from the RKO-Radio studio without permission, pleading her mother's illness as cause, and was suspended for so doing.

Verbiage flowed copiously in each case.

Paragraphically

Screen Playwrights, Inc., has ready for consideration of producers its completed program of fair practice, but has announced no definite date for its presentation.

Edward Finney, Grand National advertising director, has left Hollywood for New York, where he will prepare a campaign for the exploitation of "In His Steps."

J. Stuart Blackton was married last weekend to Violet Donnelly Russell at the Church of St. Mary of the Angels.

Max Steiner, on loan from Selznick International to Warner Brothers, will direct the music score of "The Green Light."

Hoot Gibson will make eight pictures, headquartering at Talisman Studios, with Art Rosson directing; the new company is Occidental Pictures, thus far without a releasing affiliation.

Johnny Walker, actor and director, will produce "This Pretty World," by Converse Tyler, for the stage, planning ultimate screen use of the play.

Goldstein, Goetz and Blumenthal is the name of the newest agency to begin operations here; all members are experienced in radio or other branches of the agency business.

Hal Roach has signed Laura Treadwell, Don Clement and Wilson Cox for roles in "Nobody's Baby."

Carleton Young, from the cast of the stage play, "The Drunkard," which has run for three years in Los Angeles, has been signed by Republic to play the role of a drunkard in "The Chinese Orange Mystery."

Faith Baldwin's magazine story, "Woman Interne," has been purchased by Paramount, probably as a vehicle for Claudette Colbert, who has "I Met Him in Paris" to do after she finishes "Maid of Salem" and before starting the new story.

Frank Capra will produce the biographical "Chopin" for Columbia as his next picture; it is from a story by Sidney Buchanan.

Tess Schlessigner has been signed to a term contract by Samuel Goldwyn and will prepare the screen play for "Dead End" as her first assignment; William Wyler will direct.

Francis Farmer has been signed to play the romantic lead in "Waikiki Wedding," the next Bing Crosby picture, which Edward Sutherland will direct.

Patrick Knowles, back from a European vacation, has been given a major role in "Call It a Day," by Warner Brothers.

Ted Hart, Zeffie Tillsbury and Jessie Ralph have been added to the cast of "After the Thin Man."

Darryl F. Zanuck of Twentieth Century-Fox has exercised an option on the services of Gloria Stuart.

Gordon and Revel have written five new numbers for Shirley Temple's next picture.

Warner Baxter's recent foot injury will delay production of "The White Hunter" by Twentieth Century-Fox about five weeks; the same studio's "Stowaway" will be suspended for ten days or longer due to Alice Faye's influenza.

Chester Morris has been given the leading role in Columbia's "I Promise to Pay," an original by Lionel Hauser, screen play by Mary C. McCall, Jr., Myles Connolly producing.

George Burns and Gracie Allen have signed a new two-year contract with Paramount; they are now working on "College Holiday."

Warner Brothers have changed the title of "No Hard Feelings" to "Smart Blonde."

INDEPENDENTS IN CHICAGO DELAY FOLLOWING B & K INTO DOUBLES

Balaban & Katz Executives Report Increased Business, but Rival Circuits Say Their Receipts Have Held Up

Sudden Decision of B. & K. to Drop Demands for Extra Clearance Surprises Independents; Selling Takes Spurt

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

Whether to play double features or single bills is the question in the minds of Chicago exhibitors who are anxiously watching the effect of the double feature policy recently put into operation by Balaban & Katz "A" houses.

Reports from B. & K. executives indicate they are well pleased with the business increase credited to the dual plan. At the same time the executives of several other circuits say they have felt no loss in business since the duals were started in the opposition theatres, and some have gone so far as to have a checking made of the number of patrons at the B. & K. houses playing doubles.

At present the playing of double features in the B. & K. "A" houses is not hurting business elsewhere to any great extent. If the duals remain in these houses alone the other exhibitors probably will not go to the double feature plan. However, if the B. & K. men decide to play duals in their "C" week theatres it is very likely that all "C" week theatres will follow suit sooner or later as a means of protection.

The Warner and Essaness circuit executives say they will not go to duals regardless of what B. & K. does. They feel that the increase in business does not warrant the additional film costs and that the public doesn't demand a second feature. A selection of the best pictures, they say, will suffice and bring in greater revenue.

Last week the independent theatre men held a meeting at which it was decided to halt any plans for doubles until such a time as it became imperative that they change to the twin bill policy. It is too early to know if the double features as played by B. & K. will hurt business at the first week houses. The general opinion is that it will not prove harmful and that after a month or two B. & K. probably will return to the single feature policy.

Last week the Chicago played "Give Me Your Heart," which carried a "pink ticket." This coming week "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie" is the attraction, and the theatre men are discussing the idea of putting a "pink ticket" on that picture in order to stimulate business. The reason is the fine business turned in by "Give Me Your Heart," which grossed about $6,000 better than expected.

Mae West will appear in person at the Chicago theatre next month when her latest picture, "Go West Young Man," appears on the screen at that theatre. It is indicated by B. & K. executives that the engagement will be for several weeks if business warrants.

SPECIAL PERMITS FOR 2,000-FOOT REEL

Local exhibitors will have to get special permits on all projection equipment if they expect to run the 2,000-foot reels, the Chicago electrical inspection department announced this week as new optical shutter, takeup and magazines allowing one-inch clearance are needed for the large reels. All these devices must be approved before such reels will be legalized.

Thus far no permits have been applied for or handed out, and in some cases the law is being violated.

The Film Board of Trade is submitting a resolution to the city council next week asking that the ordinance be changed to permit three-fourths of an inch clearance instead of one inch. This would eliminate the buying of much new equipment or rewinding the film upon smaller reels. Unless the council grants the change, considerable trouble will probably result, as the distributors oppose any other system and are planning a finish fight.

Independents and others are still talking about the sudden decision by B. & K. last week to drop their demand for extra clearance even after it had been granted by the distributors. According to many it is the first time in history that B. & K. has given way to the independent theatre men on a matter approved by the distributors. Many are the opinions as to just what was included in the bill the independents were on the verge of filing in the federal court, that made B. & K. change plans.

The general opinion is that B. & K. did not want to have any legal difficulties in the event the federal authorities started an investigation. It is reported that the reason for the double features was that B. & K. figured it had better play most of the pictures it had bought. In previous years the general policy was to buy all major product, pay for it and then play only the pictures the circuit preferred. With double features, the policy now will be to buy, pay and play all major product. This will do away with considerable criticism in the past regarding B. & K.'s not playing the majority of pictures bought.

The quick decision to change plans regarding clearance came as a surprise to the independent group, who had expected they would have to file suit to stop the deals already made. The sudden withdrawal of the clearance demand halted any plans the independents had for the stopping of double features but they made no concessions to B. & K. to drop opposition to such a plan.

Latest reports are to the effect that B. & K. already is asking for the extra clearance for next season. So far the distributors have made no agreements, it is reported, and judging from the way things worked out this year they will not be as eager to give the clearance when the next selling season comes around.

Selling delayed for many weeks by the clearance fight is now in full swing as both distributors and exhibitors are trying to make up for lost time.

Chesterfield-Invincible Pictures will be given a strong sales boost when 300 exhibitors are guests of Allied Theatres of Illinois at the Hotel Sherman Thursday midnight. Eddie Golden, vice-president and general sales manager, will speak about the pictures, after which a program is planned.

Gladys George, who plays the title role in Paramount's "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie," was the guest of honor at a tea given at the Palmer House Clubroom by the Better Films Council of Chicagoland on Tuesday afternoon. Miss George is on a tour in advance of the openings.

A. H. Blank, his wife and son Ray passed through here Sunday en route to Des Moines after a number of weeks in the East. Ray recently left a Canadian hospital where he had undergone a serious operation. The operation proved very successful and he is now well on the road to recovery.

Eddie Silverman and Aaron Saperstein were the guests of honor at a meeting of the Chicago Amusement Publicists Association last Tuesday evening at the club's headquarters in the Sherman hotel. The men spoke informally on the double feature situation here.

Probably the most beautiful cargo any airplane has carried has just been chosen, according to Sammy Clark, Warner publicist. It includes the thirteen girls who will make the "Gold Diggers of 1937" tour next month in one of the huge 21 passenger American Airlines flagships. The girls, chosen by Busby Berkeley, include two former Chicagoans, Rosalind Marquis and Melba Marshall.

Gibson Schedules Eight

Hoot Gibson is planning production of eight films under the newly formed company, Occidental Pictures, Inc. Headquarters will be at the Talisman Studios, although most of the shooting will be done near San Diego.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Big Scene Week

Big sets and big crowds have been features of London Films' activities this week. The Denham studios have put on a big midnight battle sequence for the Erich Pommer "Fire over England," a large scale mob scene for the Marlene Dietrich "Knight Without Armour," and a picturesque setting of an island restaurant, also calling for many extras, for Victor Saville's "Dark Journey."

The "Fire over England" scenes picture hand to hand fighting between British sailors and Spaniards on the deck of an Armada galleon, rammed by a frigate. Built on the River Colne, in the Denham grounds, the realistic reconstructions of these old fighting ships are the background for an episode in which the chief parts are played by Henry Ainley and Laurence Olivier. James Wong Howe was called upon to do some highly specialized lighting.

The "Knight without Armour" episode pictures the outbreak of the Russian revolution, with Miss Dietrich as a countess deserted by her servants as the mob descends upon her summer palace. Carrying on with scenes while the still sick Robert Donat has not been able to appear, Dietrich also has appeared in sets reconstructing the 1914 Russian Embassy in London and a peasant's hut somewhere in Turkestan. Marlene in this case is seen in the guise of a ragged refugee.

While no decision has yet been made as to calling in a substitute for Donat, production ingenuity is approaching its limit; in a very short time it will be necessary either to find a new leading man or to stop work.

"Men Are Not Gods" (originally "Triangle") has been completed. It was the second film to go on the floor at Denham.

Miss Bergner Repeats

Repeating, for the Schach-Trafalgar "Dreaming Lips," the role which made her famous as a screen star, Elisabeth Bergner has played the big scene of the girl's brutal repulse by her musician-husband, in a Denham set reproducing the platform and auditorium of London's famous concert center, the Queen's Hall.

Also in full production for Schach-Trafalgar is the Ann Harding "Love from a Stranger," directed by Rowland V. Lee.

The Richard Tauber "Pagliacci," for the same interests, is well advanced.

Wilcox's Naval Battle

Two battleship, the Curacoa and Royal Oak, were placed by the Admirality at the disposal of Herbert Wilcox for the running sea fight in "The Navy Eternal," which was staged off Weymouth at the last of the big exteriors. Already shot are sequences covering the Autumn Maneuvers of the Fleet. Besides the official Navy department, the propagandist Navy League is cooperating with Herbert Wilcox Productions.

Richard Cromwell, of "Bengal Lancer" fame, is due in London for his part of a naval officer, fellow captive on an enemy battleship with Hazel Terry, playing daughter to H. B. Warner, a British consul. One of the first tasks of this pair is to dive from the deck of the battleship while the shot and shell are busy.

Called a unique achievement in cinema sound is the record of the gunfire of the Home Fleet during maneuvers, obtained by a microphone unit under L. E. Overton. Camera units on three ships also filmed gun and torpedo firing at close range.

Mr. Wilcox's personally directed "London Melody," with Anna Neagle and Tullio Carminati, finished on the floor with a spectacular cabaret sequence. Geraldo's Band and the Hippodrome girls were singing and dancing to "The Eyes of the World Are on You," specially composed by Lerner, Goodhart and Hoffman, and Anna Neagle had a song and dance number with a chorus of darky beauties.

Alf Goulding is directing "Splinters in the Air," with Sydney Howard, on another Pinewood set. In current scenes are Richard Hearne and Ellen Pollock. Stuart Robertson, baritone under film contract to Wilcox, will have special numbers.

Sally is Here

Sally O'Neil, cast for the lead in the Argyle-B. I. P. "Kathleen Mavourneen," is here, and shooting has started at Welwyn under the direction of Norman Lee. Opposite Miss O'Neill is Jack Daly, musical comedy star, with the Irish stage celebrity Sara Allgood, also Pat Noonan, Ethel Griffies, Fred Luprez, Talbot O'Farrell and Denis O'Neil. In fact, the cast is as Irish as the title.

New Title

The new title of Julius Hagen's joint English-French production with Franco London Films has been changed from "Widow's Island" to "No Return." Marcel Chantal has arrived for her leading role, playing both in the English version directed by Maurice Elvey and in the French version controlled by Claude Heymann. Added to the English cast are Olga Lindo, Evelyn Roberts, Alistair Sim and Kynaston Reeves.

Elvey's first sequences are flashback trench scenes.

"Silver Blaze," another Twickenham production, is in its second week, Walter Bentley directing episodes in a training stable while Arthur Barnes, who will make racing exteriors, is looking over courses and stables for backgrounds.

Flying for Warner's

Arthur Woods, directing for Warner-First National the Max Miller "Don't Get Me Wrong," in which George Stone from Hollywood also is featured, has had principals and 200 extras at Brooklands for flying sequences. Comedy parachute descents are planned.

For stunt air scenes in this picture, Woods deputized for his star and personally did all the crazy flying which it was possible for a camera in a following plane to pick up.

Itemized

Raoul Walsh is to direct Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in "Jump for Glory," for Criterion Productions, and has been in story conferences with John Meehan, the script author. Walsh is on a two-picture contract with Criterion. . . . Michael Hankinson started "The Scarab Murder Case" for Paramount-British at Pinewood. . . . Pathe's "The Limping Man" has been completed at Welwyn. . . . Nova Pilbeam's next for G-B is to be "The Lady of La Paz," from the Elinor Mordaunt novel. . . . "Gilbert Meets Sullivan," based on the story of the famous comic opera collaborators, is another planned at Shepherd's Bush by G. B.

FROM READERS

A CHILD ADMISSION POLICY THAT WINS

To the Editor of the Herald:

Noticing our friend's letter from Menard, Texas, in your September 12th Herald, relative to admission prices charged.

We opened the Maurin theatre in January, 1931, and our policy of charging a three price scale is working perfect, and also has helped in keeping the child customer a regular patron. We charge a grammar school child 10 cents. Upon entering high school the admission is 15 cents, and only after they have finished high school do we charge them adult price of 25 cents here (population 2,500).

We find this policy perfect for us as we know mostly all our patrons. Never an argument at the ticket office.

I'm sure if small town managers would adopt such a policy they would never regret it.

Let's hear from some others who may have a pet policy of their own.—Louis J. Maurin, Maurin's Theatre, Reserve, La.

P. S. You can top this letter "Let's Keep the Child Customer a Regular Patron. What Are You Doing?"

'STREET' AND BROADWAY BOTH AWAIT RKO PLAN

Pressure for Early Filing in Court Reported, but New Complications Are Indicated

Emergence of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation with a plan of reorganization appears, finally, to be only a matter of a few days. Wall Street and Broadway both anticipate the filing of a plan before the weekend, thus ending, on approval of the plan by the court, the receivership operation by Irving Trust Company which has prevailed since 1933.

Despite the fact that many considerations essential to obtaining approval of the plan had not been worked out early this week, considerable pressure for completion was being brought to bear by the court and important creditors. The plan may not take final shape in several important particulars until creditors of RKO have been heard in court.

New Complications

On Wednesday, Motion Picture Daily said that prospects of a plan for filing with the United States district court in New York this week were fading despite sustained efforts by the reorganization interests to make the move possible before the weekend.

This new development, which was unexplained, made factors in the reorganization reluctant to prophesy when the plan could be made ready. A few were said to hold to the belief that the new delay will be brief and may permit filing next week.

Several unofficial explanations of the delay were advanced. One was that elements in the reorganization who have consistently opposed presenting the plan while it is still incomplete had won out.

The rapidly increasing earnings of RKO, which are being reflected in the market value of its stock, were said to be a factor in the current demand for an immediate presentation of a plan. A sharp rise in the market value of the stock could complicate the provisions for treatment of stockholders, it was said. The same consideration applies in lesser degree to any creditors who are designated to receive common stock of the new RKO company in settlement of their claims.

Unsecured Claims Up Later

Indications were that while provisions will be made for unsecured creditors, the final treatment of unsecured claims may be resolved later. It was said on good authority that no final provision had been made as yet for the $9,600,000 Rockefeller Center claim, the largest in the unsecured classification. This claim, however, because of its individual aspects, may be treated separately, apart from the other unsecured claims against RKO.

Late last week, Leo Spitz, president of RKO, said that rapid progress was being made and "it might be possible" that it will be completed in a week. "On the other hand," he continued, "the plan may not be ready for two weeks."

"A reorganization plan for Radio-Keith-Orpheum will be announced within a week, according to sources close to the company," said the New York Post. "The principal debts of the company include one of $750,000 in four per cent secured notes to the Chemical Bank and Trust Company, one of $11,600,000 in six per cent debentures, one of $1,118,500 in Pathe notes and $40,898,000 in unsecured claims."

RKO Canada Ordered Dissolved

Meanwhile, an order approving the dissolution of RKO Canada, a theatre operating subsidiary of RKO, and a related agreement with Famous Players Canadian, was signed in New York this week by Federal Judge William Bondy.

The agreement provides for the surrender of RKO Canada of three theatre leaseholds in the Dominion to Famous Players Canadian and the release of the latter from a $220,000 obligation to RKO Canada in return for the assumption of the leases, and other considerations. Promissory notes amounting to $160,000, payable 15 years from last June 1, will be issued by RKO Canada to Maritime Corporation, a realty company, and on the conclusion of the payments the RKO Canadian subsidiary will be dissolved. The RKO petition, which was presented by the Irving Trust Company in its official capacity of trustee in reorganization, set forth that the Canadian theatre operations involved had been unprofitable over a long period of years.

Florida Anti-Trust Suit Hearing Set

Federal Judge Marvin E. Underwood at Atlanta, Ga., has set October 24 for a hearing at which counsel for the Broadway Theatre, Inc., of Ybor City, Fla., will argue for an injunction against Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation; Vitagraph, Inc.; Paramount Pictures Distributing Company, Inc.; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation; United Artists Corporation; Columbia Pictures Corporation; Universal Film Exchanges, Inc.; RKO Distributing Corporation, and E. J. Sparks and Frank Rogers. They are charged with violation of the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust laws.

Augustine Sans, attorney for the plaintiff, said that discrimination was shown in "the price of pictures, the number of pictures allowed, and the fact that most pictures rented to the Broadway theatre have been shown several times in Florida before the Ybor City theatre is allowed to have them."

Crescent Buys Three Houses

The Crescent Amusement Company of Nashville, Tenn., has purchased the Princess and Palace theatres in Greenville, Tenn., and the Park in Maryville, Tenn., from the Parrott-Hendron Corporation, operator of houses in a number of east Tennessee towns.

Cohn Sees British Film Quality Rise

Construction of new studios in England, with complete facilities, such as Alexander Korda's Denham plant and the newly opened Pinewood studios, coupled with advances in technical knowledge there, has overcome the last obstacle in the way of production there of pictures equal in quality to American product, in the opinion of Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia Pictures, who has just returned from a short stay in London.

An important advance in the number and quality of British pictures will be of great benefit not only to the industry in England but also in America, Mr. Cohn believes. "There has never been enough product—good product," he said, "and good showmen everywhere have found that it is better in the long run to pay more for a good picture than to run poor ones, bought cheaply." With America and England interchanging talent and technical knowledge, the higher quality pictures produced as a result will bring increased returns to exhibitors and distributors in both countries, he added.

Exhibitors in England, Mr. Cohn is convinced, are willing to pay and pay well for good pictures. Whether such pictures are English or American made is not of first importance, he said, and English pictures will be well received in America if they are technically and artistically equal to those made in the United States.

While in London Mr. Cohn saw the first rushes of "Thunder in the City," Edward G. Robinson vehicle for Columbia recently completed at the Denham studios by Atlantic Film Company. He cited this as an example of the work which can be done through exchange of talent. Columbia has made several deals for production of other pictures in England, the most important of which is an arrangement with Paul Soskin, English producer, for six or seven pictures this year. Mr. Soskin returned with Mr. Cohn and is now in Hollywood conferring with Harry Cohn on talent arrangements.

Columbia's business in England has increased 30 per cent over last year, Mr. Cohn said, and he expects it to continue to increase. "The fact that people there are willing to pay nearly three dollars for admission to the better theatres," the executive said, "indicates the extent of the market there." The response to good pictures is overwhelming, he said, pointing out that "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" made an even wider impression there than it did here.

Franchise Changes Hands

The franchise for the distribution of Burroughs-Tarzan productions in California, Arizona, Nevada and the Hawaiian Islands, heretofore held by Far West Exchanges, Inc., has been acquired by Olmstead-Stubbins, Inc., because of the acquisition of Far West by Grand National.

Simons Acquires Five Houses

Five theatres in Montana have been taken over by the W. A. Simons Amusement Company of Salt Lake City. They are the Rialto, Deer Lodge; State and Strand, Livingston, and the State and American, Roundup.

Morrison and D. D. Lilly; R. Glunt and S. T. Agnew; F. L. Moore and L. G. Schafer; D. M. Catlin.

Out of many excellent replies to Section A the following have been selected for publication. A. L. Cooper says:

"The screen image should be bordered with plain black, extending at least three feet from edge of picture, beyond which point the color may be shaded to something lighter. Black drapes beyond the black border makes the picture 'stand out' by contrast. Illumination decreases very rapidly from center to edges of screen images and black border and drapes as above tend to create the illusion of more even illumination. The picture itself should overlap on the border one or two inches to minimize visibility of movement of screen image as a whole."

William C. Brown says: "For screen border I consider plain non-gloss black to be best for masking, with everything inside the proscenium arch also black. In my opinion any lighter shades within this area tend to detract from the picture itself. If there be a balcony, the stage floor (if a stage there be) in front of the screen should be black to avoid reflection of light from floor to eyes of patrons in balcony. If it be thought impractical to have solid black within the whole arch area, any color used should be of subdued type and non-gloss."

Dale H. Danielson says: "In my experience the best screen image border is about two feet of black velour, the same extending inside the screen image about one inch. Outside such black mask the drapes should shade out to auditorium tones. This type of masking has the effect of centralizing attention of observers upon the screen image, and nothing else. It also provides sharp contrast between screen image and border, which has the raising brightness values at outer edge of screen image, thus tending to create evenness of illumination, which is lacking in actuality. Gradual toning into color from screen border outward creates a more intimate feeling of observers for the screen image."

T. F. Bochert replies: "The immediate screen border, or masking, should be plain, non-gloss black, which may be shaded gradually over a space of three feet into colors to harmonize with the auditorium."

J. A. Zachritz answers: "Our views upon screen masking are asked, so here are my own. We have three theatres here (Cushing, Oklahoma) and I believes have as good results in the matter of screen illumination as can be secured with low intensity light sources. We certainly obtained better illumination at outer margins of the picture by using plain dull black than with dark grey. We purchased non-gloss black cloth at 15 cents per yard, hemmed its edges and cut it to proper length. On one edge we made the hem wide enough to permit running a wire through. Next we marked the edge of the screen image and attached one edge of the cloth to the screen frame temporarily. We then threaded the wire through the hem and stretched it across so that the cloth edge would come a bit inside the screen image and, with turn buckles, stretched the wire tight. Next we stretched the cloth out smooh and fastened it at the outer edge. We next cut out some round corners from cardboard, painted them dull black and inserted them properly. (Should have covered them with cloth—F. H. R.). This plan certainly did 'bring out' the outer zones of the picture. Shading to lighter colors is all right, but plain black is the only thing next the picture itself."

Houston Jones of Mancos, Colorado, answers: "The one most important essential of a screen border is that it be dead black, this for two reasons, namely: The first, most important item is that sharpness of contrast tends to level the screen brightness, viewed as a whole. There is, as we all know, much less brightness at the outer zones of the screen than at their center and a sharply contrasting border makes this very much less noticeable. The second reason is that with a black border the picture may overlap slightly upon the black without that fact being evident to observers, and that causes any movement of the screen image as a whole to be less noticeable. I do not believe the overlap should exceed three-quarters of an inch at most. More than this is likely to be noticeable, and that of course is to be avoided."

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 46

(A) Describe a simple, easily applied process for testing projection lenses for flatness of field.

(B) What is a "collector" lens? A "converging" lens? A meniscus lens?

(C) Can a projection lens be made to project a sharp picture at any distance? Explain.

To join the Bluebook School merely send in answers. Place name and question number upon first sheet. Address F. H. Richardson, No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

G. E. Doe says: "I have followed your teachings, brother Richardson, through the years. When you have advocated certain things, often against the dictum of other projection and theatre practice authorities, I have made it my practice to study your recommendations, and have in at least nine cases out of every ten found you were correct. When you advocated a dead black (non-gloss) screen border I did just that. I visited theatres in which the screen was bordered otherwise and found this: Best general results are had where a black velvet border is next the screen image. Next best is where some less costly black cloth, properly applied, is next the picture, and next where non-gloss black paint is next the screen. In all cases the picture should overlap on the black by not to exceed one inch, preferably a little less. That the before described black mask tends, by illusion, to build up through sharp contrast, increase the brightness of the outer portions of the screen image, and in general make the picture 'stand out'; also, I imagine, it gives increased depth to the picture.

(B) G. Lathrope and H. Lowrie say: "Permanent grounds are used to prevent the charging of parts not intended to carry charge, such as conduit, arc lamp frames, generator frames, etc., through a long list, also to minimize hum and some other sound noises. High resistance grounds must be located and stopped, else there will be a small, constant current leakage that in time will be costly in wasted current."

Charge of the Light Brigade

(Warner Brothers)

Romantic Drama

Just as the guns in Tennyson's epic poem volleyed and thundered, this picture volleys and thunders across the screen. It has the elements in every detail. Produced on a scale to which the word "Big," in its fullest sense, is logically applicable, it is spectacular and sensational entertainment for any audience. For showmen its exploitation potentialities are of similar caliber.

The idea of the photoplay is to establish a plausible, if highly imaginative, reason for the immortal charge of the Light Brigade. To that end two premises are erected. Both move in an atmosphere of conflict. One is of direct appeal to men; the other hits right into the hearts of women. The two, under the power of intelligent writing, capable acting, thoughtful direction and application of amazing production effects, are skillfully blended.

The major locale is India. Brothers Geoffrey and Perry Vickers are officers in the British army. Geoffrey is in love with Elsa Campbell, but his long absences on military duty cause her to fall in love with Perry. The manner in which Geoffrey learns of this situation establishes tense conflict as each brother is determined he will win the girl's love.

In India, England is sitting on a keg of dynamite. Surat Khan, who has been deprived of a financial subsidy, is treacherously treating with the Russians. Following a successful horse foraging expedition into Arabia, marked by minor but thrilling military combat, Geoffrey, who is a friend of Surat Kahn because he once saved the ameer's life, is ordered to Fort Chukoti, outpost stronghold in the British Indian domain. Romantic conflict intervening, Colonel Campbell falls victim to oriental intrigue and sends the garrison off to another fort. The fanatic Indians under Surat, aided by Russian Count Volonoff, attack. The battle and siege, a few Britishers fighting desperately against hopeless odds, is suspense-laden action in a high degree. Victor, Khan offers to spare Geoffrey's life to wipe out his obligation to him. Colonel Campbell accepts his promise of safe conduct for the survivors. Khan's soldiers murder them as they attempt to embark on boats. Only Geoffrey and Elsa are permitted to escape. Bringing up General Warrenton's relieving battalions, it is discovered that Khan has massacred the Chukoti garrison, including Geoffrey's troop, the 27th Lancers.

A new danger menaces England. The Crimean War breaks out. Geoffrey and Perry are ordered there. In the now comparative peace of horror-shocked India, Elsa acknowledges her greater love for Perry. She begs Geoffrey to protect Perry in the new danger. At Balaklava, the fortunes of war are decidedly against British hopes. Geoffrey learns that Surat Khan is with the Russians. Two motives, one the desire for revenge, the other a noble patriotism, inspire him to desperate action. True to his promise to Elsa, he removes a bitterly inimical Perry from danger. Disobeying orders, actually mutinying, he forges instructions that send the noble six hundred into the jaws of Hell.

The sensationally reenacted charge, a sterling tribute to technical and directorial imagination and execution, takes rank with any and all great spectacles ever presented on the screen. Starting slowly to dissolve into a burst of roaring fury, it lifted a group of newspaper folk out of the projection room chairs and stood them up cheering.

The charge does all that Geoffrey hoped it would when he forged the order. It breaks the Russian lines and is the turning point of the war. Through it, Geoffrey, who is dying from a bullet from Surat's pistol, avenges the massacre of Chukoti and the annihilation of the 27th Lancers as Surat perishes on his lance.

Commenting on the picture some months ago, especially stressing its bigness, we pointed out that: "It is to be conceded, of course, that magnitude in itself is no guarantee of box office success. . . . But the Warner experiments in magnitude have had a way of turning out well and there is no very evident reason for thinking their string of successes is likely to be broken at this time."

It is hardly to be doubted that public reaction to the film will confirm this estimate. An exceptional credit to all associated with it in any way, it is a real thriller for audiences and exhibitors.—Gus McCarthy, Hollywood.

Pigskin Parade

(20th Century-Fox)

Football Comedy

Generally this picture is hokum-packed farce. It's a collection of exploitation material and word of mouth advertising can be expected to keep the ball rolling. Actually the film is a campus musical comedy, much in the nature of a vaudeville show, with a funny topical football twist. Factually it looks like an authentic picturization of what happened when a group of writers sat down to write a yarn, and producers, directors, gag men, musical composers, players and agents tramped in to give them the benefit of their ideas as to how a different comedy should be staged. For once the conference idea seems to have worked out pretty well.

A mistake made by Yale's publicity director, in inviting a tank town Texas college to send its football team to the Bowl for a game, is the reason for the comedy, music, dancing, frivolity and excitement. It brings Jack Haley, ludicrously dominated by wife Patsy Kelly, into the picture as coach of Texas State University. Miss Kelly's success in breaking the star full-back's leg is typical of the comedy that accrues to this pair. The Yacht Club Boys come in with four specialties and are continually present in the action. Dixie Dunbar sings and dances with Anthony Martin, leader of the college band. Texas State, using wide open football, wallops a batch of teams. Patsy, in search of a ringer to take the place of the crippled full-back, discovers Stuart Erwin, a barefoot boy from the melon patches who can toss watermelons into a bushel basket from 50 yards. She also discovers singing, dancing Judy Garland, but not before an unidentified trick harmonica playing youngster has contributed measurably to the insanity.

Somebody thought that there must be a suggestion of drama in the story, so campus vamp Arline Judge almost breaks the heart of star passer Erwin and nearly drives him from school. Patsy Kelly fixed this up, however, by arranging a date for the vamp and Haley, which culminates in Haley getting a bump on the head and Miss Judge being steered back to Erwin.

The whole essence of the film is lively fun, colored with music and dancing. Everything is so bizarrely treated that anyone will find difficulty in counting the laughs. The audience that saw it in Grauman's Chinese theatre was continually in a welter of glee. The down front paying customers, apart from the studio crowd, seemed to enjoy it most. Their pleasure seems to be indicative of how it may be received by any fun-loving audience.—G. M.

Empty Saddles

Western

Elements of proven appeal to outdoor thrill action picture fans are skillfully included in this picture. To them has been added a dash of novelty that gives the film an interesting savor. While the story is essentially dramatic and full of that atmosphere of adventure that is looked upon as customary, comedy contrast is called upon to fulfill a more than usual function in relation to the drama and romance.

Buck Devlin takes up a ranch in territory that in years gone by has been the scene of bloody battles between cattlemen and sheep herders. Attracted to Boots Boone, daughter of Swap, the film's principal comedy character, Buck transforms his property into a dude ranch. With the advent of eastern thrill seekers, the feminine contingent of which heroizes Buck, the demon of jealousy raises its head. As a sock attraction for his guests, Buck plans a sham renewal of the old cattle-sheep man feuds. What the natives fear comes true. The staged warfare turns into the real thing. With sequences full of exciting riding, shooting and fights, Buck comes to grips with the leaders of the cattlemen, Cim White and Jim Grant, to defeat their plans and save Boots' life.

The pictures moves speedily in the main. Dialogue and action are well balanced, and production detail that takes good advantage of the beauties of natural scenic effects is of high quality. It's a popular player, Buck Jones, in a characteristic role which he handles well.

Previewed in the El Portal theatre, North Hollywood, a typical small town neighborhood house. The audience was satisfied with what it saw on the screen.—G. M.

Rose Bowl

(Paramount)

Campus Comedy Romance

While the title is directly associated with every year's most publicized football game and there is considerable football in the picture, particularly in the climaxing sequences, this film is more a collegiate campus comedy romance than a glorification of the fall sport. In most phases, it is very much different from the formula topical sport picture, thus having the elements that generally appeal to others, particularly the more youthful audience contingents, and action for the gridiron devotees.

Actually two stories are told. One concerns the romantic rivalry of two hometown football players for the affections of a high school belle; the other is about a little known jerkwater college that has a football club so proficient that it won the Rose Bowl Bid. Running counterpart to these two main themes are a couple other comedy romances. In the story, Ossie Merrill, highly desired player, who knows he's good, matriculates at a major Pacific Coast institution. Old reliable Paddy O'Riley goes to a little midwestern college. Both attain fame on the gridiron. Eventually, with practically all the action concerning Paddy's school and friends, both teams are scheduled for the New Year's Day game. To steam up interest in Paddy's little known outfit, Coach Moreland seizes upon the romantic conflict between Paddy and Ossie for Susie (Cheers) Reynolds and rings in another one concerning comedy relief Dutch and movie struck Florence to attract attention. The stunt goes over with a bang. The game is played, Paddy's team goes on to win, and he wins Cheers.

The film maintains a gay youthful quality. The football atmosphere has been included intelligently, while main emphasis is concentrated on the comedy and romance of college boys and girls. The idea is that the picture is different.

The White Legion

(Grand National)

Drama

Concerned with the combating of yellow fever in the Panama Canal zone in the days when that canal was being constructed, this production is slow and lacking in production features. While the story is interesting and the acting for the most part is capable, the production suffers from being slowly paced and from the limited area of its setting. It is a tribute to the medical profession in their successful efforts to conquer the dread disease, and as such is of historical interest.

Although the theme is centered in the canal zone, scenes of the canal or its construction are not a part of the picture. Exploitation, therefore, it seems, would best be directed towards the story content, as there are no outstanding cast names, though Tala Birell and Ian Keith are fairly well known in a cast composed mainly of tried character actors.

Yellow fever breaks out in the canal zone. The Colonel commanding the zone issues orders forbidding anyone to leave the area. Thus he incurs the displeasure of a United States Senator and his daughter who are visiting the island. A band of five doctors and scientists arrive, a Frenchman, a Briton, a Japanese, an American and a Belgian, the last-named a woman, to help combat the scourge.

The five locate themselves in an area not as yet afflicted. A native comes down with the disease and the doctors begin their work. They conquer the spread of the disease and find that the Senator's daughter is a carrier. The girl is inoculated with serum from one of the doctors who died of the disease. She recovers, as also does Ian Keith, who contracted the germ while determining the identity of the carrier.

The Fugitive Sheriff

Western Drama

There's a ring of authenticity about the plain story and unornamented production technique of "The Fugitive Sheriff," and the film is pleasantly free of the fantastic, grotesque and suddenly sentimental. Ken Maynard and his horse, Tarzan, are present and active most of the screen time and the things they do are less than commonly different from the things most cowboys and cow ponies did in the period portrayed, which was well before telephone times.

The title is derived from the principal character, played by Maynard. Elected sheriff by the law-abiding faction of a small western community, he is framed and found guilty of a train robbery staged for that purpose. Fleeing before he can be jailed, he hides out in the mountains, returning at night to gather evidence against his opponents, and ultimately lays a trap wherein they are caught in a holdup, the fugitive sheriff whipping his rival in single-handed struggle, establishing his innocence and winning the hand of the lady in the case. Her part in it, by the way, is minor.

The evident intention to produce a western as a western and for the purposes of a western suggests that exploitation might well emphasize that characteristic of the film. Cowhands sing a couple of numbers which may have been written since the turn of the century, or even last week, but they don't interfere importantly with the progress of the story and not much attempt is made to feature them. Otherwise the film is plain, plausible western fiction.

Reviewed at the Arena theatre, a plain playhouse for plain people, where it occasioned audible expressions of approval when horse or man came to the rescue.—William R. Weaver, New York.

Sociological Drama

Newspapers recently made good reading of facts concerning a man escaped from a southern prison many years ago who, discovered as a highly respectable citizen of a northern community, was demanded for extradition and reincarceration by the governor of his native state. The justice of the justice which the extraditing governor sought to dispense was brought into debate and, while the law was clear on all points, discussion was widespread, sides were taken and much interest was manifested.

The appeal of "The Man Who Lived Twice" is to this type of interest, although the story of the picture is not analogous. It is, rather, a fictional projection of the moral issues involved, an elaboration achieved by substitution of major crime for minor offense, national distinction for community acceptance and amnesia, clinically induced, for conscious escape. Because this elaboration has been adroitly achieved, it is reasonable to expect the fiction product to encounter public interest commensurate with that accorded the factual incident.

The picture presents the case of Slick Rawley, played by Ralph Bellamy, a burglar and murderer who submits to a brain operation by a reputable physician for the purpose of correcting the pathological cause of his criminal tendencies. Amnesia is an incidental result of the operation and, in a period of 10 years, Slick Rawley, bandit, becomes Dr. Blake, distinguished surgeon. Then circumstances reveal his identity to police and to himself, a trial for murder follows, with defense counsel admitting the defendant's guilt as charged, but maintaining that the defendant is not, in essential truth, Slick Rawley, criminal, but Dr. Blake, humanitarian, and pleading, therefore, for acquittal. This situation is logically arrived at and the ending conforms as well with the rules of probability.

The names of Ralph Bellamy, Marian Marsh and Isabel Jewell are available for billing and the title looks well on a marquee. The controversial character of the story affords pithy catch copy.

Reviewed at the Globe theatre, on Broadway at 46th street, where the picture was advertised as in its first New York run and where, on an especially delightful autumnal afternoon, a modest gathering enticed indoors to see the film saw it without discernible excitement or apathy. —W. R. W.

Alibi for Murder

Mystery Drama

A creditable mystery drama with action, suspense and romance nicely blended, this is good entertainment. Ramifications of the plot involve the suspects in international intrigue, specifically the efforts of munitions interests to obtain a secret formula held by the murdered man. The international influence is hypothetical, peculiar to the story and not to the setting, which is localized.

A scarcity of clues is minimized by the swiftly paced action, suspense in this way being created and held. The acting is uniformly good, with a particularly fine characterization of an amateur detective by William Gargan. Marguerite Churchill as the romantic interest and Gene Morgan playing comedy are capable in their roles.

In his capacity as a radio commentator, William Gargan attempts to interview a Mr. Foster, scientist and inventor, on his arrival in America via dirigible, but is unsuccessful. Later, at the inventor's country home, Gargan tries to see Foster. A shot is heard and the inventor is found dead. Police pronounce the death a suicide, but Gargan believes otherwise, assuming that it is a murder.

Reviewed at Loew's Ziegfeld Theatre, New York. A small afternoon audience appeared to be enjoying the picture.—P. M.

Land Without Music

(Capitol—General Film)

Musical Comedy

The Oscar Strauss operetta has been made into an entertaining picture by Walter Forde for Capitol and Richard Tauber's singing is the principal entertainment and commercial feature. Those who appreciate finely rendered music will be enthusiastic about the picture, but in addition there is Schnozzle Durante, who makes the most of a hearty comedy part, and there is good romantic interest, too.

It is an early nineteenth century fairy story. The people of the little Italian Duchy of Ducco were so musical that work was neglected and, as the national debt had to be met, the Princess Regent made singing and music generally a crime and banned it from her domains until such time as the people went back to work and the debt could be paid.

The national hero, Carlini, the opera singer, returning to Lucco for his annual concert, encounters en route an American journalist and his daughter, who have been captured and robbed by bandits. Rescuing them, he learns of the music ban in his country and accompanies them as valet. With the aid of the bandits he arranges to give his concert secretly in an underground cave, but is discovered by the Princess and thrown into jail. This causes a revolt and the Princess is forced to rescind the ban.

A State opera is organized which pays the national debt and all ends very happily with the Princess looking with favor on the opera singer and the American daughter of the journalist in love with the Chief of Police's son.

Diana Napier plays the Princess very charmingly. June Clyde as Sadie Whistler, the journalist's daughter, is cutely American and Derrick de Marney, a truly romantic figure as the son of the Captain of Police. The picture is well produced and staged, the photography worthy of special mention and Walter Forde's directing very smooth.

Trade shown at Piccadilly Theatre, London, Oct. 8. The audience applauded all the Tauber numbers and showed great appreciation of the Durante comedy.—HOPE WILLIAMS, London.

Produced by Capitol Films. Distributed in U. K. and Irish Free State by General Film Distributors, in U. S. A. by Universal. Directed by Walter Forde. Running time, 80 minutes. General audience classification.

La Paloma

(Casino)

German Operetta

This is a German production of a Spanish musical work with the German cast singing the Spanish music in fine voice, protraying the Spanish characters adequately for the most part, superbly in certain instances, while the emotional side of the story is held in commendable check. The film is not supplied with English titles and its usefulness for the American trade is limited chiefly to theatres of German patronage.

The picture is at its best when the singing is going on, which is most of the time, but the comedy interludes also register strongly with those who know the language well. The story does not require opulent setting or lavish costuming. There is a romantic interest that ties the plot threads together and it is clean. The cast is admirably chosen as to type.

The principal singing assignment is given to Charles Kullman, an able tenor who also can act, with Leo Sliezak, Fritz Kampers and sometimes a chorus carrying a portion of the music score. The number widely known under the title of "La Paloma" is impressively sung at the opening and close of the picture.

Reviewed at the Casino theatre, located in the heart of New York's German population area, where a large attendance manifested enthusiastic approval.—W. R. W.

Produced by Rota. Distributed by the Casino Film Exchange. Directed by Karl Heinz Martin. Music by Will Meisel. No. P. C. A. certificate. Release date, October 16. Running time, 83 minutes. General (German) audience classification.

The Chemist

Excellent

Buster Keaton, he of the dead-pan, turns in some excellent comedy in this latest of his endeavors. As a chemist on the faculty of a University his inventive mind runs toward powders that dissolve food into liquids that make things twice as big or small. His best beloved brain child, however, is a powder that causes explosions without making any noise. Buster is alternately in hot and cold water with his inventions, and it all makes for some good comedy. Ably assisting Buster in his exploits are Marlyn Stuart, Earl Gilbert, Don McBride and Herman Lieb. Running time, 21 minutes.

Interesting

The content of any of this series can be considered reliable entertainment and this particular issue is no exception to that rule. There are views of animal surgery, amusing shots of hobby horse riding indulged in by a corps of full grown British soldiers in preparation for cavalry service; an interesting glimpse into the making of dry ice, the valued process of which resulted from one woman's curiosity; a demonstration on how to conceal messages in unlaid hen's eggs; scenes of an English town, built over mine shafts, slowly caving in. Running time, 8½ minutes.

Fair

This features the Cabin Kids and Toto, the clown, in a circus setting. The Cabin Kids, lacking the price of admission, sneak into the circus. They are caught in the act but Toto happens along and promises to entertain the kids if they will sing for him. The kids sing and Toto and other clowns reciprocate. Running time, 12 minutes.

Entertaining

A race horse track that runs across a public highway, the newest method of manufacturing tightly fitted jackets for frankfurters, the chaining of frolicsome locomotives to prevent any unscheduled nocturnal excursions; an inspection of the University of Santa Clara's seismographic apparatus; a glimpse into the future with the building of a new steamship dock at Booneville Dam, Oregon, for the time when that town, now 200 miles from the seacoast, will become a seaport, these are but a few of the many interesting bits of news shots that go to make up the grade of novel entertainment that can be expected from this short subject. Running time, 8⅔ minutes.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

HEIR TO TROUBLE: Ken Maynard, Joan Perry—Another western that played to a satisfactory week end business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WESTERN COURAGE: Ken Maynard, Geneva Mitchell—Maynard's westerns, old or new, are O. K. Running time, 58 minutes. Played September 19.—Harlan C. Dodd, Charlestown Theatre, Charlestown, Ind. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

EARTHWORM TRACTORS: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—Liked by those who saw it. Did not bring them in. Running time, 69 minutes. Played October 12-13.—Wilbur V. Cole, Park Theatre, Dexter, Maine. Small town patronage.

EARTHWORM TRACTORS: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—Surprising draw at the box office.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. General patronage.

HEARTS DIVIDED: Marion Davies, Dick Powell—Davies never meant anything here. Too bad to team her with Powell, who clicks. Now that everyone knows he can sing in French, let's have him in a good American young folks play.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOHEMIAN GIRL, THE: Laurel and Hardy—This comedy brought divided opinions on our anniversary. We enjoyed record crowds, but do not feel all credit should go to the picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Luise Rainer, Myra Loy—Did less than average business. Good picture but did not draw them in. Think that it should be cut down to two hours so that two shows a night can be run. Fans complain on length. Running time, 165 minutes. Played October 4-7.—Edward M. Starkey, Rex Theatre, Berlin, Wis. General patronage.

HERE COMES THE BAND: Ted Lewis and His Orchestra, Virginia Bruce—A great show for the masses, entertaining all the way through. Music, comedy relief and thrills make up program worth while. Little late on playing it but we are glad to play it when it is good. The most sad part is that we did not have any business. O. K., boys. Running time, nine reels. Played September 30.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

PETTICOAT FEVER: Robert Montgomery, Myrna Loy—Very good acting in a rather poor story. Beautiful scenery and plenty of comedy and seemed to please. Think this cast deserves a better story. Running time, 81 minutes. Played September 30-October 1.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PICCADILLY JIM: Robert Montgomery, Madge Evans—Montgomery, not so popular, gained in this one. It is the best that he has done. Clever dialogue and some subtle humorous touches here and there make it satisfactory for the average run of patrons.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SAN FRANCISCO: Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald, Spencer Tracy, Jack Holt—Did good business here as everywhere else, although played late. Running time, 111 minutes. Played October 7-10.—Wilbur V. Cole, Park Theatre, Dexter, Maine. Small town patronage.

THREE LIVE GHOSTS: Richard Arlen, Cecilia Parker—Our patrons thought this was one of the best comedy features that we have played for a long time. Running time, 62 minutes. Played September 21-23.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

WOMEN ARE TROUBLE: Stuart Erwin, Florence Rice—Scenario number 37, or it's been done 36 times before. My patrons tell me they get sick when they see another newspaper reporter or back stage picture. Running time, 68 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

CORONADO: Johnny Downs, Betty Burgess, Eddy Duchin and His Orchestra—A picture that will and should satisfy the most critical audience. Music, comedy and excitement all blended into 80 minutes of mirth. O. K. Running time, eight reels. Played October 2-3.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

GIRL OF THE OZARKS, THE: Virginia Weidler, Henrietta Crosman—They are all wet to waste the exhibitors' money on such trash as this, and if they really want to star Virginia Weidler let 'em put some money behind her and see if she does the trick (my opinion is she will not make box office), but such pictures as this one certainly make her chances pretty poor.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

PALM SPRINGS: Frances Langford, Smith Ballew—A very well gotten together entertainment, and if your patrons will come anyway, even though you do not have box office names, this one will please them once you get them in.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

POPPY: W. C. Fields, Rochelle Hudson—The Fields fans thought this was equal to any feature in which he has appeared. We seem to have quite a percentage of patrons who do not enjoy the Fields brand of comedy but those who do seem to eat it up. Played October 7-8.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

RHYTHM ON THE RANGE: Bing Crosby, Frances Farmer, Bob Burns, Martha Raye—You exhibitors who have this one yet to show have a great big treat coming for your patrons and you can depend on it. This one will pay the mortgage off of the old home. It is so dog-gone good it goes over with a bang. There is a new star in this who works like a Trojan and she certainly gets across. Let's have more of this star in pictures.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

THREE MARRIED MEN: Lynne Overman, William Frawley—A very good comedy drama that did average business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 2.—Edward M. Starkey, Rex Theatre, Berlin, Wis. General patronage.

Republic

FOLLOW YOUR HEART: Marion Talley, Michael Bartlett—This high class grand opera singing does not click at all. No drawing power. They sang so much and so long that it busted all the tubes in our amplifier. Running time, 10 reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

RED RIVER VALLEY: Gene Autry, Frances Grant—Payday helped to make biggest gross of any western we have played to date. Autry very popular here. Running time, 58 minutes. Played October 10.—Harlan C. Dodd, Charlestown Theatre, Charlestown, Ind. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

DON'T TURN 'EM LOOSE: Bruce Cabot, Louise Latimer, Lewis Stone—Fair enough gangster type. Lewis Stone has an added draw. Running time, seven reels.—E. C. Arehart, Princess Theatre, Odebolt, Iowa. General patronage.

LET'S SING AGAIN: Bobby Breen, Henry Armetta—Kid has a wonderful voice. They'll like him if you can get them in.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. General patronage.

LET'S SING AGAIN: Bobby Breen, Henry Armetta—Very satisfactory and many admired the screen work of young Bobby Breen. Attendance fair. Played October 3.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

MARY OF SCOTLAND: Katharine Hepburn, Fredric March—John Ford does a fine job. Here you have the outstanding picture released during the 1936 period. Hepburn does her finest performance. Fredric March is dynamic and does this as well as anything he has ever done. My first thought, when I received this picture for booking, was to play it cold and hope for the best. However, changed my mind and got behind it in the biggest way and, if it is worth anything to you, it flopped.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Victor Moore, Helen Broderick—You may not believe it but this one stacks up with anything this pair ever did for the screen or anything anyone ever did, for that matter. It is a 100 per cent audience picture, what I mean. It will please all of them and, what's more, it brings in plenty of money.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CAPTAIN JANUARY: Shirley Temple, Guy Kibbee, Slim Summerville, Buddy Ebsen—One of Shirley's best, which is recommendation enough. The combination of Temple-Kibbee-Summerville is hard to beat. Buddy Ebsen's dancing and his grotesque "map" make him one of the screen's best specialty actors. Running time, 77 minutes. Played October 2-3.—Harlan C. Dodd, Charlestown Theatre, Charlestown, Ind. Small town and rural patronage.

COUNTRY DOCTOR, THE: Dionne Quintuplets, Jean Hersholt, Slim Summerville—A very fine picture except for rather poor recording and Hersholt's low voice. Either the story alone or the babies' part was worth the money. Running time, 94 minutes. Played September 11-12.—Harlan C. Dodd, Charlestown Theatre, Charlestown, Ind. Small town and rural patronage.

GIRLS DORMITORY: Ruth Chatterton, Simone Simon, Herbert Marshall.—Good picture that did average business. Don't think so much of this new star, Simone Simon. Running time, 65 minutes. Played September 27.—Edward M. Starkey, Rex Theatre, Berlin, Wis. General patronage.

HALF ANGEL: Brian Donlevy, Frances Dee—Half good picture that pleased about half of my patrons. No star names and not a particularly good story. Running time, 69 minutes. Played October 3-4.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

KING OF BURLESQUE, THE: Warner Baxter, Alice Faye, Jack Oakie, Dixie Dunbar—Used this one to open our 1936-37 Movie Season and could not have made a much better choice. Baxter stole individual honors here last year and, though not up to his "Broadway Bill" standard, he received in this such excellent support from the rest of the cast that no one could possibly complain. Our first glimpse of Dixie Dunbar whets our appetite for more of her films. A poor print was the only complaint. Running time, 87 minutes. Played October 10.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Loretta Young, Robert Taylor—Well liked here. Both stars very popular.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. General patronage.

PRIVATE NUMBER: Loretta Young, Robert Taylor—One of the best pictures of the year from this company but struck two nights in rain and wind so the box office was around the zero mark. A good story and excellent cast pleased all who braved the rain to come. Running time, 79 minutes. Played September 26-27.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PROFESSIONAL SOLDIER: Victor McLaglen, Freddie Bartholomew—This was one dandy picture that pleased all who saw it. Business good. Running time, 78 minutes. Played September 17-19.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

SING, BABY, SING: Alice Faye, Adolphe Menjou —Died on this one. Not enough names in cast that mean anything. Running time, 90 minutes. Played September 28-30.—Edward M. Starkey, Rex Theatre, Berlin, Wis. General patronage.

STATE FAIR: Will Rogers, Janet Gaynor—We ran into rain and consequently the attendance was not what we had expected. However, it was slightly above normal. Our folks hate to see Rogers appearances ended. Played September 30-October 1.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

UNDER TWO FLAGS: Ronald Colman, Victor McLaglen, Claudette Colbert, Rosalind Russell—A drama that brings back memories of love and hardships of the warring nations. The four stars are to be congratulated on their splendid acting and performance. Recording poor. Photography too dark most places. Running time, 12 reels. Played September 27-28.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

UNDER TWO FLAGS: Ronald Colman, Victor McLaglen, Claudette Colbert, Rosalind Russell—A wonderful picture, everywhere but at the box office. Claudette Colbert gives a superb performance. The entire cast is good and the desert scenes are great. A picture with a foreign locale does not click here but in spite of the box office nosedive I still say it is a wonderful picture. Running time, 110 minutes. Played September 19-20.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WHITE FANG: Michael Whalen, Jean Muir—Very good. Not the draw that "Call of the Wild" was.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. General patronage.

United Artists

CALL OF THE WILD, THE: Clarke Gable, Loretta Young, Jack Oakie—The combination of Clark Gable, Loretta Young and Jack Oakie, plus Jack London's story of the far north make this a splendid picture and thanks to the 20th Century for producing it. Step on it, boys, and smile when they come in. They will praise you on the way out. Running time, 10 reels. Played October 4-5.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

I STAND CONDEMNED: Henry Baur, Lawrence Olivier, Penelope Dudley Ward—Was afraid of this but Money Night brought them out and no kicks. Better picture than I expected.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. General patronage.

LAST OF THE MOHICANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes, Henry Wilcoxon, Heather Angel, Bruce Cabot—Fair business. Pleased most. Good action picture. Running time, 94 minutes. Played October 5-6.—Wilbur V. Cole, Park Theatre, Dexter, Maine. Small town patronage.

LAST OF THE MOHICANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Binnie Barnes, Henry Wilcoxon, Heather Angel, Bruce Cabot—The picture I judge follows the story as it is written. It is well produced, plenty of action. They scalp, burn and massacre and what more could one want, except I think that the picture could have been shortened a little, and we had some walkouts, but mostly the elder patrons. These were towards the end of the picture and that bears out my opinion that there could have been a little less footage and still told the story. But if it is action that they crave, this is their meat. A little grizzly in some parts.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY: Freddie Bartholomew, Dolores Costello Barrymore, C. Aubrey Smith—Excellent picture. Freddie Bartholomew is certainly tops; Dolores Costello Barrymore gives a fine performance, while C. Aubrey Smith gives what I consider his best performance. This one pleased. Running time, 102 minutes. Played September 23-24.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MODERN TIMES: Charles Chaplin, Paulette Goddard—This is a hard picture to report. Did fair business. Some said it was wonderful and others said it was terrible. This was an average programmer sold as a special. Running time, 87 minutes. Played September 14-16.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

STRIKE ME PINK: Eddie Cantor, Ethel Merman, Sally Eilers—This one was not even up to Eddie Cantor's own average. The fans thought it was weak. Fair business. Running time, 100 minutes. Played October 1-3.—Beatty and Johnston, Crescent Theatre, Red Deer, Alberta, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

NOBODY'S FOOL: Edward Everett Horton, Glenda Farrell—Amusing and satisfactory. Business normal. Played September 26.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

PAROLE: Henry Hunter, Ann Preston—Good picture.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. General patronage.

YELLOWSTONE: Henry Hunter, Judith Barrett—The name drew. Not much to the story.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

GREEN PASTURES, THE: Rex Ingram—Liked very well in this town for a class picture. Business held up second day better than it was expected to. Running time, 77 minutes. Played October 7-8.—Wilbur V. Cole, Park Thetare, Dexter, Maine. Small town patronage.

SONS O' GUNS: Joe E. Brown, Joan Blondell—A fair military musical that did above average business. There are better Joe Brown pictures, but for a program it's real value.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TORTOISE AND THE HARE, THE: Silly Symphonies—Oh, boy, this is the first one of the Silly Symphonies we have run, and think it is the best one reel cartoon out. Running time, one reel.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CHANGING OF THE GUARD: Sybil Jason—This should be shown in every Canadian theatre. It's a tribute to the Scotch guards. A short subject that steals the show.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DAY'S JOURNEY, A: Our Own United States Series—Very good number. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

I LOVE TO SINGA: Merrie Melodies—One of the cleverest of this series. The numbers are all so clever we did not see why "Jack Bunny" gave them the gong. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

KING OF THE ISLANDS: Broadway Brevities—Not quite up to the standard of this series. Beautiful coloring and fairly entertaining. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WASH YOUR STEP: Hal LeRoy, Preisser Sisters—This musical would be suitable for a tieup for washing machine company.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FLASH GORDON: Buster Crabbe, Jean Rogers—Has been holding up pretty good.—Mrs. O. A. Jensen, Silver Hill Theatre, Oshkosh, Neb. General patronage.

Bombay Governor's Film Interview Is in Color

by K. G. GIDWANEY

in Karachi

His Excellency the Governor of Bombay and Lady Brabourne recently gave an interview which was recorded in color and sound by Franklin Granville Productions. In the course of the impromptu speech that was recorded, His Excellency said that he long had believed that the natural beauty of India was worthy of considerable attention from the point of view of motion picture photography, and he was very pleased to see that this was at last being taken in hand.

The Governor added that it was, naturally, a source of pleasure to him to observe that the first step in this direction was taken, not only in his province, but very rightly in the City of Bombay, "the gateway of India."

Steiner Heads Sales For American Tobis

Joseph Steiner, former sales representative for Producers Laboratories, has been appointed sales manager of American Tobis Corporation by W. E. Van Beveren, managing director. He will engage immediately upon a campaign for "La Kermesse Heroique," which will be nationally released with the English title of "Carnival in Flanders."

RKO Completes Plans For Two New Theatres

Plans for a 3,000 seat theatre to be built at 96th Street and Broadway, New York, have been announced by the RKO circuit. The site was purchased 20 years ago by the B. F. Keith circuit but was never utilized. A second house will be built on the site of the old Grand Opera House on West 23rd Street, New York.

MGM Lists 17 Pictures For Next Four Months

A schedule including 17 pictures has been announced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to be released before January 1, 1937. The pictures, to be released at the rate of four a month, are based on outstanding plays and novels in addition to a number of original stories. Included will be starring vehicles for Greta Garbo, Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Robert Taylor, Jean Harlow, William Powell, Myrna Loy, Elissa Landi and Wallace Beery.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of theatre receipts for the calendar week ended October 17, 1936, from 109 theatres in 18 major cities of the country was $1,178,073, an increase of $32,686 over the total for the preceding week ended October 10, 1936, when 108 theatres in 18 large cities aggregated $1,145,387.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

THOSE BRIGHT YOUNG MEN

It's bad enough the idea was used at all, but what makes it harder to take is that the men responsible forwarded copies of the throwaway with their names across the back so as to make sure the idea would be properly credited in these pages, if and when.

Well, we're not going to identify the manager or the publicist, but it is hoped that the erring brothers on reading these lines will realize the boner, proceed to kick themselves around the block and then spray each other with a good disinfectant.

To put over the date on a recent release taken from one of the ace best sellers the bright young men had reprints made of one of the book's most torrid pages—a passage entirely ignored in the screening—and overprinted in red the following cute copy: "Every thrilling page brought to life on the screen in, etc., etc."—which is obviously untrue.

The bright young men evidently are unaware of the progress made by the industry in repressing the ebullience of over-imaginative press agents in the direction of advertising that can be modeled into ammunition by reform groups intent upon no less than 100 per cent screen purity.

And further, the same B.Y.M. should be kept after school as punishment for their plain dumbness to write upon the blackboard at least 1,000 times:

"Don't sell what you can't deliver; don't advertise what you haven't got."

AS WE WERE SAYING

In last week's issue this pen had occasion to expound on the virtues of enthusiasm and how the lad who bubbled over with it stood a very good chance of getting some place. What we had in mind might be further graphically illustrated by a letter from Mort Margulies, recently appointed manager of the Famous Players-Canadian College Theatre, in Toronto, which to read would fair take your breath away and drop years from aging shoulders. Just to give you an idea, and boy, isn't it gusty?:

"Business is swell, keeps getting better and that's no bull. All the palms go to the staff who have that College spirit, 'Try, Try.' Operators, ushers, cleaners, everyone wants and does outside work . . . anything to make this bigger and better than any suburban in town.

"We pick out a house over and above our own and point for it. When our place looks brighter, better, cleaner and business surpasses them, we aim for the next baby in line. I know it's the old hop-up, but as long as I believe in it and the staff agrees we're going to keep right on. . . . We hold a weekly staff meeting at which I'm the senior partner in charge and the rest junior partners, and we pull this old barn to pieces trying to find out what will make it tick better. . . ."

It's the hop-up, okay, but as long as the boy believes in it, as long as his staff believes in it, the hot pepperino is still tops with this department wherever theatremen spill over with the kind of enthusiasm that translates into plenty of extra dough-dough at the boxoffice.

HARRISON DECLARES HIMSELF

Any success this department enjoys stems only from the cooperation given freely and enthusiastically by the members who in exchange for ideas made available through the contributions of brother-showmen, send in their own reports to help the other fellow.

It is gratifying to know that the Round Table has also been of assistance in promoting the fortunes of those who do not hesitate to credit this department for helping them up the ladder. For instance, there's Ed Harrison, City Manager for the Gordon and Lockwood interests in Waterville, Maine, and for a long time, a regular Round Tabler contributor. Sez Ed:

"The theatre managers throughout the country are crazy for not taking advantage of your department. I have had two jobs offered me and I know the reason was mainly through their seeing my contributions in your pages."

Ed's about said all there is to say on the subject.

When the projectionist at the Rivoli Theatre, Hastings, Nebraska, in error started to run the following week's picture, Manager Don Fuller had the film pulled after the first reel and explained to the audience they had just witnessed a preview of the coming show.

Any man who can think as fast as that should have no difficulty in squaring himself with the missus.

Schedules Show After School For St. Louis "Dream" Date

For mass appeal in his campaign on the continuous date for "Dream" at the Missouri, St. Louis, Manager Harry Kendrick aimed his drive at popularizing the number of stars, the players given top billing in trailers and star head cuts featured in the ads. Front was handled in a similar manner and 40 by 60 boards in prominent locations emphasized the star stills rather than the costumed shots.

Board of Education heads cooperated by writing to heads of all schools and superintendent aided the cause with letters of introduction to each principal who personally supervised the distribution of student tickets. These were to be redeemed at the box-office and good at any show. As it was assumed that the students studying Shakespeare would see the picture without any special urging, copy on the tickets was directed to other school groups. This angle was carried further with a special show each afternoon that Kendrick timed to start 45 minutes after schools closed. Given wide publicity in the student publications the drive for business from this direction brought lots of extra business during the usually slack afternoon period.

Members of the staff addressed meetings of the Better Films Council, Child's Conservation Conference and other important organizations where blocks of the student tickets were distributed immediately after the theatre representative finished his sales talk. Some of the local colleges and high schools granted special credits to English classes for best essays on the picture. Copies of the study guide were presented to English teachers two weeks ahead and reservations made for those desiring to bring classes.

Special broadcasts prepared by the Kurtzman Agency were also credited for a goodly slice of the returns and the newspaper campaign both in advertising and publicity was in keeping with the smart campaign put on by Kendrick assisted by M. V. Alch, staff publicist.

Studio Preview Inaugurated By Chellew in Seattle

C. C. Chellew, Liberty Theatre, Seattle, Wash., has inaugurated what he describes as a "studio preview" each Friday night, with the theatre presenting a "world premiere preview" of a major studio feature, title of which is not announced to the public in advance. There is no extra admission charge and patrons who attend the screening are entitled to remain for the theatre's regular program immediately following.

Popular "Hour" Broadcast from Theatre Stage

Sponsored by a leading Dominion brewer and broadcast weekly over a 14-station hookup from the stage of the Capitol Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, one of Canada's most popular programs is now being utilized by Manager C. T. Spencer to return capacity grosses on Friday nights without any extra costs to the theatre.

The promotion was effected by Spencer through his harmonious contacts with local station CKOC, which produces the program, the theatreman being able to convince the executives and sponsors that it would be a smart move to avail themselves of the theatre's 2,500 seats to take care of those who would be attracted by this unusual extra feature in addition to the regular show.

Grosses Jump Almost Double

Broadcast runs from 8:30 to 9 o'clock, stations running from the east coast to the Canadian middle west and including Toronto and Montreal. Program consists of a 35-piece military band, skits and guest stars and the station underwrites all costs even to the stage hands necessary to put on the show. Theatre of course is credited in all the announcements which aids in building grosses and prestige.

Spencer says that the increase in admissions on the broadcast nights has so far boosted the day's receipts nearly 100 per cent and offers it as his answer to "what to do about radio opposition?"

Louie Books "Henry the VIII" With "Nine Days a Queen"

Neat stunt was put over recently by Louie Charninsky, Capitol Theatre, Dallas, Tex., on "Nine Days a Queen," by booking "Henry the VIII" and advertising the engagement as an unbroken continuity of 29 years of English history. Special premiere was held with British consul attending along with a group of English residents, with papers making much of the premiere.

Reading Marathon Stops Traffic On 'Anthony Adverse'

Up in Portland, Oregon, that hot-house of ace exploitation those Hamrick-Evergreen theatremen recently developed a highly unusual stunt on the date for "Anthony Adverse" at the Paramount Theatre, in the form of a reading marathon.

The city's leading department store came in on the slant by planting a man reading the book aloud in a main window, p.a. system hooked in to carry the stunt out to the curious crowds. Store went heavy in ads to publicize the gag and contest was tied in with newspaper coupons inviting readers to guess the number of hours and minutes it would take the reader to finish the 1,224-page book. There were plenty of folks about to look on.

The marathon was part of the campaign put on by Portland Hamrick-Evergreen ad head Hal Daigler, Paramount manager, with the cooperation of Arnold Albert, WarBros.' western zone exploitation director.

Stunt Worked in Other Spots

Same slant was worked by Manager Ray Drachman at the Fox Theatre, in Tucson, Arizona, with the assistance of the ubiquitous Albert. Photo to right illustrates the workings with the champ reader comfortably ensconced in a store window with copy announcing that an attempt was being made to break the world's record time for the marathon. The Tucson tiein was hooked to the book as well as the picture with half the window given over to poster, cutouts and copies of the photoplay edition of the best-seller.

Albert has been working the gag in one form or another in numerous spots in his territory and reports it a click in every situation. Suggested in the press book originally when Arnold was editor of the Warner Bros. department, the slant has found favor in many situations.

F.P.-CANADIAN ARTIST APPEARS WITH VALLEE

Harmonizing on the front porch with a trio of friends, Bill Bounsall, ace artist of Jim Nairn's Famous Players-Canadian publicity staff, was heard by a Toronto adman who put the quartet on the air under the name "The Swingers." While singing at the Toronto Exposition, their harmonies appealed to Rudy Vallee who spotted them for a date on his broadcast and shortly after wired them to come on to New York.

"The funny thing," says Nairn, "is that hundreds of guys have been battering on the door of the big time for years and these kids walk in the back door."

Evergreen Managers Win Contest Prizes

Prize winners in the third quarter Evergreen State Theatres, Inc., Seattle, Wash., contest were announced at the quarterly division conference of executives and managers of the Fox West Coast subsidiary.

First prize in "A" division went to Frank L. Newman, Jr., of the Orpheum theatre in Portland. Al Baker of the Fox theatre in Spokane headed the "B" division. Ronald Harrington of the Portland Oriental theatre was top man in the "G" division and the "D" group of houses was headed by Jim O'Connell of the Rex theatre in Eugene, Oregon.

Al Rosenberg's Washington state division took honors in that classification, heading Al Finkelstein's Oregon division and John Hamrick's Seattle division in the order named.

First Time Serialization Planted for "Dodsworth"

Credit goes to Hal Winston, Palace Theatre, Stamford, Conn., for planting a serialization of "Dodsworth" in the Stamford Advocate, reported first time for the paper. Serializations were also planted in other papers in neighborhoring towns with special story and art in the Sunday Bridgeport Herald.

Capitalizing on the annual sale of leading department store, Hal promoted entire first page of store's bulletin and arranged that first 300 customers buying a stipulated amount of merchandise receive guest tickets.

Command Performance Held By Patterson for "Scotland"

In selling "Mary of Scotland," Fred Patterson, Palace Theatre, Dallas, Texas, turned it into a command performance, with Queen Elizabeth of the Texas Centennial officiating. At midnight, the queen with her procession all in full costume, including trumpeters, ladies in waiting, page boys, court musician, etc. marched to the theatre pausing at entrance to have newsreel shot. Special throne was planted at entrance upon which the Queen sat and as each of her entourage entered, they paid her homage before being seated.

Town crier was stationed in lobby where he announced over p.a. system celebrities as they arrived. Of particular interest at the premiere was the appearance of Ginger Rogers and Sally Rand. Immediately after the arrival of the last celebrity, the Queen left her throne and entered the theatre, entire audience arose as she proceeded to her box and when seated, she gave the royal command for the showing to begin.

Invitations for the premiere were done in old English style, bearing the official Elizabethan crest and signed by an exact signature reproduction of the Queen's, rolled in scroll fashion, they were tied with royal purple ribbon.

THEATREMEN EXPLOIT SOUND INSTALLATIONS

Excellent Campaigns Put Over in Various Spots Publicize New Mirrophonic Equipment

Coincident with the publication of the article on exploitation of new equipment in the September issue of Better Theatres, a number of campaigns have been forwarded by men in the field reporting what they did to put over the installation of Western Electric's new Mirrophonic sound system.

Foremost among these is the excellent coverage obtained by Manager Wayne Sweeney, La Porte, La Porte, Ind., who personalized his drive in the same manner as he is in the habit of getting behind his ace pictures. Outstanding was his front (see photo), the top line, "A Thrill for Your Ears," made more effective by being covered with pieces of broken mirror. The circular panels were lit from behind and the entire color scheme in yellow and black.

Surrounding street was covered on both sides with flags and pennants, bumper strips distributed and window cards posted in a radius of 20 miles. City was covered with postal-sized heralds explaining merits of the new system and the heralds were also given out to patrons leaving the theatre on opening. Windshield stickers also commanded attention.

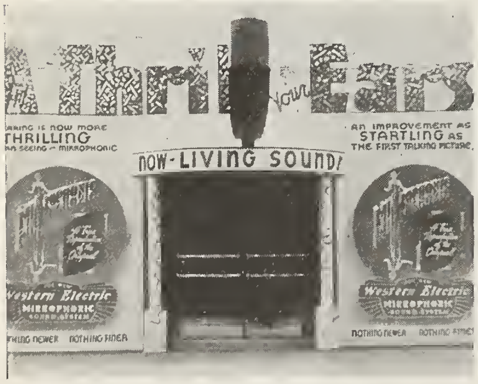
Newspaper drive started 12 days ahead with over 200 inches used to launch the equipment in the public mind and phone calls made to hundreds of prominent personages day ahead. Important officials headed by the Mayor were invited to the opening.

Hamilton Stages Exhibition

Topping the advance to signalize his new Mirrophonic installation, Al Hamilton, of the Empress, South Norwalk, Ct., had a lobby exhibition of all the new equipment which was placed alongside of a showing of oldtime projectors which Al was able to borrow through the good offices of Herbert Griffin, of International Projector. Among these was a projector used in South Norwalk back in 1907.

Further tiein was made by Hamilton with his newspapers wherein a full column story was run on the new equipment that explained the workings and other interesting facts included in story was reference to "Richardson Week," which starts Oct. 24.

In Detroit, Earl J. Hudson, United Detroit Theatres' publicity chief, tied in the new installation to a change in policy at the Madison Theatre which, with the improved sound system, went first-run. Topped by a vigorous newspaper campaign, the drive was backed with heralds, window cards and a very novel ballyhoo sound truck. Series of broadcasts also helped to create further interest.



Sweeney's Front for New Sound

Lawler Runs Short

To reveal the qualities of the new sound, Ralph Lawler, at the Newman, Kansas City, ran special shorts and sequences during the regular shows. In his lobby and out front, Lawlor featured the system with the marquee valance given over entirely to it. Newspaper advertising was in keeping and in the publicity breaks was full mention in prominent critic's daily column.

Erpi executives who cooperated on these campaigns under the supervision of C. W. Bunn, general sales manager, include Stanley W. Hand, Bert Sanford, C. L. Stong and Gar O'Neill.

Score cards from the club were overprinted with picture title, and cooperating sports store devoted window to display of golf bags, tournament and picture copy.

Stickers with playdates were pasted on roto section of Sunday paper carrying "Scotland" pictorial, local lecturer used the film as basis of his talk and library made up a book display with card giving playdates, etc.

Freucht's Campaign Plugs "Adverse"

An effective campaign on "Anthony Adverse" was staged by Henry Freucht, Shea's Buffalo, a month prior to opening, with a huge parade of bannered cars, coloring contest planted in paper and personal letters were sent out to school principals, teachers and heads of clubs. Special half-page co-op ad was secured through department store and numerous window displays in leading shops about town.

Postal Telegraph distributed slips with all outgoing messages week ahead and in exchange for a lobby display of General Electric radios, theatre received free plugs on their radio program. Fan photos of Fredric March were distributed by chain shoe stores, heralds wrapped in packages by department store in a tieup on "Adverse" fashions and window strips used by cigarette distributors in leading tobacco stores.

Ozark Hills Folk Brought to Town For "Swingtime"

True enough, the presence of Governor-elect Bailey of Arkansas, the mayor, state representatives, chamber of commerce officials and other civic dignitaries at the premiere of Manager Clyde Smith's "Swingtime" date at the Paramount, Hot Springs, Ark., brought a lot of attention. But more curiosity and comment was aroused by the group of shoeless natives Smith brought down from the Ozark hills and paraded around town in their mule-drawn cart (see photo). Cart was bannered: "We haven't been out of the hills in 30 years, but we had to come to town to see," etc. The natives stopped as many folks as did the Packard parade day ahead with team of dancers dressed as the stars doing their steps on platform in front of theatre after the parade. Team also won Smith's "Swingtime" contest put on four days in advance and demonstrated in the lobby and on stage.

Packard cars were supplied for free rides to the theatre and were tied in to a local safety campaign put on with the police. In addition, Clyde promoted the use of a "Swingtime" street car for the same purpose. Local debutantes were used in various ways to plug the date, being photographed at the airport during the cross-country air races, on the observation platform of a Rock Island train named "Swingtime Special."

Newspaper campaign included nearly 200 inches of co-op ads and to show that Smith missed few bets he even tied in with the local sheriff to hang cards from the jail windows reading, "My last request. To See 'Swingtime' and to ride the new Packard." All in all, little was missed by this showman in his smart entry that was voted the solo First Mention in the September Awards.

Berlin Exhibitors Given Projection Certificates

Examinations Required to Enable Theatremen to Judge Quality of Performance

by J. K. RUTENBERG
from Berlin

Evidently it is not taken for granted in Berlin that a showman is entirely familiar with every department of the theatre as exhibitors are required to have in addition to a certificate of projection ability another that certifies to his knowledge of general operation. Also interesting is that advertising is confined mostly to bills and posters at street corners and theatre entrances. Window displays as they are known on this side are "out" as shops dealing in other merchandise are prohibited from co-operating on these tie-ins.

The article on Berlin continues the second series of the Showman's Travelogue now current in the Round Table. A-MIKE

Berlin is in any respect the center of the German industry. It houses the head offices of all the big and minor enterprises in production, distribution and exhibition. With only one exception the studios are located at various places of the city and the total industry is directed and managed from here.

The city itself has a population of more than four millions and is, therefore, the third greatest city of the world, although not from the standpoint of area. In this direction it is surpassed by Rome, Rio de Janeiro, Los Angeles and Brisbane in Australia. The area of Berlin is quoted with 883,500 square kilometers, which is essential to know from the standpoint of transportation of the masses of the population.

Called Industrial City

Berlin is an industrial city in the real meaning of the word. More than a half of the total population is engaged in industrial works and in minor industrial enterprises. Another 30 per cent is engaged in commerce and trade, eight per cent in administration, military services, ecclesiastic organizations and other professions, and less than one per cent in agriculture.

Forty-five per cent of the population are workmen of all classes, a little more than 30 per cent are employees and officials (who, contrary to the workmen, get their salary monthly instead of a weekly payment) and 15 per cent are in managing positions or in own companies.

Little Unemployment Found

Unemployment is less than three per cent of the total population. An increase in unemployment is avoided by a provision which makes an increase in population from outside impossible.

Connections are satisfactory. Two hundred street car lines, almost a hundred bus lines, the tubes with a wide-spread network of rails and more than a hundred stations and the railways connect the North with the South and the West with the East.

Taxes have been very hard in recent years, amounting to averagely 25 per cent of the total income; that means that at an income of say 300 reichsmarks the employee got only 225 marks paid. The rest went to the Government, to the local authorities and to other charges such as unemployment fund, insurance against illness and others. This burden has been diminished by the new government and is at less than 15 per cent of the total income.

Competition has made it necessary for the workmen to receive an adequate education and skill. Unskilled employees are not favored and therefore the percentage of skilled men is increasing steadily. Evening schools, education by broadcasting and preferred entrance to all kinds of training and educating institutions is helping a lot in this connection. Wages are not so bad. A stenographer gets from 120 reichmarks up to 250 marks and more, so that after the deduction of all charges for renting, living, general expenses, food and feeding there might rest an overhead surplus of 20 to 50 reichmarks monthly which is used for entertainment, travelling and other distractions. (The mark is about 40 cents in American money.)

Berlin has 398 cinemas with a total seating capacity of 200,286 places which are all wired and playing daily twice or even more. The admission prices are fixed at 55 pfennigs (equal to 14 cents at par) at the lowest and range up to several marks in the de luxe theatres. The first-class houses are, with some exceptions only, located in the western part of the city, especially around the "Gedächtniskirche," which has, therefore, become a terminus technici for the film industry. Around this church, which was built in memory of the Emperor William I, the best equipped and most up-to-date Berlin cinemas are located, such as the "Ufa Palast am Zoo," the "Capitol," the "Gloria Palast," the "Marmorhaus," "U. T. Kurfürstendamm."

LOBBY SETPIECE. For "San Francisco", N. J. Morgan, Rylander Theatre, Americus, Ga., constructed this setpiece made of beaverboard with cutawl. Green lights lit entire display.

Most films, regardless of their origin, are started in these few cinemas and are generally shown here for several weeks before they get into common distribution. The Ufa Palast am Zoo, the Gloria Palast and the U. T. Kurfürstendamm have been in the hands of the Ufa company for considerable time already. Recently the two other houses, the Capitol and the Marmorhaus, changed hands and came also under Ufa influence, so that, with two or three exceptions only, the leading Berlin premiere or first run houses are controlled and operated by the Ufa, which is producing, renting and exhibiting altogether and disposes of two vast studios, the one in Neubabelsberg in the southwest and the second, the Tempelhof Studios, south of the airport of Berlin.

American films are trade-shown in the Capitol, the Marmorhaus, and partly in the U. T. Kurfürstendamm before they are generally released. The practice is that these U. S. films are first shown in their original version with super-imposed German titles and after a while, when they proved a success, are post-synchronized in German studios.

The dubbing costs are from 10,000 reichsmarks upwards, not including the dubbing charges which must be paid to the Tobis company.

The higher classes of the population prefer the western suburbs of which Charlottenburg is the greatest one with more than a million of inhabitants. The public generally preferring first run houses mostly use the bus to reach the cinema because the parking of motor cars has become a serious problem in some places of the city.

No Downtown Parking Lots

Berlin has at present 250,000 motor cars and motor-cycles and between five and seven o'clock, the time of the opening of most cinemas, the streets are overcrowded with cars and vehicles of all kinds so that the custom has developed that unless a private driver is at hand to take the car home during the two hours of the program to use the bus or the one of the numerous street cars or taxis to attend the cinemas. There are no special parking places in the inner cities. Local authorities have, however, permitted the parking in side streets to keep the bigger roads free for the continuous traffic.

The cinema owners are united in a trade association which is called here "Fach-gruppe Filmtheater" and makes a part of the State Film Chamber. Membership is obligatory all over the Reich. Subdivisions of this organization exist in the various provinces. The legislation for the picture house is made by the State Film Chamber, the president of which is Professor Dr. Lehnich, former State Minister in Baden.

The State Film Chamber has issued provisions regulating the admission prices providing a minimum charge. Soldiers, exveterans and unemployed persons favor a reduction which might be 50 per cent of the original price. The State Film Chamber equally controls the erection of new houses throughout the Reich, thereby preventing redundancy. This Chamber is the professional organization of all film personalities. In its subdivision it lists the total of the German film industry beginning with production and ending with the technical companies dealing with film theatres.

Exhibitors Must Be Members

Only those are allowed to be active in film trade or business who are members of the State Film Chamber. The Editors of the trade papers are excluded. They are on their part members of the State Press Chamber and therefore uninfluenced by the Film Chamber so far as their reporting and criticism is concerned. There are various Chambers in existence, starting with the Film Chamber, the Press Chamber, the broadcasting Chamber, the Chamber for writers and authors, the stage Chamber, the Music Chamber, the Chamber for active stage employees and so on. All these Chambers are united in the State Culture Chamber (Reichs-Kultur-Kammer) the President of which is Dr. Goebbels, State Minister of Propaganda and Public Enlightenment.

Now back to the theatre proprietor. A special provision of his trade association makes it necessary that the owner of a cinema house is in the possession of a certificate to run his house and of a second certificate which shows that he is able to project his pictures. For this purpose he must undergo a special training which is ended by an examination. It is not the purpose of this provision to replace the projectionist in the booth but the owner of the house shall be able to judge the quality of the performance from the technical side and be able to judge the eventual necessity of modernization of his enterprise.

The projectionist must equally undergo a special training before being admitted. The provision rules that he must have a practical training of at least six months under the supervision of a skilled projectionist in a public theater. After the termination of this practical work he is allowed to enter a training school the successful attendance of which is proved by a certificate.

The attendance of cinema houses has naturally increased in correspondence with the decrease of unemployment. In March 1936 for instance the total admission amounted to 5,428,673 persons for the 398 Berlin cinemas. The corresponding month of the preceding year showed only 5,000,629 persons. The 5,428,673 visitors paid altogether 4,318,167 Reichsmarks at the boxoffice, the State got 292,414 reichsmarks in the form of entertainment tax, so that an average of only 6.77 percent of the gross income had to be paid in the form of taxes. There are no other charges on the cinema in the form of taxes, especially no local tax deductions.

Equipment Found Satisfactory

The technical state of the Berlin cinemas is with a few exceptions satisfactory. The electric power supply is taken from the mains that is alternating current at a voltage of 220 volts. The arc is generally operated by direct current making the installation of converters or rectifiers in the cinema houses necessary. The projectors are German make (delivered by Zeiss-Ikon A. G., Klangfilm—A. E. G., Bauer, Nitzsche and others.) The amplifiers are delivered by two companies only which have a monopoly on cinema equipment (Klangfilm and Lorenz). A horn unit is mostly used consisting of two horns generally, one for the higher and the other one for the lower frequencies. In up-to-date cinemas a wave range of 10,000 cycles is covered by a system which is similar to the wide-range system of the Western Electric or the High Fidelity of the R. C. A.

Cinemas in Berlin play mostly twice or three times a day starting at seven or at five o'clock respectively. There is a tariff for projectionists and cinema employees in Berlin which must not be undergone. It ranges from forty marks a week for projectionists upward to 75 marks a week for first class houses (equal to 75 U. S. Dollars at par per month).

Some houses are ventilated, although not all. The average seating capacity might be around 600, although there are houses in Berlin which seat 2,500 and more up to 3,000.

Cleaning of the houses is done in the forenoon where most cinemas are empty. The Ufa Palast at the Zoo has the greatest projection length (from booth to screen) with 75 meters (240 feet).

Advertising by cinemas is done by bills and posters at street corners and at the entrance. Advertising in shops dealing in other materials is prohibited. The bill posters are in the majority delivered by the renter and measure three feet by six. They are all colored. Advertising in dailies or trade papers is done by the renter, who some days before the premiere, advertises the performance quoting the respective cinema house. Generally some days after the premiere the distributor publishes in the trade papers an extract of the critics if the film is good.

There are two daily film trade papers, the greater and more important one is the "Film-Kurier" which is regarded as the semi-official paper. The "Film-Kurier" has a daily circulation of 8,150 copies. Second one is the "Licht-Bild-Bühne" with a daily circulation of 3,700 copies. There are five or six weekly publications devoting entirely to the film interests, one of which, the "Film" is published in Berlin also and has a circulation of about 4,000 copies.

Reviews Not Printed Same Day

Critics are published of all films shown and appear the day after the premiere. A recent law by Dr. Goebbels forbids the publication of the review in night papers appearing the same day, reason for this provision being that the commercial and artistic value of the pictures shown makes a responsible judgment necessary which is impossible when the papers is issued some hours after the show already.

The American film industry is regularly discussed in all German film trade papers and there is scarcely one issue in which no article relating to American film conditions, actors, directors and companies is published. The restrictions on the export of foreign currencies makes it difficult for the minor papers however to have an own correspondent in the United States. This difficulty, however, is overcome, because the United States dispose of excellent trade papers of which the Motion Picture Herald is often quoted.

In consideration of the fact that only 10 percent of the total German population is cinema-minded competition is not so hard. A considerable decrease in cinema attendance is only felt in summer where a great part of the employees takes a vacation. The stage is no serious competition for the cinema. Nor are open-air sports, races and vaudeville.

The seating capacity is only one-twentieth of the total population which is considered as a very good percentage for capitals. The attendance is normal and by no means necessary to be whipped up.

Stage shows are rarely given, the programme consists of a news reel (which is delivered by Ufa, Bavaria Film A. G. and Fox Movietone), one cultural film, sometimes a short and one feature film. Double-

Artist in Window Paints "Adverse" Signs for Morris

Out in Bakersfield, Cal., Walter Morris at the Warner Nile Theatre on "Anthony Adverse" tied up local paint store for window in which artist was stationed painting picture title on special signs for lobby use.

Local jeweler featured window display of replica of Napoleonic coach as used by Adverse in the film, letters were mailed to all literary club members, ministers and little theatre groups and cooperative windows arranged with beauty shops, department stores and others.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Live Baby Gag Used by Rhines

Elmore H. Rhines, Mayfair Theatre, Bridgton, Maine, has been putting over various stunts to plug his attractions, one of which was the good old "live baby" gag which he advertised in the usual teaser manner. Night of awarding, Elmore addressed a letter to the new mother of the baby, which was read from the stage to the audience and winner, a man.

Another stunt was a miniature wedding held on the stage, with kiddies participating and Rhines will forward details to any inquiring members.

Institutional Copy Sells New Policies

Campaign inaugurated in Elmira, N. Y., by Warner Theatres district chief, R. E. Crabill, to establish new policies and to stimulate business in general was featured by a strong advertising drive in addition to heavy billing. Reproduced to left and right are two-column institutional ads laid out by Crabill stressing the entertainment, new policies, prices and coming dates.

These displays were followed by individual ads for each of the three houses (Strand, Regent, Keeney), with attractive art work credited to Manager Irwin Kay, of the Strand, who also sold the ads for a smash double-truck co-op announcing the reopening of the redecorated and newly equipped theatre. Manager Wally Folkins, of the Regent is credited for another double-truck for his house, the tiein hooked to a contest offering cash and prizes to those finding the single ad in the co-op wherein the name of the theatre could be formed from the copy the greatest number of times without using the same letter twice.

Letter Carriers Deliver Giant "Inspector" Poster Letters

Adapting a suggestion in the "Postal Inspector" pressbook, Rodney Pantages, Pantages Theatre, Hollywood, with J. Lloyd Dearth and Jack Gross, RKO Hillstreet, Los Angeles, worked out a giant letter stunt (see photo) that proved a real attraction.

Following a special showing for local postoffice employees, arrangements were made for delivery of giant letters to each theatre. These were prepared from compo board by house artists and addressed to "postal inspector" and individual members of the cast. Special deliveries were made to the theatres on scheduled times during the day. Press book recommends posting these letters at the base of mail boxes immediately following a mail pickup to insure their staying on view until next collection.

Score-Guessing Contest Sells "Adverse" for Grady

With Texas Tech and Texas Christian playing their opening football game on the same day as Hal Grady's prevue of "Anthony Adverse" at the Palace Theatre, Lubbock, Tex., Hal tied in with the local daily on a guessing contest calculated to discover the winning team with guest tickets going to first ten coming closest to the final score.

Window display of Mojud hosiery was secured, department store distributed books of lipstick tissues with theatre plug on cover, and score cards at local football games carried picture copy.

Governor's Son Hosted At Gilman's Mouse Party

Sam Gilman, Loew's, Harrisburg, Pa., staged a swell campaign in celebration of Mickey Mouse's birthday, making Gov. Earle's small son, whose birthday fell on the same day, guest of honor at the birthday show. Sam also secured wire from Mickey congratulating the lad on the joint birthday celebration. For street bally, youngster dressed as Mickey Mouse distributed heralds on the special showing at schools.

EXHIBITION IS SOUND

features are prohibited, the second film must be inferior to 1,600 meters in length. The public of the de Luxe theatre is usually the same. The average film fan is favoring "his" house where the film is shown after a while. So far as first run houses showing the film at first (premiere) is concerned the Ufa is predominating the field. With two exceptions only all the premiere houses are controlled by Ufa which is at the same time the largest holder of cinema assets. Ufa controls more than 105 cinemas in the Reich. Other circuits are of a much smaller importance. Mostly two or three houses are operated by one proprietor.

Average Run Three Weeks

American films are generally started in the Western part of the city where there is a greater English speaking population. The average run, which is of course dependent on the financial success of the respective film, is three weeks. After this time the general release is started throughout the Reich. There are cases however in which a film is shown three months or even more before it is shown generally. The sensation of all U. S. films ever shown in this country is the Metro film "Broadway Melody" which is in its fifth month already and still going big. This film has even surpassed the successful Greta Garbo film "Queen Christine" which is said to have grossed 1.5 million Reichmarks in Germany.

The general expenses of the film theaters are given as follows:

Film rent	30	percent
Renting for the house when the proprietor is not owner	10.9	"
Insurance	1.9	"
Entertainment tax	9.0	"
Advertisements	9.0	"
Staff	13.3	"
Depreciation	5.5	"
Others (profit)	14.4	"
	100.00	percent

With the decrease of the entertainment tax the price of the admission was increased. In 1925 the average admission amounted to 0.69 Reichsmarks at an entertainment tax of 20 percent of the total income. In the following years the admission prices were slightly raised while on the other side the tax burden was constantly lowered.

As already mentioned above Ufa owns most of the first-run houses. The Berlin first-run theatres, listed according to the seating capacity, are as follows:

Mercedes Palast Neukolln, 2,500, Manager, H. Knapp; Ufa Palast am Zoo, 2,325; Primus Palast Neukolln, 2,100, Manager, H. Knapp; Atrium, 2,002, Manager, H. Star; Ufa Theater Wagnitzstreet, 1,909; Lichtburg Berlin N, 1,900, Manager, H. Knapp; Titania Palast Steglitz, 1,900, Manager, Eugen Moll; Stella Palast Neukolln, 1,870, Manager, Franz Woelke; Germania Palast, 1,835 seats and Europa Palast, with 1,834.

Distribution of films is generally done on a percentage base with a certain guarantee depending on the average business of the house. At the start of a picture the first-run house is provided with two prints regularly and after several weeks when the respective film is entering the second-run houses the number of prints is increased to 10 to 15. After the termination of these runs the number of prints is increased again and sometimes the same film is shown in 50 to 60 Berlin houses simultaneously. The highest number of prints ever attained in the history of the German film industry was 375, it was one of the first silent films. The average number of prints is standing at 80 to 120 per picture.

Much is done for the protection of the prints. They are impregnated before they get into distribution and after a run of averaging 350 times the prints are withdrawn from circulation and rejuvenated which is done by a special company in Berlin (Recono G.m.b.H.) which has a subsidiary in New York. Eighty percent of the total output is impregnated and rejuvenated.

Reel Lengths Limited

A special provision of the State Film Chamber limits the reel length to 600 meters (equal to 2,000 feet) so that two projectors are necessary for an uninterrupted run. The price of the projector (for picture and sound) ranges from 2,000 Reichsmarks up to 8,000 Reichsmarks according to the output of the equipment and the size of the picture house. Picture projector and sound equipment are generally not delivered by one company because two big enterprises have a monopoly on sound equipment (Klangfilm and Lorenz). The servicing of the machines in the booth is not included in the above mentioned price and not obligatory. Machines are bought and not rented. Smaller repair work is done by the projectionists, greater ones by the servicing station of one of the big companies in the field.

The German film industry is at present pretty sound especially the exhibition branch. The summer months are generally used for the overhauling and modernization. The safety provisions of the local police authorities are very strict and theatres are regularly inspected by the experts of the police department. No smoking is allowed. Impregnation of curtains and draperies must be done each year.

Organs, but No Vaudeville

Special attention is paid to the projection booth where everything must be done to prevent a fire. On the part of the State Film Chamber the non-flame film which is fire-proof will shortly be delivered to the picture theaters, first as a test, later the prints will regularly be on fire-proof material.

The present problem of the German film theatre is the color-film.

Vaudeville is unusual in German picture houses, special bands are rare likewise and are only seen in special matinees on Sunday morning. The bigger theatres have organs which will be played before and between the shows.

Exton's Smart Double Feature Ad

Controversial Angle Puts Over Picture

The way Bill Exton, of the Kenosha-Gateway Theatres, tells it, it seems that folks in Kenosha, Wis., were not lining up fast enough at the box-office to see his current shows. As usual, Exton's newspaper copy was up to standard, lobby well posted with posters and attention-getting displays, but the enthusiasm that should have been registered, in short, did not.

So Bill pondered and pondered and decided to dive into the single and double-bill controversy with a copy reproduced from his multi-columned newspaper ad herewith illustrated. Top lines argued about singles and doubles in general, then slipped down into the importance of the current show and wound up with direct selling copy that finally did the trick.

The Round Tabler says he cannot remember any of his ads that created so much talk around town and, better yet, a lot of the talk being transferred right up to the ticket window. Of course Exton's local reputation and contacts built up through his personalized advertisements have done much to win confidence which is one of the reasons for the success of such unusual publicity.

Children's Safety Club Sponsored by Police

Cooperation of County Department Builds Attendance

by JESSE T. BONNEY
Manager, Mineola Theatre, Long Island

With the youngsters on your side, the battle is half won. To illustrate this point it is only necessary to think back to one's own childhood days—invariably the older folks joined the line at the boxoffice of own choice. Perhaps the picture was to our liking, perhaps the manager called us by our first name, or perhaps the seats were of the proper curvature, to fit our small spines, but regardless of the reason it was and still is a fact that parents go where the children go.

There are many stunts that may be worked to encourage the kiddies in pushing their pennies across the brass plate. Some of these stunts are, of course, more effective than others. If you are willing to put in a few hours each week in an honest-to-goodness effort to build up your kiddie patronage, I suggest that you contact your local police inspector and offer him thirty minutes every Saturday morning if his department will sponsor a safety club for boys and girls. His part of the deal will be to furnish you with a uniformed patrolman every Saturday morning to instruct the club members in safety work.

Police Offer Prizes for Essays

You should not find it difficult to arrange for police department to donate three or four prizes to be used as will be explained elsewhere in this article.

After you are set with your club sponsor, prepare copy for an eye-catching herald, stressing the fact that club will be sponsored by your local police department. Instead of a long club name such as, "Mineola Safety Council for Boys and Girls," use only the initials "M.S.C.B.G." to arouse the curiosity of the prospective members.

Kids admire uniforms and more or less look upon an officer of the law as their hero. Take advantage of this by using a cut of a "copper" on all of your club buildup material. Have a special trailer made announcing the time, place and date of the first meeting as well as ideals, motto, etc., and in making up your copy don't forget your appeal to the parents. It will mean a lot to them to learn that your theatre is trying to help their children.

The local newspapers can help bring about the desired results and your police inspector can do a lot to make the city editors want your story. He may even get papers to cover the first meeting and take flashlights for newspaper publication.

Next on the list is an impressive application blank with space provided for name, address, phone number, age and birthday.

Your membership card should be of a good grade stock arranged to create a neat, businesslike appearance. (See cut.)

Instruct your entire staff to talk "club" whenever the opportunity shows itself, then on the opening day have them all in early to answer questions and handle the crowd. Kids pay regular admissions as they enter the theatre in advance of club meeting and remain in the theatre for matinee show without any additional charge.

After the early ones are seated, open the meeting by giving an explanation of the name, purpose of the club and plans for future meetings. Before introducing police representatives offer prizes to the three members who write the best summaries of the morning's safety instructions. Said summaries to be turned in at the box-office not later than the following Thursday. (Your cashier can pick the winners in her spare time.)

Various contests and games should be planned in advance to follow up the safety talk. Every other week you might stage an amateur show for the kiddies and award toys to the members who give the most worthy performances.

Telegraph Window Sells "Dodsworth" for Suits

Using the phrase, "Send your messages around the world via Postal Telegraph and see the round the world romance Dodsworth," Bob Suits, Loew's Colonial, Reading, Pa., filled the entire telegraph window with an elaborate display. On very large eastern and western hemisphere globes, the world's key cities were indicated by illuminated clocks.

Furniture, luggage and men's stores were represented in cooperative tieups as were women's and beauty shops, and Bob also secured complete coverage with restaurants, radio stores and newsdealers.

GEORGE BAKER of the Electric Theatre, Kansas City, Kan., paid us a visit with HOLDEN SWIGER.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Dear Herald:

There, whenever Sherm Fitch of the RKO office at Sioux Falls, S. D., tells you he will do a thing he'll do it if it takes the hide off. He told us he would come over to get us to visit South Dakota, and he did. We drove up to O'Neill, Neb., and stopped to call on Georgia Racely, who operates the Royal theatre. Georgia has built a new home, and say, Elmer, it is some home, too. Whenever a theatre operator builds a new eight-thousand-dollar home it's a pretty good sign that they are not on relief.

Over at Spencer we called on R. P. Jones of the Boyd theatre. Outside of running the theatre R. P. is the undertaker for north Nebraska and southern South Dakota; in fact, R. P. undertakes about everything. He wanted to embalm both of us free of charge, but Sherm kicked, and he said that the only embalming fluid he used was Haig & Haig or Black & White, or such like.

We had quite an argument with him to keep him from embalming us, but we finally compromised with him by offering to renew his subscription to the HERALD. It is funny how an offer to renew a subscription to the HERALD will keep a fellow out of a whole lot of trouble.

Jevver hear of an exhibitor offering to embalm people as a premium for coming to his theatre? We never did, either.

D. V. Fuller of the Aladdin theatre at Butte, Neb., said he was glad we called. We were glad, too, for he was making the mistake of trying to operate his theatre without the Herald (a thing that is hard to do), but from now on everything is going to be all right.

We drove over to Bonesteel, South Dakota, rather late. Sherm said he wanted to get in after dark so the authorities wouldn't know we were there. A. E. Blakkolb operates the Bonesteel theatre, and A. E. is building himself a new home in spite of the depression and grasshoppers. He also helps his father operate a general mercantile store that is the pride of southwest South Dakota. A. E. took us over to his home after the show and we spent a very delightful evening. A. E. is another of these South Dakota boys who will thumb his nose at you if you mention the depression. He says if he can get good pictures and the Herald, the depression can go jump in the creek.

The Lyric theatre at Gregory is operated by W. J. Jonas. As we saw it, Gregory ought to be the seat of Gregory county, but it isn't, for we were told that Gregory is located near the west line of the county. Anyhow, she is all right now, for W. J. had us renew his subscription to the Herald, and that puts Gregory up in the front ranks.

Mr. and Mrs. Gehlson operate the theatre at Burke, and unless we are mistaken, Burke is the county seat of Gregory county. We called there and met these very delightful folks and had a very pleasant visit with them. The only thing we could see wrong with Mr. Gehlson is his politics, but then maybe he is right about that; sometimes other people are wrong, too, but it don't make much difference, as they will all get it in the neck anyhow. They are both members of the Herald family and that will help a whole lot.

At Chamberlain we met one of the managers of the State theatre (and doggone the luck, we just can't remember his name), but anyhow, we had a delightful visit with him and hope we can meet him again some time. The other manager we believe had gone on his vacation out to the Coast, and if he will keep away from those stars in Hollywood he will be all right, but you never can tell. Then we went and called on H. B. Vogt, a part time operator but mainly the engineer at Chamberlain's sanitarium. Mr. Vogt wants to keep abreast of the times and that's why he wanted us to send him the Herald and F. H. Richardson's latest Handbook on Projection. He's going to get both of 'em.

If you ever come to Mitchell, South Dakota, don't fail to visit the Roxy theatre and meet Mr. Logan, the manager. You will find it well worth while. Mr. Logan said he didn't want to miss a copy of the Herald and asked us to send in his renewal, which we will do, although his subscription was not out yet. After the show Mr. Logan and his wife and Jack Allender and his wife took us down to a cafe to dinner, and there was where we got it in for Mr. Logan.

He asked us to guess his wife's age, and, wanting to be polite, and judging mostly from his own age, we guessed her to be 35 when as a matter of fact she is only 19. Gosh all fishhooks, if that isn't putting a man in a hot spot when the lady is present. We have never shot anybody yet, although we have wanted to sometimes.

The Roxy is not only a beautiful theatre but it is also the pride of South Dakota, and Mitchell is a pretty good town and Mr. Logan is—well, he is, that's all.

Mr. Allender is circulating a states right picture and he covers about as much territory as we do, and we judge that his picture is giving good satisfaction. He says his father is operating a theatre in Spokane, Wash., and that he, too, is a Herald fan, and if he should read this we want him to be assured of our kindest regards and we want to advise him that his boy Jack is running as wild as a turkey gobbler and is as sober as Sherm Fitch, and that's sober enough for anybody.

L. E. Jorgensen operates the Regal theatre at Salem. The first time we met L. E. he was operating a theatre at Viborg, S. D. The name of the theatre is "Glud." Jevver hear of a name like that? Mr. Jorgensen said it was named after an amusement park in Sweden.

Before we left home we received a letter and a check from Bert Beams of Red Cloud, Neb., and he asked us to renew the Herald subscriptions for all of his theatres, Red Cloud, Geneva and Sutton, and we will be glad to. That just goes to prove that the boys recognize what we have always said, that the Herald covers the field like an April shower.

PER CONTRACT—OR ELSE

SINCE press dispatches and headlines, including those of this publication, last week, reported that Miss Bette Davis must remain a "slave" or in "bondage" at a salary of $3,000 a week by ruling of a British court supporting her contract with Warner Brothers, albeit the phrases were set down in irony, the quality of bondage bears some examination.

With the full text of judgment from Mr. Justice Branson available, it appears that it was the decision of the British court that while it could not decide and order what Miss Davis might do, it could decide something that she might not do; that while she could not be compelled to work in pictures for the Warner concern she could be forbidden to play in pictures for others without consent under the contract made in the United States.

". . . no evidence was adduced to show that, if enjoined from doing the specified acts otherwise than for the plaintiffs, she would not be able to employ herself both usefully and remuneratively in other spheres of activity, though not as remuneratively as in her special line. She would not be driven, although she might be tempted, to perform the contract, and the fact that she might be so tempted was no objection to the grant of an injunction. . . . " the Law Report of the London Times records.

In other words, British justice holds that if Miss Davis is to play on the screen it will be in accordance with her screen commitments by contract. She can do that, or else seek a new career.

WHO IS FAME'S BOSS?

SPEAKING of the "wedlock" of the screen and radio, as so many able spokesmen have been of late, one can regard with interested eye such manifestations as those reported by Mr. Douglas Churchill in the New York Times as the recent dilemma faced by Miss Irene Rich:

> "She has an extended contract on the radio. One of the points of the radio program is to emphasize her youthful bearing and manner, and her contract specifies that she shall not accept roles on the screen which might conflict with her etherized personality. Within recent days she has been offered two roles, one a mother and the other a matron. She had to refuse both, although they were important and would have re-established her as an active screen figure."

If radio is now writing contracts to prescribe the movements, roles and conduct of famous talent on the screen, is there not a parallel suggestion that the motion picture makers in their employment contracts might take special cognizance of radio and the influences that radio roles and expression might have upon screen personalities and products?

The "wedlock" might well include some pre-nuptial agreements. Fame is property.

VAUDEVILLE NOTION

THE cabled offer of a role on the screen to Mrs. Ernest Simpson, London's most celebrated hostess, from a Hollywood agent, is not exactly, one would guess, the height of international diplomacy. Also the notion is far from practical from a number of points of view, including the American. The gesture partakes of the pattern, but not the humor, of the offer of a star engagement which the late Lewis J. Selznick cabled to Nicholas Romanoff, tsar of all the Russians, at the time of the Kerensky revolution. The tsar was far too busy to accept, or even reply, and so is Mrs. Simpson, no doubt.

AS FREEDOM WANES

THIS week's correspondence to Motion Picture Herald from Berlin tends to indicate that the diverse branches of the motion picture industry, exhibition, production and distribution, are amazingly out of balance with each other. This is not to be interpreted as favorable to the repute of "planned economies," governmental controls of industry or totalitarian states. Substantially everywhere in the world outside of the United States, Great Britain and liberal Scandinavia the motion picture industry has been substantially reduced to an instrument of bureaucracy. Those who would invite the Federal government farther into the motion picture business, or who would encourage the invitation that the Administration appears to have extended to itself, may well consider the world screen.

JOURNALISM

CORRESPONDENTS of the American papers appear to have seen a bit of humor in a headline, a very small and obscure one, in the London Times, saying: "Undefended Divorce Suit: Case at Ipswich Assizes."

But, after all, that only reminds us of the fact that when Abraham Lincoln was assassinated the tidings were conveyed to the great trans-Missouri west by the Leavenworth Times, august in that time and place, under the heading: "Washington News—Latest Intelligence by Magnetic Telegraph."

Some way the story got around in spite of that.

Theatre Transfers

A test case initiated by Louis Nizer, attorney for the Film Board of Trade, acting for major distributors, will have great bearing on future theatre transfers. Mr. Nizer aims to establish the distributors' claims that contracts for product must be assumed by the new owner of a theatre or paid for from the assets of the theatre vendor. In addition to obtaining judgments to satisfy the claim the distributors have had a receiver appointed by federal court to recover assets paid out to other creditors and to redistribute such assets with the distributors' claim on an equal basis with others.

Details of the plan are found on page 15.

Universal's Plans

As Charles R. Rogers, executive vice-president in charge of production for Universal, arrived at the home office in New York this week for conferences with sales executives, to look over new books, plays and talent and to discuss the interchange of players with Herbert Wilcox, General Films Distributors production head in London, J. P. Normanly, comptroller, issued a statement in Hollywood saying the company was never in better condition. It was also revealed that Universal is reducing its corporate structure and this week dissolved Universal Productions, a Delaware corporation, as the first step in that direction.

See page 54.

Academy Reelects

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood this week reelected the present officers for another term by a vote of acclamation at a joint meeting of the board of governors and executive committee. A committee of five was appointed to investigate all phases of the Academy awards policy and report its findings back to the board of governors.

The list of officers reelected and other details of the activities of the organization are found in the story on page 52.

More Earnings

A report on earnings by the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation and an estimate of net profit for the year by Twentieth Century-Fox are added this week to the brightening financial news of the industry. Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, estimated that the company's net profit for the year ending December 26th will be $7,500,000. KAO and subsidiaries reported a net profit of $666,080.63 for the 39 weeks ended September 26th.

The financial reports and Mr. Schenck's optimistic estimate are quoted on page 28.

Soviet Films Barred

Following close upon announcement last week that Russian pictures would be distributed and exhibited in the Province of Quebec came the statement this week of Premier Duplessis that he would allow no Soviet films in any Quebec theatres. "We are acquainted with the principles upon which these films would be leased. Outwardly they might appear innocent, but there would always be the underlying danger of communistic infiltrations," the premier was quoted.

McKee Music "Czar"

The music publishing industry will be governed and, the publishers hope, revivified by a "czar." Joseph V. McKee has been appointed national coordinator of the industry and counsel for the Music Publishers Protective Association. E. C. Mills, general manager of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, and Leslie Boosey, head of the British Performing Rights Society, have failed to obtain cooperation of American distributors in avoiding the new Canadian music tax restrictions and they will appeal to Canadian exhibitors to seek modification of the Dominion laws.

Announcement of Judge McKee's appointment and a report of ASCAP's Canadian difficulties are on page 18.

Laughton's "Rembrandt"

Alexander Korda and Charles Laughton, producer and star of "Henry VIII," have completed, in the same relationship, the London Films production of "Rembrandt," scheduled for international premiere December 4th.

Bruce Allan's report of trade comment on the film, together with advance stills, appears on page 16.

Richardson Honored

Frank H. Richardson, technical editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, was honored this week with a series of luncheons and a banquet on the occasion of his completing 30 years of service to motion picture projection, on his 70th birthday.

The events and participants in "Richardson Week" are described on page 30, and on page 11 appears a photograph of a testimonial banquet given Mr. Richardson by the American Projection Society.

Product Report

Hollywood studios completed six pictures and started seven in a week maintaining the seasonal production average.

Titles and other data are presented on page 53.

Germany's Problem

The exhibition branch of the industry in Germany has come into a healthy condition with the reduction of the tax rates, but production and distribution overhead is much too high, particularly at the studios, because of increased production time in the necessity for higher standard product, the abolition of double featuring, the high salaries paid stars, and the decline of the foreign market, writes J. K. Rutenberg from Berlin.

The German motion picture problem is treated in further detail on page 40.

Non-partisan Screen

The latest incident involving politics and the motion picture to reach headlines in newspapers and the trade press is the rejection of a Republican propaganda film, distributed as an advertising short, by the Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors. The campaign, now in its closing moments, has been marked by a determined effort, for the most part, by exhibitors and the industry as a whole to keep the screen non-partisan.

Details of the Pennsylvania incident and a review of politics and the screen are on page 13.

Interference Dropped

A recapitalization plan for Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., has been adopted by vote of the stockholders. The Securities and Exchange Commission, in a letter to the board of directors, said that information contained in a letter to stockholders explaining the plan might be misleading in certain facts. The Commission, however, took no further action on stockholders' protests.

The story is on page 46.

Radio to Film

Reversing common practice, Warner Brothers have acquired screen rights to "Hollywood Hotel," weekly radio program, and will produce it as a musical film with Dick Powell and Frances Langford, from the air show, starred.

For more about it, see page 53.

First Film Actor Dead

Frederick P. Ott, early associate of Thomas A. Edison and the first motion picture actor, died at his home in West Orange, New Jersey, last Saturday at the age of 74. Mr. Ott joined the inventor early in his career and spent more than 50 years working with him on practically all of his inventions and projects. He first attracted public attention, however, with his sneezes and "monkey-shines" before Mr. Edison's Kinetoscope.

Mr. Ott's career is covered in the article which appears on page 34.

Politics and Grosses

The closing week of the political campaign made sharp inroads into theatre receipts in the Chicago area, one circuit executive saying that grosses had declined as much as 30 per cent. Independent theatres, outside the city particularly, reported a parallel decline. Radio addresses coming at the best show hours and rallies providing free vaudeville entertainment were factors.

The G-B Deal

A review of the principal facts in the celebrated Gaumont-British deal presents the following story:

The Ostrer Brothers for some time found themselves encountering increasing difficulties in the operations of the interests generally described as "Gaumont British." Alongside of this condition was the fact that the Ostrers were anxious to negotiate a sale of their interests, or some portion of them, in order to realize a prospective profit.

A. C. Blumenthal, the American trader, sensing the situation, addressed himself to the objective of promoting a deal. In this connection and after preliminary discussions Isidore Ostrer came to the United States and initiated definite negotiations with Joseph M. Schenck. A tentative arrangement eventually was worked out providing for a joint acquisition of an interest in Gaumont British by Twentieth Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer under which the Ostrers would make the sale and realize the profit which they sought.

Mr. Ostrer then returned to England, where the proposed deal received widespread publicity. At this point John Maxwell, who, representing his interests, had long been considered a likely buyer of the Ostrer holdings, but who previously had not shown a strong inclination to pay the price asked, took serious note of the prospective development. Equipped and armed with the American offer the Ostrers quickly proceeded to new discussions with Mr. Maxwell, who very properly lent an attentive ear for many reasons, including his natural desire that British holdings in the British industry should remain as extensive as possible.

These new discussions led to the deal, which has been announced. The Maxwell interests have extended their holdings and the Ostrers have achieved the deal they sought. To the American interests is left the dubious reward of having contributed time and effort to a deal for which they were solicited and out of which they were eventually excluded. Thus ends the current chapter of the celebrated Gaumont British case.

Meanwhile the original Fox corporation, now Twentieth Century-Fox, interest in GB, remains as it was, and at least unimpaired.

Lewis' WPA Show

Sinclair Lewis' dramatized version of his novel, "It Can't Happen Here," was presented on 20 stages in 18 cities on Tuesday evening under the auspices of the WPA Federal Theatre Project. Audiences generally received the preachment against dictatorship quietly and apparently were not aroused by its political or social implications.

The story of the play and the simultaneous openings, unusual in legitimate theatre annals, starts on page 27.

Wilcox Sails for U.S.

Herbert Wilcox, head of Herbert Wilcox Productions, Ltd., sailed from England on the Queen Mary on Wednesday. During a visit of three weeks in New York the producer will make arrangements for distribution of his current product and will complete contracts with American talent for his next year's program. Anna Neagle and Tullio Carminati, co-starred in the last two Wilcox productions which are scheduled for release in New York next month, are accompanying Mr. Wilcox.

Exhibitors to Meet

Exhibitor activity this week concentrated in announcement of three convention dates, by the Allied Theatres of Michigan, the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina. The Michigan and Ohio units will meet early next month and the North and South Carolina organization will gather during December.

Details of the convention plans are found in the story on page 15.

Paris Sets Minimum

Exhibitors in Paris have agreed on a minimum admission price below which they will not set their scales. The agreement, reached by a special committee of the Exhibitors Association, is expected to end complaints of low admissions which, in some cases, were said to constitute unfair competition.

Details of the plan are found on page 14.

Museum Films

A new series of programs showing the development of the motion picture in France and Germany has been announced for release beginning January 1, 1937, by the Museum of Modern Art Film Library. The programs include early experiments with various techniques by French and German directors.

The schedule is listed in detail on page 28.

Few Football Films

While the 1936 football season is rolling toward heights of popularity never before reached in the eyes of sports prophets, exhibitors will not have the usual cycle of gridiron pictures this year. Only four features and a mere scattering of short subjects will be prepared for release this fall. Home offices in New York believe that the short season and the lack of a foreign market call for a curtailment of productions of this type.

The titles of the features and a discussion of the rest of the football films are found in the story on page 52.

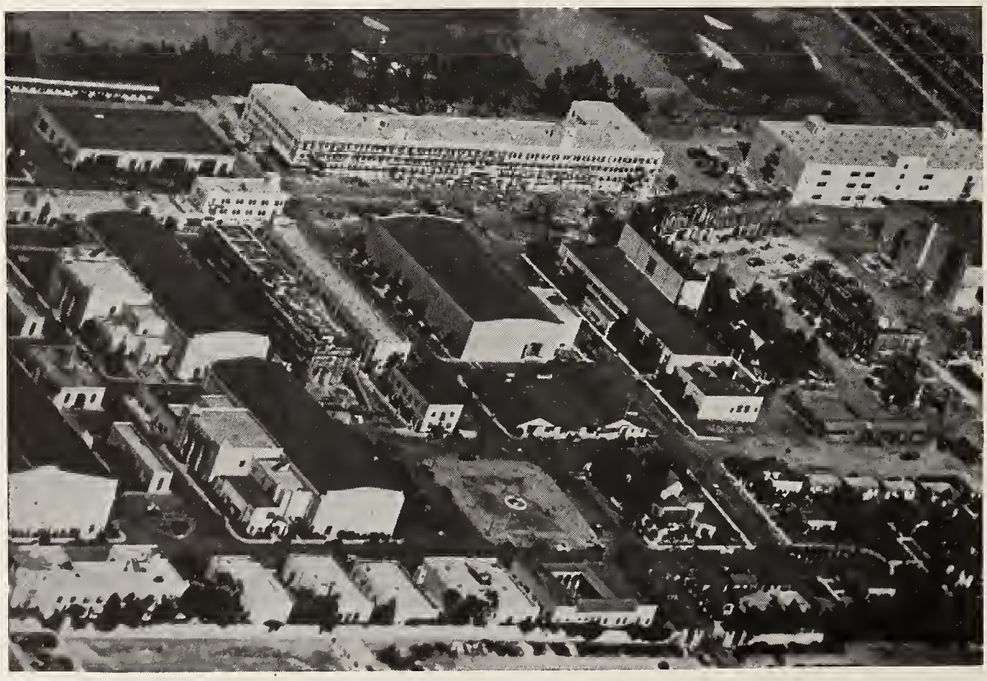
This Week in Pictures

ON TALENT QUEST. Hal Roach (below), producer of comedies for MGM release, bowing in on New York, come to arrange casts for six musicals he will make for MGM.

BRAZIL THEATRE OPENED. Among guests of MGM at opening of the Metro theatre in Rio de Janeiro—Ben Y. Cammack and Nat Liebeskind of RKO Radio, and wives; Al Szekler of Universal, and Mrs. Szekler; L. S. Marinho and A. Weissmann.

FEATURED. Charlotte Wynters (right), whom Paramount has given the feminine lead in "One Man's Bonus."

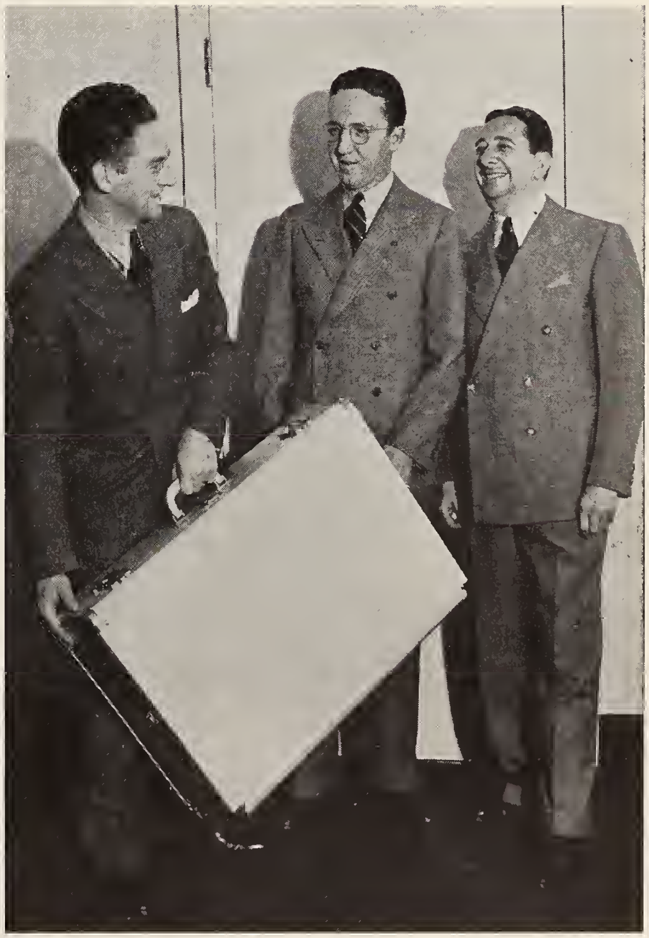
EXPANDING. (Below) View of the 20th Century-Fox production plant adding buildings in a $4,000,000 project.



PROMOTED. Chloe Elrod, who, though only 24, has been named assistant casting director at Universal. She is shown at her desk in the casting department, which she joined two years ago.

"RICHARDSON WEEK" INAUGURAL. Banquet of the American Projection Society at Hotel Pennsylvania, New York, opening a week of activities celebrating the 70th birthday of F. H. Richardson. Lester B. Isaac of Loew's, was toastmaster. Others at the speakers' table were: W. W. Byrne, president of A. P. S.; Herbert Griffin, P. A. McGuire, Arthur Dickinson, John May, M. D. O'Brien, Will C. Smith, William Reed, Joseph Basson, Charles Burton and Glen Humphries.

HIS NEXT PRODUCTION CHANGED. Instead of a Scottish border film previously scheduled, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., will have "Jump for Glory" as his next Criterion starring vehicle. He is shown on the Worton Hall studio grounds with Elliott Nugent, who will direct, and Alan Hale, who will be featured. Release will be through United Artists.



GOING PLACES. Aage Schubart, manager of RKO Radio's contract department, aided by Mike Poller, presenting Ned Clarke (center) with a handsome travelling bag, gift of fellow workers, before Clarke's departure to assume the post of European travelling auditor.

EN ROUTE. Merle Oberon, United Artists star, reaches New York on way to England to make "I, Claudius" for Alexander Korda.

BRINGS NEGATIVE. Of first all-Technicolor feature produced in Europe. Harold Schuster, who directed, is shown arriving in New York with master of New World's "Wings of the Morning," 20th Century-Fox release, for processing in Hollywood.

THOSE REPORTERS! Hal Wallis, associate executive in charge of production for Warner, is ambushed by metropolitan pests-of-the-pencil-and-pad (or aren't they?) on his arrival in New York for conferences with H. M., Major Albert and J. L. Warner on forthcoming product.

EXHIBITORS RESISTING POLITICANS' EFFORT TO USE SCREEN IN CAMPAIGN

Parties Turn to Sound Trucks When Theatre Men and Audiences Turn Down Films; Newsreel Shots Booed

Increasingly heavy fire from Republicans and Democrats as the two political parties marched into the final stages of the campaign battle this week found exhibitors, for the most part, effectively resisting efforts made by both sides to reach the public through the screen, and the motion picture industry itself as a whole emerging from the battle with a clean record despite temptations and pressure exerted by astute campaign managers to enlist its aid.

Before the campaign was fully organized it was reported that both parties were making elaborate plans to present their arguments to motion picture audiences, but these did not materialize to any great extent. Efforts to distribute propaganda films through regular channels met with little success and an attempt to buy their way to the screen by means of an advertising short made under the auspices of the Republican National Committee brought no better results, though claims were made of wide distribution in the Middlewest.

Neither party has published detailed accounts of its campaign expenditures but Congressional records issued this week revealed that together they had spent more than $9,000,000, twice the cost of the 1932 campaign. Large amounts have been expended on motion picture activities in addition to the radio, which took $2,000,000.

In the closing weeks both parties have concentrated their efforts upon sound trucks carrying campaign films made up of newsreel shots bought from Fox Movietone by the Democrats and from Pathe by the Republicans. The newsreels in their regular releases have maintained an impartial attitude.

Audiences Protest

In spite of the non-partisan attitude of the newsreels themselves exhibitors are having varied experiences with audience reaction during their showing. Theatre men in Kansas City reported that bitter feeling displayed by audiences over pictures of presidential candidates grew sharper as the campaign reached its climactic week. Patrons joined vehemently in booing or hissing their favorite or his opponent, and the exhibitors were of the opinion that such strong mass emotion was bad for the theatres, and even dangerous. One subsequent-run exhibitor recently dropped an entire newsreel because it had only one candidate represented, and a first-run theatre dropped another in which both were represented.

Exhibitors, large and small, are planning to relay election results as they are tabulated to their audiences on Tuesday night. Unusual interest in the campaign, it was recognized, would keep theatres almost empty after six o'clock on election night unless patrons were assured that they would know the results as quickly as they would if they stayed at home. The radio broadcasting companies have completed their plans for broadcasting of returns at 15 minute intervals over their networks, compiling figures from press services and from their own facilities. Theatre managers will announce results from the stage as they are received by radio.

EXHIBITOR PROTESTS "PROVOCATIVE" REEL

That exhibitors realize the danger of allowing partisanship, however slight, to gain expression on the screen is shown by a report on RKO Radio's March of Time No. 1 appearing in the "What the Picture Did for Me" Department on another page of this issue. L. A. Irwin of the Palace theatre, Penacook, N. H., writes:

"The provocative nature of this reeler makes us wonder if it is good policy to let our screen take sides where politics is concerned. We can't afford to create ill will at any rate."

The issue in question has three sequences, "The U. S. Milky Way," "Gerard L. K. Smith," and "Maine's Passamaquoddy."

Film Rejection Protested

The latest incident involving politics and motion pictures to claim the attention of the newspapers and trade press is the rejection of a propaganda film, "Don't Blame Your Butcher!" by the Pennsylvania State Board of Motion Picture Censors. The picture was made under contract by an independent production company for the Crusaders, an anti-New Deal organization of national scope, and distribution is being handled by the Alexander Film Company of Colorado Springs, which handles advertising and publicity shorts.

The picture runs about 90 feet and shows a meat market with a woman customer complaining about the high prices of meat. The butcher replies, "Why blame me?" and points to a sign showing the price and the taxes deducted. Before the Pennsylvania censors banned the film from theatres in that state, exhibitors in many parts of the country reported that they had received the reel with a check for payment but either had refused to run it or had been forced to take it off their programs because of complaints after the first showing. One such report from an exhibitor in Greenfield, Mass., was received and printed by MOTION PICTURE HERALD last week.

Fred G. Clark, national commander of the Crusaders, took the board of censors to task for the ban in full page newspaper advertisements and in press releases. While the power vested in the board concerns the banning of pictures on moral, religious or corruptive grounds alone, Mr. Clark charged that his food picture was banned solely because political pressure was exerted upon members of the board and on the company which distributed it.

Crusaders Appeal from Pennsylvania Censor Board's Rejection of Tax Film; WPA Picture Activity Is Lively

To substantiate his contention that political motives alone inspired rejection of the picture, he quoted a telegram from an official of the Alexander Company to a representative of the Crusaders which read:

"Alexander pleading that you call off pressure on Pennsylvania Censorship Board due to Democratic membership and fact it has been intimated it might prove detrimental to us to proceed with pressure. If pressure is continued it may be prejudicial to all our future national and local business."

The "pressure" by the Crusaders, cited in the telegram, referred to the organization's efforts to induce the board to approve the film, Mr. Clark explained.

"This is a raw abuse of Government power," he charged. "We do not intend to stand for it. Fortunately the press is still free and unmuzzled. Through paid advertisements we are exposing these dictators who, entrusted with the power to protect the young by suppressing immoral and indecent films, have abused their power and set themselves up as censors of economic truths.

"Not only are we publicly protesting against disapproval of the film 'Don't Blame Your Butcher,' but we shall continue to demand of the Board of Censors, the State Attorney General and Governor Earle that the ban on this film be lifted and that six other films we have submitted to the board be approved.

"It will be useless for the board to attempt to becloud the issue with technicalities. These films are in the hands of the board. No question of morality is involved. The case is clear. If the board will not reverse its decision the Governor should step in overrule the board and re-establish free speech and free thought in the exhibition of motion pictures in Pennsylvania."

Another Snag

The Alexander Film Company struck another snag in its attempt to distribute "Dogs, Monkeys and Men," a GOP propaganda short intended to reflect on the Works Progress Administration. The film was shown at several Philadelphia neighborhood houses but it was withdrawn when audiences staged demonstrations. Jeers and catcalls were reported to have greeted the film at every showing, with only one or two of the theatres attempting a second showing and none venturing past that. Houses showing the short were to receive $1 for a two-day showing. The film, which preceded the butcher film, was passed by the censors.

On October 19, the first of a series of full-page ads, paid for by the Crusaders, appeared in the Philadelphia newspapers, reading: "Censored! Is This Russia?" Commissioner Patrick A. Duffy, of the State Board of Motion Picture Censors, contended that the restriction was invoked because the name of the group making the film was placed at the end of the reel instead of the beginning, in violation of the board's rule.

Claims Wide Showing

Although unsuccessful in many parts of the country, approximately 65 to 70 per cent of the theatres in Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska have shown the short political films prepared by Republican partisans, according to W. H. Hendren, Jr., manager for the United Film Ad Service, Inc., which also distributed "Don't Blame Your Butcher!" The company opened its distribution facilities to pictures of both parties, but only the Republicans availed themselves of the service, Mr. Hendren said. Only about 40 per cent of Kansas City subsequent-run theatres showed the film.

Jay Means, manager of the Oak Park and Bagdad, who played the butcher picture, reported, "We have had a lot of telephone calls from Democrats who objected to the pictures even though they are preceded on the screen by the notice that they are paid advertisements, and though we tell people that we would be glad to show partisan pictures for the Democrats at the same price."

E. S. Young of the Roanoke and Central theatres, who refused to play political party advertising films, commented, "Some of our patrons are going to be offended by such films. We don't run beer and whisky advertisements for the same reason."

Discouraged in efforts to distribute frank propaganda film to motion picture theatres, party managers were employing fleets of sound trucks to tour the country. These trucks carry reels which are shown at street meetings. Fox Movietone News contracted to make up prints of a film, running 1,392 feet compiled from the Fox newsreel library. The picture is entitled "The Fighting President" and comprises excerpts from speeches made by President Roosevelt from the convention in Philadelphia to the present time, as well as shots of New Deal accomplishments.

The film is being shown on six sound trucks which last week were touring the middle west and New England. In addition, Democratic National Headquarters announced in telegrams to state chairmen all over the country that the film was available, for two cents a foot, to clubs or other groups and exhibitors.

Republicans have a similar opus in "Let's Look at the Record," compiled and printed by Pathe News for the Republican National Committee. GOP managers did not attempt either major distribution or independent exhibition of the film in regular motion picture theatres. A fleet of eight truck and trailer outfits in the eastern territory, six in the midwest and ten in the far west, are showing the picture on the road.

The Rialto theatre in Washington, D. C., showed both these pictures in a double bill this week. They were trimmed to identical running time, 22 minutes each, and the show was billed as an impartial survey of the political campaign.

EUREKA SUES STATE ON "ECSTASY" BAN

Eureka Productions, Inc., has asked the United States district court to enjoin Governor Herbert Lehman of New York, Attorney General John J. Bennett, Jr., Frank P. Graves, commissioner of education, and Irwin Esmond, director of the motion picture division of the department of education, from interfering with exhibition of the Hungarian film, "Ecstasy," in its present form.

The picture, showing of which was banned in the United States after a jury in federal court had ruled it indecent, has been admitted to this country in expurgated form but New York State has declined to grant a license for its exhibition.

The complaint asserts that the state's attempt to prohibit exhibition of the film violates Federal legislation and Article I, Section 8, of the Federal Constitution which lists the powers of Congress.

These two were the only films sponsored directly by the two national committees. Factional groups on both sides have sponsored pictures which bear on the campaign, notably the Crusaders with their butcher picture. Democratic headquarters refer all inquiries for films showing Democratic arguments to the United States Signal Corps, which handles distribution of films made under government auspices. These include productions of the Army, Navy, Department of Agriculture, Works Progress Administration and other governmental agencies.

WPA Pictures

WPA and Resettlement Administration activities in the motion picture field continue, the latest WPA project in this direction being staged in Wauwatosa, Milwaukee suburb. Record business was scored at the Tosa theatre there recently with the premiere of "Mishawkwut," educational film sponsored by the Wauwatosa board of education and produced entirely as a WPA project. Depicting the ceremonies, feasts and burial rites of Wisconsin's Menominee tribes, the picture was filmed against the scenic background of the Wisconsin Dells. Elliot Cooley and Norman Franz, WPA artists who have four other successful educational films to their credit, wrote, directed, produced and photographed the picture. Costumes were designed by Alberta Johnson, instructor in stage craft at the Wauwatosa High School.

Radio stations, with time on the air for sale to all comers, have been the chief amusement medium employed by the political armies. Estimates of the total bill for all parties for time on the air range from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000. A survey made by Editor and Publisher indicated that at the end of September the total for the summer stood at $680,724. With political orators filling the air with appeals to the citizenry to save the country almost every night during October this figure is estimated to have been equaled for the month. The bill on election eve, next Monday night, is expected to total $100,000 alone, with both major parties taking a full hour for last minute speeches and smaller rallies being staged by William Lemke and the Communist party.

The survey made by Editor and Publisher pointed out that while radio has taken the lion's share of political advertising, the broadcasters have come far from profiting to the extent the figures indicate. Radio cannot add extra hours to the day to care for a special advertising demand and many of the political broadcasts have merely pushed regular advertisers off the air so that the stations' revenue was not increased. Only in the sale of time otherwise devoted to sustaining programs has the political oratory brought real profit, the survey added. On the other hand the regular broadcast advertisers and their agencies have been annoyed by the interruption of their programs.

Paris Theatres Fix Minimum Prices

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

A special committee of the Exhibitors Association has set specific minimum prices below which exhibitor members in the Paris area will not be permitted to sell admissions. Distributors and certain exhibitors had been complaining over a long period that prices in some instances were so low as to offer unfair competition. Houses were charging as little as two francs (about eight cents) for double bill shows.

The following prices have been set as minimum in the area: First run, no seats under six, eight or ten francs, for midnight, afternoon or evening, respectively; second run, five, six or eight francs; third run, five and six francs. These prices apply to exclusive runs.

For general release, the first run minimum is three and four francs, and subsequents two and a half and three francs. The seats priced at the minimum cannot exceed 30 per cent of the total capacity of the house.

Copyright Report Given Sanction of MPPDA Member

The copyright committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., this week in New York approved the formal report of its chairman, E. P. Kilroe of Twentieth Century-Fox, which recommended that the United States become a member of the Berne International Copyright Convention, if four major changes in the convention's rules are made.

Copies of the report will be filed with the State Department in Washington and then sent to all nations that are members of the convention. The Berne Convention is now inactive, but can be revived on six months' notice. A meeting of representatives of the signatory nations is to be held in Brussels at a future date for this purpose, and, it is assumed, action on the recommended changes in the rules will be taken at that time.

Mr. Kilroe is also preparing a definite report for the M. P. P. D. A. which will present more fully the motion picture industry's position on the United States' becoming a member of the Berne Convention. The four major changes in the convention's rules desired by the industry are the right to change an author's work after it has been acquired, elimination of copyrights on styles of acting, elimination of copyrights on ideas unless written records of them are in existence, and designation of the person or organization which has the legal right to bring suit for infringement as the author of the copyright.

Quebec Prohibits Russian Pictures

Russian motion pictures have been barred from the Province of Quebec because of their possible use as Communist propaganda mediums, the Canadian Press reported this week.

The Premier said that interests promoting Soviet- produced films had approached him, but that permission had been denied them for any showing of the pictures in the province.

"We are acquainted with the principles upon which these films would be leased—outwardly they might appear innocent, but there would always be the underlying danger of communistic infiltrations," the Premier said, according to the news dispatches.

Profit Sharing Coupons Offered to Theatres

A plan to distribute among patrons of theatres profit sharing coupons redeemable for about 600 different kinds of merchandise at premium redemption stations throughout the country, has been launched by the United Profit Sharing Corporation. Max G. Felder, with offices in the Paramount building, New York, has exclusive rights to sales of the plan to theatres in the United States. Mr. Felder has been negotiating with several circuits for the use of the coupon plan.

MAJORS TEST LIABILITY IN THEATRE TRANSFERS

Receivership Proceedings Launched To Try to Recover Assets on Product Contracts

A test case to resolve finally a long standing dispute over the assumption of product franchises by the new operator in the transfer of a theatre has been initiated by the Film Board of Trade, acting for the large distributors. The results, if favorable to the distributors, will restore considerable revenue now lost when purchasers of theatre properties refuse to accept the contracts for product entered into by the old management.

The present case, typical of numerous others in the last year, involves the transfer of the Gem and Majestic theatres to the Springer & Cocalis circuit of New York. Louis Nizer, attorney for the Film Board of Trade in New York, has not only obtained judgments against Herman Yaffa and Henry Suchman, former operators of the theatres, but also has started receivership proceedings against them. The receiver, appointed by the New York federal court, is to examine the assets of the former operators and will endeavor to recover assets which have been paid out on other accounts on the ground that the claim for the product franchises is at least equal to other claims.

Claims in the case amount to about $30,000, according to Mr. Nizer, representing contracts signed for all major product. A judgment for this amount was obtained, but the operators pleaded inability to pay because the money received in the transfer had been used to pay other obligations.

In previous cases judgments have been obtained against theatre operators when the contracts were not assumed by new owners but the institution of the receivership action to recover payment when the assets have been distributed is an entirely new procedure, Mr. Nizer pointed out. If it succeeds, the method will be used in similar cases in the future.

An increasing number of instances in which purchasers of theatres have refused to assume product contracts signed by the former owners has forced the distributors to take the action, the attorney said. Usually, he said, they are cases in which a large circuit acquires houses, the circuit operators being unwilling to assume the contracts on the terms agreed upon by the smaller independent owner. Previously the distributors have been forced to accept a loss when the operators were unable to satisfy a judgment because the purchase money had been distributed to other creditors. Distributor officials are unwilling to estimate the amount of loss suffered through such cases, but it is known that the number of defaults has increased in the past year with the increasing number of transfers of small theatres to circuits.

Recovery of the assets through the receivership proceedings would have great bearing on such transactions in the future, it was pointed out, since if the present case develops in favor of the distributors, their claims based on the product franchises, would be placed on an equal basis with the claims of other creditors in the sale of a theatre.

Three Exhibitor Conventions Set

Allied Theatres of Michigan, the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina this week notified members of their respective boards of their decisions to hold annual conventions shortly.

Nathan Yamins, president; Abram F. Myers, general counsel, and W. A. Steffes of national Allied will be the leading speakers at the state convention of Allied of Michigan to be held at the Hotel Statler in Detroit November 4-5. The board of directors of the organization will meet November 3, but the new officers will not be elected until the second day.

The board of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio set December 1-2 as the dates for the 10th annual convention to be held at the Deshler Wallick Hotel in Columbus.

The MPTO of North and South Carolina will hold its annual gathering at the Charlotte Hotel, Charlotte, on December 7-8. Officers will be elected for the ensuing year. Ed Kuykendall, president of the national organization, is expected to attend.

In Seattle, William Ripley of Longview was elected president of the MPTO of Washington this week at the convention of the organization held at the New Washington Hotel to succeed Hugh Bruen. Other officers elected were: L. O. Lukan of Seattle, first vice-president; Milton Kenworthy of Moscow, Idaho, second vice-president; Paul Aust of Seattle, third vice-president. James N. Hone was re-elected secretary.

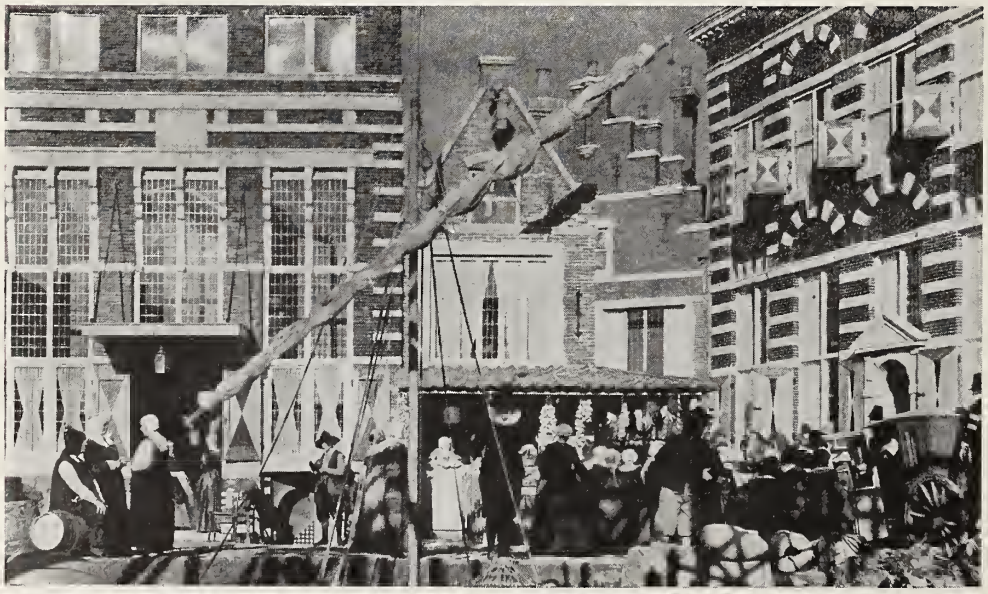
Warner November Sales Session Set

Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager of Warner Brothers, will hold a mid-season meeting of district managers early in November and at the convention plans will be formulated for the annual sales drive.

Meanwhile, Hal Wallis, production manager for Warners, has arrived in New York from Hollywood to confer with Mr. Sears and to meet Fernand Gravaet, recently signed by Mervyn LeRoy and who arrived on the Ile de France this week from Paris with Jack Warner.

Mr. Warner confirmed reports the company would participate in the financing of several Gilbert Miller productions on Broadway, including "Promise," "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" and "Tovarich."

LAUGHTON'S



by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

ON or about December 4th, if present plans carry, American and British audiences will attend simultaneous premieres of "Rembrandt," produced by Alexander Korda for London Films with Charles Laughton in the title role and to be distributed by United Artists. The film, unseen as yet in completed form, is a topic of unusual interest in Wardour street. Advance stills reproduced herewith afford partial explanation of this interest. Add that the producer started operations with a budget of $980,000, that he personally directed the picture, that Mr. Laughton is the star and that the last time this director and actor worked together the result of their labors was "Henry VIII," and it is easy to understand why trade expectancy is, in the main, high. There are reasons, too, why it is not unanimously so.

Factors ranged on the side of optimism are preponderant. Side by side atop the list of reasons for expecting a production of major calibre stand the names of Messrs. Korda and Laughton. Cited as proof of the producer's ability to deal masterfully with material of kindred character are, in addition to "Henry VIII," such pictures as "Things to Come," "Catherine the Great" and "The Scarlet Pimpernel." Offered in evidence of the actor's facility for making difficult characterizations come alive are his performances in the picture named, in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Les Miserables," "Ruggles of Red Gap" and, of course, "Mutiny on the Bounty."

Foremost among the factors noted by the pessimistically inclined is the subject matter of the story. The principal character is an artist and one is asked to recall a major film in which the fortunes of a painter proved of vital interest to a large sector of the paying public. The setting is

"REMBRANDT"

A HERALD PICTORIAL PREVIEW IN ADVANCE STILLS

Holland, an unfamiliar screen locale, and the story involves application of unfamiliar Dutch laws. It is granted, of course, that Messrs. Korda and Laughton have demonstrated possession of talents particularly appropriate to the task of overcoming these thematic obstacles. It is held to be not improbable, too, that in the very unfamiliarity of setting, story and leading role may reside the element of legitimate novelty which is, by common consent, accountable for more screen successes than any other thing.

The picture is related to "Henry VIII" additionally in that Elsa Lanchester, who made her screen debut in that film, plays one of the two principal feminine roles. "David Copperfield," "Naughty Marietta" and "The Ghost Goes West" have engaged her talents since. The other leading feminine character is portrayed by Gertrude Lawrence, long prominent on the stage and seen in such British pictures as "Aren't We All?", "Lord Camber's Ladies" and "Mimi."

The story, naturally, is in large measure biographical, tracing the personal history of the great Dutch painter from the peak of popularity to the pit of poverty and, finally, to the composed status of his declining years, and emphasizing the domestic side of that personal history, for itself and for its significance in relation to the artist's work. It is well known that the painter lived no commonplace existence. Scenes from the film presented on these pages are indicative of the period, the tempo and the general character of the production accorded it.

FORMER N. Y. MAYOR McKEE NAMED "CZAR" TO RULE MUSIC INDUSTRY

Publishers' Association Seeks Solution of Decline of Music Business and Return to Profitable Operation

Joseph V. McKee, former Acting Mayor of New York and one time president of the New York Board of Aldermen, will rule the music publishing industry, and, the publishers hope, revivify it, as national "coordinator" or "czar" and counsel for the Music Publishers Protective Association. Coincidentally with this announcement it was revealed that the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers and the British Performing Rights Society will ask Canadian exhibitors to petition the Canadian Government to relax its new regulations limiting the rates which may be charged for the public performance of music for profit in the Dominion.

The Association's announcement of Mr. McKee's appointment said:

"In accepting this work, Judge McKee becomes in the music industry what Judge Landis is in baseball, the absolute arbiter of all matters pertaining to the fair conduct of business within the industry."

Confirming his appointment, the new "czar" said that it was effective at once. He added that the appointment was so new he had had no time to familiarize himself with all his duties or what was expected of him. He said that he played no musical instrument.

Seeks Solution of Fall

The announcement continued in part:

"The music publishing industry is one of the oldest in the world, and one of the most important from the standpoint of its effect upon national life, appealling as it does to the emotional side of the human race. In this field it probably exerts a greater influence than any other single force.

"Judge McKee said today that music is undoubtedly one of the necessary commodities of the nation. It affects the home life of every individual, and is as universal in its need as air and water. We cannot imagine radio without music, nor motion pictures without music, nor a phonograph company successfully carrying on business without music.

Industry Not Successful

"The use of music in all fields and in the daily life of every individual is so widespread that it would appear that the music publishing industry ought to be commercially the most successful industry in the country. This is not the fact. It is far from being a commercially successful industry. There would seem to be some basic reason why this is so.

"Part of Judge McKee's work will be to see if a solution to this problem cannot be found and a reason why the publication of music has not been more profitable within late years cannot be discovered. It is a matter of national importance that the music industry should be successful, and it shall be our endeavor to make it so."

The appeal to the Canadian exhibitors to seek relief from the new Dominion music regulations was decided upon by E. C. Mills, general manager of ASCAP, and Leslie Boosey, head of the British music licensing organization, after a meeting with a committee of American distributors at the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America office. The music society representatives and the distributors could not reach agreement on a proposal to have the companies pay the standard music tax rates of their Canadian theatre accounts directly to the music licensing body here, with the implication that the tax could be absorbed by film rentals. Such a procedure would avoid the Canadian regulations.

Distributors, it was said, rejected the proposal at the meeting this week on the ground that it would be an incentive to exhibitors elsewhere to demand that the music tax be absorbed by the distributors with no assurance that film rentals could be increased to recover it.

Restrictions in Effect

If the Canadian regulations are not relaxed, the Canadian Performing Rights Society, owned jointly by ASCAP and the British society, will cease to function except as a policing agency for copyright owners, with the prospect that musical pictures could not be licensed for exhibition in Canada, it was said. Since the new Government licensing restrictions went into effect the Canadian organization has been issuing licenses on a month to month basis only.

Mr. Mills and Mr. Boosey were scheduled to leave for Toronto this weekend to confer with leading Canadian exhibitors on the move to obtain their support in having the music tax regulations modified. The step is understood to be a last resort of the music licensing agencies.

Negotiations under which the music publishing house of Chappell & Co., Inc., was to take over operation of Harms, Inc., on a percentage basis from Warner Brothers, have been discontinued. Differences between Max Dreyfus of Chappell and officials of Warner Brothers on the terms of the proposed deal were said to have ended the discussions.

Reports that Warner Brothers and ASCAP, only recently reconciled after a split last winter, have become entangled in a controversy over royalty allocations, have been denied emphatically by Mr. Mills for ASCAP. The reports were that the producing company had charged the Society's publisher availability committee with unfairness in determining the value of the Harms, Inc., T. B. Harms Co., Witmark and Remick catalogues.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has installed its own checkers at the New Haven exchange. This is the third office where the service has been started, New York and Boston being the other two.

Plan No Increases In Holland Prices

by PHILIP DE SCHAAP
in Amsterdam

The Dutch Motion Picture Federation has announced that there will be no increase in admission prices in Holland as a result of the devaluation of the guilder, as had been expected.

It is not expected that the Dutch theatre owners will be forced to pay higher film rentals in view of the financial revision. In any case, the Federation has declared that it is impossible for theatre operators to pay any higher rentals. It is equally difficult, the organization has insisted, for the theatres to charge the patron a higher price, pointing out that similar efforts met with failure in Belgium and England, when currencies in those countries were devalued.

It is also apparent that distributors in foreign countries where the currency has depreciated will receive less for their pictures than in the past, since the Dutch theatre owners cannot pay more guilders.

Loet C. Barnstijn, producer, and distributor here for United Artists, Columbia and the Disney cartoons, has added a short subject department to his studio at Wassenaar, near the Hague, as public interest in short subjects mounts steadily. Mr. Barnstijn has purchased all the equipment of the N. V. Omnium Film Corp., which formerly specialized in shorts.

The devaluation of the Dutch guilder has placed American offices here in a position similar to that obtaining when the American dollar was devaluated three years ago. Before Dutch devaluation, the dollar was quoted at 1.50 florins, while now it is set at 1.80 florins, reducing dollar profits by about 20 per cent.

The move is expected eventually to result in an increase in admission prices, based on an expected rise in film rentals, general exploitation costs and like factors.

Sunday Show Fights Waged in Virginia

Court fights on behalf of Sunday shows in the state of Virginia this week were in progress in several communities. A case against Harry A. Wesserman is pending before Judge James R. Duncan in the Alexandria police and civil court and S. H. Nothington, manager of the Bluebird, with H. Rubin, owner of the Century, both at Petersburg, have appealed fines imposed in police court for operating on Sunday. Both theatre operators were tried in the Hustings Court, and juries failed to agree in each case.

20 WPA STAGE COMPANIES PRESENT SINCLAIR LEWIS' ANTI-FASCIST PLAY

Rights to "It Can't Happen Here" Turned Over to Federal Theatre Project After MGM's Refusal to Screen It

The most ambitious single stage project ever attempted in these United States was undertaken Tuesday evening by the United States Government's relief agency of the Federal Theatre Project of the Works Progress Administration, which presented 20 different companies in a stage version of "It Can't Happen Here," from the anti-Fascistic novel of the same name by Sinclair Lewis. The openings were in 18 cities, from Boston to Tampa and from New York to Seattle on the Pacific.

The novel was dramatized by Mr. Lewis and John C. Moffitt, a motion picture scenarist. The scenery for all the presentations was designed in New York by Adrian Cracraft.

Five Premieres Postponed

The production was originally scheduled for presentation by 25 units of the Federal Theatres but five were postponed. A production scheduled for Brooklyn, N. Y., was set back until November 5th when several members of the cast resigned to take regular stage engagements. The Kansas City and Des Moines presentations were postponed indefinitely and the Italian companies which were to stage the play in Newark and San Francisco were delayed because of translation difficulties.

The New York metropolitan area had five separate openings. The largest, attended by the authors, WPA officials and others, was at the Adelphi theatre. A Yiddish version was presented at the Biltmore theatre and a third was staged in Tomkinsville, Staten Island, by the Suitcase theatre, a traveling unit which will offer to play in community centers, schools and other auditoriums. In Yonkers and Newark were other versions, both given by companies which will go on tour.

Other presentations were in Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles (where the play was begun with a pantomimic prelude depicting the country on the eve of a dictatorship), Tacoma, Seattle (where a Negro company played with the emphasis on the life of a racial minority under dictatorship), Boston, Birmingham, Denver, Detroit, Bridgeport, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Omaha, Miami and Tampa (with a Spanish cast and the locale in Cuba).

The Story

Sinclair Lewis in his novel undertook to show how a rabble-rousing demagogue, running for president on a raucously "American" program, could set up a Fascist dictatorship before tolerant liberals could realize what was happening. The action revolves around Doremus Jessup, editor of a paper in Fort Beulah, Vermont, and other characters in the town representing all types of the American scene. The editor at first supports the candidacy of the potential dictator and does not awaken to the dangers until he sees the arrogance and brutality of the armed dictatorship which is set up soon after election. He then escapes to Canada and joins an underground movement to overthrow the new and strange government. Details are concerned with the various horrors possible under Fascism.

The book was a mild sensation and a best-seller when it was published last year, achieving its greatest publicity last winter when Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, having bought the screen rights to the picture, announced that it had decided not to produce it. The author immediately charged "censorship," and in a long statement asserted that pressure had been exerted by the Production Code Administration or the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America to ban the picture. This was denied and MGM officially declared that it had been decided to shelve the production because there obviously would be no foreign market for it. Sales of the book reached new highs immediately.

Turned Over to U. S. Theatre

Last summer it was announced that the author had turned over the stage rights to his best-seller to the Federal Theatre Project "because it could best distribute widely the ideas of 'It Can't Happen Here.'" He and John C. Moffitt, a former Hollywood scenarist, retired to Vermont and created the first draft of the stage version, changes being made as work progressed on the production slated for the Adelphi theatre in New York. During preparation many old scenes were scratched out and new ones written in. Some of the companies this week were reported to be using early versions and some later editions, with the version and the settings changed for the different foreign language productions being staged.

Newspaper comment on the ubiquitous opening was divided, with most editors devoting more space to factual history of the novel, the play, and WPA arrangements for its staging than to actual reviews. Criticism of the script as loosely welded and not too effectively produced was general.

The conservative New York Herald Tribune under a headline, "'It Can't Happen Here' Happens Fast for WPA," charged that the play "was rushed through production in order to be shown before Election Day."

In support of this charge the paper added that in the past the Federal Theatre has not been averse to postponing productions almost indefinitely if WPA officials believed they were not ready. In this case, it is pointed out, "so great was the haste to meet the premiere date that many actors in the New York productions had only a week of rehearsals." Several actors in the WPA cast were quoted as saying that one reason for the haste is a move on the part of the officials of the Theatre Project to justify the existence of a Federal Theatre.

The Herald Tribune further saw possibility of sale of the production to a commercial producer within the next three weeks in an order to stop the sale of advance tickets. "Under the basic agreement between the authors and the WPA," the paper said, "the playwright has only to guarantee the Federal Theatre a showing of three weeks. After that period he can turn it over to a commercial producer. The author receives $50 a week for each production. Mr. Lewis and Mr. Moffitt are scheduled to split more than $1,000 a week in royalties from the government."

"Something Almost Bubonic"

Gilbert W. Gabriel, drama critic of William Randolph Hearst's New York American, observed that "there was something almost bubonic — or, more aptly, like Election night bonfires—about the way in which so many productions of the dramatized 'It Can't Happen Here' broke out simultaneously in so many sections of the country last evening." Mr. Gabriel criticized the script as being too heavy and too obviously a preachment.

The New York Times devoted a full column to a fact story of the production listing the number and location of the simultaneous openings. The story quoted Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, national director of the Federal Theatre Project, as estimating that more than 1,000 persons are employed in the several companies. The cost of materials and equipment varied, Mrs. Flanagan said, as did the different ver-

Community Theatres Constructed With WPA Funds in Wisconsin

The Works Progress Administration, already in competition with the stage and motion picture through productions and exhibitions in both fields of amusement, is now engaged in building theatres to be used for motion picture exhibition and similar purposes in small towns lacking other stage facilities. The latest project is a community theatre to cost $30,000 planned for Omro, Wisconsin, a town of about 1,200, situated 12 miles from Oshkosh.

The plan is sponsored by the Omro Businessmen's Association, which has been showing films in the high school annex. There is no theatre in the town. The architects are Knoop and Knobla of Oshkosh.

WPA funds have been used for somewhat similar projects in other small Wisconsin communities. At Cassville a new community center has been completed at a cost of $41,000, containing a gymnasium for the high school, and an auditorium to be used for basketball games, dances and musical and dramatic productions. Cassville has a population of 875. At Keshena a new community house has been erected for members of the Menominee tribe. The first floor of this building has an auditorium to seat about 300 and is equipped with a projection room. A motion picture projector is to be purchased later.

FOUR COMPANIES SHOW PROFIT GAIN AS GENERAL OUTLOOK BRIGHTENS

Twentieth Century-Fox Will Report Net of $7,500,000 for Year, Says Schenck; Gross $1,150,000 a Week

The financial outlook of the industry continued to loom bright this week with reports of gains and profits by four companies. The gross received by Twentieth Century-Fox from film sales and rentals approximates $1,150,000 weekly at present and indications are that the company will show a net profit of $7,500,000 at the end of year, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, said. Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation and subsidiaries reported a net profit after all charges of $666,080.63 for the 39 weeks ended September 26th.

The weekly gross being recorded by Twentieth Century-Fox is an increase of 40 per cent over June and well ahead of the corresponding period in 1935, Mr. Schenck told the Pacific Coast edition of Wall Street Journal.

The board chairman's earnings estimate compared with a net of $3,090,135 for the corresponding 12 months of 1935, which included about six months operation prior to the merger of Twentieth Century with Fox Film Corporation. He said that increased operating efficiency at the studio since the merger has brought about a reduction in overhead charges to 28 per cent of the gross, as compared with a former charge of 33 per cent of the gross.

The estimated 1936 earnings would be equivalent to about $4.50 a share on the average number of outstanding common shares during the year, after dividends on the preferred. The estimate is said to be based on net operating income of $8,000,000 exclusive of a $1,000,000 dividend on the company's 42 per cent interest in National Theatres Corporation. With an allowance of $1,500,000 for taxes, including provision for Federal surtax on undistributed profits, and minor adjustments, net profit would become $7,500,000.

The company's total dividend disbursements for 1936 are expected to amount to $4,500,000 by the end of the year, which would leave $3,000,000 for surplus.

KAO's $666,080 Profit

The $666,080.63 profit reported by KAO compares with a similar net profit for the 39 weeks ended September 28, 1935, of $172,114.33.

B. F. Keith Corporation and subsidiaries, for the same period in 1936 reported a net profit after all charges of $531,342.56, which compares with a net of $176,753.45 in the 1935 period.

The KAO profit for 1936 was equal to $10.35 per share on the 64,304 shares of seven per cent cumulative preferred stock, comparing with $2.67 per share on the same stock for the same period in 1935.

The KAO report showed profit before provision for depreciation and income taxes of $1,371,558.34, depreciation of $549,937.71, and income tax provision of $155,540.

Estimated figures, subject to audit and adjustment at the end of the calendar year, indicated the KAO net profit for the 52 weeks ended September 26, 1936, was $897,039.70 after all charges, equal to $13.95 per share on the seven per cent cumulative stock.

The 39-week profit before provision for depreciation and income tax of B. F. Keith amounted to $1,065,828.30, depreciation was $427,960.74, and income tax provision $106,025.

The estimated 52-week net profit to September 26, 1936, on B. F. Keith was given at $819,734.05 after all charges. No provision was made in any of the figures for the surtax on undistributed earnings.

Heywood-Wakefield Net

Net profit for the Heywood-Wakefield Company, theatre equipment supply house, for the nine months ended September 30th after all charges, but before provision for the federal income tax, was $472,796. This compares with a net loss of $58,981 in the first nine months of 1935. A recapitalization plan calling for issuance of $700,000 of five per cent ten-year debentures, and certain first preferred stock, Series B, $25 par, has been submitted to stockholders by the directors.

Aleograph Loses Rehearing Appeal

The United States supreme court in Washington this week refused a rehearing of the infringement action between the Aleograph Company and Electrical Research Products, Inc., and Western Electric, in the course of which Erpi obtained from the Texas courts an injunction to restrain the Aleograph company from bringing further infringement suits.

The quarrel, over synchronization of projecting apparatus, is one of long standing, it was indicated by briefs filed with the court, originating when Aleograph sued Erpi in the West Texas United States district court, which rendered a decision, later affirmed by the fifth circuit court of appeals, that no infringement had taken place. Aleograph then sued Western Electric, again losing, and Erpi sought and won an injunction against the bringing of further suits, which was affirmed by the circuit court.

In bringing the case to Washington, Aleograph contended that the lower court decisions infringed on their rights and said there would not be a multiplicity of suits, but only such a number as were necessary to secure justice. The effect of the lower court decisions, the court was told, would be to allow Erpi and Western Electric to proceed without restriction to violate the anti-trust laws.

Museum Gets Foreign Films

A new series of programs to be released by the Museum of Modern Art Film Library beginning January 1, 1937, for circulation to museums, colleges and film study groups throughout the country have been announced. The series covers the development of the motion picture in Germany and France. The programs are as follows:

Program 5b: 1928, "Therese Raquin," directed by Jacques Feyder, Warner Brothers Pictures.

Hal Roach Planning Six Musicals a Year

Six big musical features per year, "at three times the cost" of his present features will be produced by Hal Roach for release through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the producer revealed in New York this week upon his arrival from Hollywood. The feature program will supplement the 12 Our Gang comedies.

"We are completely changing over our style," he said, " and all of our efforts in the feature field will be directed toward musicals."

HONOR RICHARDSON FOR 30 YEARS' SERVICE

Tributes Paid by Projectionists, Equipment Manufacturers and Staffs and Press Colleagues

Theatre projectionists, manufacturers of motion picture theatre equipment and their workers, and his colleagues of the motion picture and technical press paid tribute this week to Frank Herbert Richardson, technical editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, at a series of luncheons, a banquet and an exhibit of oldtime theatre equipment, on his completion of 30 years of service to the industry on his seventieth birthday, October 25th. The week was designated in the equipment field as "Richardson Week."

The American Projection Society honored its "foremost member" with a testimonial banquet last Saturday midnight at New York's Pennsylvania Hotel.

W. W. Byrne, president of the Society, said that Mr. Richardson "through his indomitable will and his everlasting quest for 'perfection in projection,' is responsible, more than any other single factor, for the vast improvement in projection today over what it was when he entered the field, more than three decades ago."

President Roosevelt sent from the White House to the banquet a telegram addressed to Colvin Brown, vice-president of QUIGLEY PUBLICATIONS, in which he said, "It gives me pleasure to join with the members of the American Projection Society in doing honor to F. H. Richardson."

Frank C. Walker, head of Comerford Theatres Circuit, telegraphed "appreciation for your unrelenting efforts to raise the standards of motion picture projection."

To the American Projection Society, at the banquet, R. C. Buckley, director, and Harry Dobson, chief inspector of the Canadian Government amusement revenue branch, Toronto, wired appreciation of Mr. Richardson's counseling, and expressed the hope that "the good work he has so successfully carried on in the improvement of projection and for the betterment of conditions be extended for many years to come."

Mr. Richardson was commended in other telegrams for his work in behalf of the welfare of projectionists, by projectionists' Local 299 of Winnipeg, Canada; Local 433, Davenport, Iowa; Local 173 of Toronto; Local 348, Vancouver; the Syracuse Local, through its secretary, William P. Meany; Local 411, Williamsport, Pa., and Local 162, San Francisco, among others.

The Guild of Projectionists cabled from London, "on behalf of Mr. Richardson's many friends in England."

Carl Laemmle wired from his home in Beverly Hills, California. Other well wishers included Joseph LaRose, Oscar Schmidt, Thomas P. Hover.

M. Williams, secretary of Local 348 of Vancouver, B. C., telegraphed that his union had taken the occasion to award Mr. Richardson an honorary life membership, "in appreciation of your life work in the service of projectionists and the entire motion picture industry."

Eastman Kodak Company of Rochester wired good wishes, through George A. Blair, as did National Theatre Supply Company and Sales-On-Sound Corporation.

Walter E. Green president of National, credited Mr. Richardson with "bringing about a decided improvement in the standards of our craft."

Some 300 attended the banquet Saturday night, where Lester B. Isaac, chief of projection of Loew's, presided, was toastmaster. On the dais were W. W. Byrne, president of American Projection Society; Herbert Griffin and P. A. McGuire, of International Projector Corporation; Arthur S. Dickinson, technical advisor of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; John May of the Schine Circuit; M. D. O'Brien, Loew's, Inc.; Will C. Smith, National Theatre Supply Company; William Reed, one of the oldest living projectionists; Joseph Basson, president of Local 306 of the IATSE; Charles Burton, one of New York's first exhibitors, and Glen Humphries, secretary of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Machine Operators.

Honored at Luncheon

The second major event of the week's program was a luncheon given in Mr. Richardson's honor by the National Theatre Supply Company and the International Projector Corporation, on Tuesday. This also was held at the Pennsylvania hotel, with Walter Green, president of National, as chairman, and Herbert Griffin, vice-president and sales manager of International Projector, as toastmaster.

Tribute was paid to Mr. Richardson for his efforts in behalf of "better projection" by a number of speakers, including Dr. A. N. Goldsmith, past president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers; Earl G. Hines, president of International Projector and also of General Theatres Equipment, Inc.; S. K. Wolf, president of the SMPE; Martin Quigley and Terry Ramsaye.

Cites "Tenacity of Purpose"

"I can pay Mr. Richardson no greater tribute," he said, "than to read this list and to express our admiration for his bravery, his tenacity of purpose and his perpetual striving for better things."

In a brief response, the honored guest emphasized the efforts of the manufacturers of projection equipment, and related technical agencies, to improve projection standards, without which, he said, "my efforts surely would have failed."

Among others attending the Tuesday luncheon were William A. Reed of Atlantic City, who holds an honorary membership in the SMPE as a pioneer projectionist; William W. Byrne, John R. Krulish, Will C. Smith, P. A. McGuire, Sylvan Harris, Cecil R. Wood, George C. Edwards, W. C. Kunzmann, P. D. Ries, Anthony Rugino, Otto Nelson, E. R. Morin, H. F. Heidigger, J. Frank, Jr., P. J. Haller, G. A. Erickson, Rudy Kneuer, Joseph D. Basson, Frank J. Ruddock, Harry Ruben, M. D. O'Brien, Lester Isaac, A. J. Palmer, H. Stengel, A. S. Dickinson, A. E. Meyer, Alfred R. T. Bishop, F. J. Nolan, F. A. Healey, J. J. Connolly, Oscar Neu, M. Turnbull, J. N. Servies, Larry Jones, Martin F. Bennett, Jr., A. L. Raven and H. Levine.

Mr. Richardson was tendered a luncheon by 150 members of the Pioneer Projectionists' Association at the Pennsylvania Hotel on Wednesday.

Martin Quigley and Quigley Publications were to give a luncheon to Mr. Richardson on Thursday, also at the Hotel Pennsylvania, to which the following were invited:

From International Projector: Earle C. Hines, president; Herbert Griffin, vice-president; M. V. Carroll, treasurer, and P. J. Haller and P. A. McGuire; Walter E. Green, president of National Theatre Supply Company; Sidney K. Wolf, president, SMPE; Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith; John Chalmers; W. W. Byrne, president, American Projection Society; M. C. Batsel, RCA Manufacturing Company; Lester Isaac, in charge of projection, Loew's, Inc.; Harry Rubin, projection general of Paramount; Frank Cahill, in charge of projection for Warner Brothers; Charles Horstman, chief projectionist for RKO; William C. Kunzmann of National Carbon, and Sylvan Harris of the SMPE.

From the staffs of the various Quigley Publications there will be, besides Mr. Richardson: Martin Quigley, Colvin Brown, Terry Ramsaye, Ernest A. Rovelstad, James P. Cunningham, William R. Weaver, Fred Baehler, James Ivers, A-Mike Vogel, George Schutz, Raymond Gallagher, Herbert V. Fecke, Ray Gallo, Robert Harrison, Pablo Colon, Maurice D. Kann, Theodore J. Sullivan, Dennis J. Shea and Leo Brady.

George Edwards General Chairman

The general chairman of "Richardson Week" is George Edwards, past-president of the American Projection Society. Will C. Smith of National Theatre Supply is secretary and Anthony Rugino, treasurer. Some 22 committees representing the field of projection, even to the extent of a Canadian group, are headed as follows:

Arrangements, Alfred R. T. Bishop; Past-Presidents, Joseph D. Basson; Society of Motion Picture Engineers, Dr. A. N. Goldsmith; Exhibitors, George Skouras; Theatre equipment executive, Will C. Smith; Entertainment, M. D. O'Brien; Honorary members of A. P. S., George C. Edwards; IATSE, George E. The collection of projection equipment covering 40 years assembled by Herbert Griffin, vice-president of International Projector, and exhibited on the mezzanine of the Pennsylvania Hotel during Richardson week in charge of George Edward, will be made a permanent exhibit, subsequently, in the American Museum of Science and Industry, RCA Building, Rockefeller City.

Monogram Organizing National Distribution

The completion of a national distribution organization for Monogram Pictures in the near future is predicted this week in New York by W. Ray Johnston as a result of interest being displayed by exchange men in the company's new plans. The company may add two serials to the schedule of 28 features and eight westerns it plans to produce for the 1937-38 season, Mr. Johnston said.

"Evil Genius," a mystery story by Wilkie Collins, has been added to the Monogram story properties.

Court Reserves Plagiarism Decision

New York Supreme Court Justice Peter Schmuck Tuesday reserved decision in the plagiarism suit filed by Sigbert Cohn against Paramount, Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur and Brandt and Brandt. In his complaint Mr. Cohn alleges "The Scoundrel" was taken from his play, "Wer Weint um Juckenack." An injunction and accounting of all profits of the picture are sought.

JOHN EDGAR HOOVER
DIRECTOR

FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION
U. S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE
WASHINGTON, D. C.

I want to take this opportunity to congratulate the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corporation upon its series of "Crime Does Not Pay" pictures. I have personally viewed several of these pictures and feel that they are performing a most worthwhile purpose in helping to curb crime.

In my opinion, every public-spirited citizen should be alert to the viciousness of organized crime throughout the United States and the lesson that there is no romance in a life of crime should be taught at every opportunity. The youngster should be impressed with the fact that he cannot get anything out of a life of crime but sorrow and that those who think they can make crime pay wake up too late to find that crime has made them pay.

The "Crime Does Not Pay" series has been most helpful in bringing this lesson to the motion picture public, and I take pleasure in commending the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corporation upon this series.

Sincerely yours,

J. Edgar Hoover

MIXED COMMENT ON WPA LEWIS PLAY

sions, from a few hundred dollars to $2,000 or more.

Brooks Atkinson, drama critic of the Times, in his review of the New York Adelphi opening, complained that the play "hardly fulfils the opportunity Mr. Lewis has given the stage, for the characters are meagerly defined, the dialogue is undistinguished and many of the scenes dawdle on one foot."

In the New York Daily News, Burns Mantle, while praising the WPA actors for a creditable job, agreed with other reviewers that the stage version of the Sinclair Lewis novel is too loosely knit to make the characters and the theme plausible.

"Soap-Box Discussion"

Motion Picture Daily called the play "a garrulous, soap-box discussion, virtually barren of anything bordering on a play of dramatic merit."

"It will be recalled that this story was withheld from motion picture production on the grounds that it appeared to contain elements inimical to the public welfare," Motion Picture Daily continued. "There was also probably the consideration that certain foreign markets might not relish the state of affairs depicted under a dictatorship. Apparently the authorities of the Works Progress Administration entertain no such scruples as to the public weal and as far as what the other nations may think it is probably felt that is what the State Department is for."

"Dramatically and historically the production is quite without merit," said the Daily. "Hollywood, if it set about the task, doubtlessly could whittle an entertainment out of the elements of the story. But this decidedly has not been done through the aid of Mr. Moffitt and any assistance Mr. Lewis may have rendered. Artistically Mr. Lewis may not be happy about the outcome of the play but the $50 per engagement per week allotted to the author may render him tolerant of the production's shortcomings."

Furthermore, the Motion Picture Daily observed, "The play will cause a sharp, emphatic bit of wonderment in the minds of many persons whose ears are not pleasantly attuned to the tones of the Internationale. Done as a bit of political propaganda by those who hate democracy only a little less than they hate Fascism it would be just another voice amidst the enveloping clamor. But done by the authority of the United States Government, through an agency wholly within its control and, incidentally, out of public funds, it raises a loud and resounding question.

"There will be those, for instance, who will wonder about lines of dialogue classifying the United States with the nations of brutal conquest; about the burlesque of the opposition candidate's alleged lack of a foreign policy; about the vilification of manufacturers generally with a shot at the steel industry. A rousing cheer for the class war can hardly escape notice," concluded the Daily.

Reports of the individual openings in the key cities follow:

by JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

in New York

National attention on Uncle Sam's unique wholesaling of Sinclair Lewis's dramatic preachment was centered, of course, on New York, where the "key" English version was presented at the Adelphi theatre, on West 54th Street, and a Yiddish interpretation was given at the Biltmore, off Times Square.

The Adelphi premiere was given official flavor by the patronage, in Row B, center, of Lieutenant-Colonel Brehon Somerville, general over all WPA and PWA projects in the New York area; by Hallie Flanagan, national director of the WPA federal theatre, and by Philip W. Barber, Federal Theatre Project director for New York—each with a retinue of division and section lieutenants. Colonel Somerville rode up to the Adelphi in his black limousine, plated: "WPA Official Car No. 1." That was the signal for the curtain to rise, promptly at 8:50.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE FILMS FOR STUDENTS

The foreign language department of Pasadena Junior College, Pasadena, Cal., has completed arrangements with Myron Shellman, manager of the Raymond theatre, to present a series of foreign sound motion pictures for the benefit of students of these languages.

The project is sponsored by the actitities committee of the Junior College and tentative plans call for the showing of several Spanish and French dialogue pictures to start the season.

Both New York theatres charged 25 cents for balcony seats and 55 cents "tops" in the orchestra, prices far removed from the $3.30 and $1.00 prices charged, respectively, for the best seats by Broadway's legitimate and motion picture theatres, which learned Tuesday night that they now must compete with the 56,000 advance ticket sale already rolled up for the Adelphi showing alone, guaranteeing a run for 10 weeks at least.

The audience which stormed the Adelphi—and it did storm—was probably the most unusually complexioned at a first night showing in this generation of Broadway. One could have picked with ease the characters usually seen either on Union Square's soap boxes or at the exclusive night clubs in the side streets of the fifties. The stiffly-bosomed and ermine-wrapped were considerably in the minority, but were as much the subject of the curious camera eye of the March of Time as the apparently more representative followers of the strident notes of the Internationale. The publishers of the magazine Time had sent a special March of Time camera crew, evidently anticipating a freakish cross-audience.

The theatre was packed and the overflow stood six lines behind the last orchestra row.

Nor was the crowding alleviated any by the army of burly Negro ushers who stood in stark inexperience at ushering, dressed for the occasion in the brightly tinted blouses of Russian peasants.

Thus was the Negro usher ushered into Broadway theatricals.

On the coldest October 27th in New York in United States Weather Bureau history, early arrivals found the Adelphi theatre bearing a marked resemblance to a refrigerator. One of the WPA workers had switched on the cooling system instead of the heating apparatus.

To the tunes of "Yankee Doodle," played by a WPA orchestra, the spotlight was thrown on the main curtain to reveal an American spread-eagle. His beak, drawn by WPA workers, was more pronounced than those implanted on the walls around the White House.

It was a gay moment as the orchestra, "loaned" for the occasion by one branch of the United States Government (Federal Music Project), to another, struck up Victor Herbert's "American Fantasy," and then followed with a special "It Can't Happen Here" number by Hans Bruno Meyer. The exit was to John Philip Sousa's "Semper Fidelis." Harry Meyer conducted, and Carl Fisher provided the music, "by courtesy."

The program frankly declared that the play was staged by "The Federal Theatre of the Works Progress Administration of the United States of America."

"However," the program added, "the viewpoint expressed in the play is not necessarily that of the WPA or any other agency of the Government."

"CREDITS": "Settings executed by WPA Federal Theatre Workshop; Sable scarf, courtesy of H. Jaeckel and Sons, Fifth Avenue."

Sinclair Lewis, at the final curtain, answered to the call of "Author! Author!" He mounted the stage and to the shouts of his friends, "Speech, 'Red,' Speech," Mr. Lewis replied: "I've been making a speech since seven minutes to nine."

That was all.

Comments of the capacity audience of 600 in the Warburton theatre, Yonkers, indicated that the political implications of the play fell flat. In some cases the point seemed to have been missed entirely. with the interest of the crowd, equally drawn from mixed economic levels, focussed on the melodramatic aspects. The patrons were those who would be seen at an evening performance at a neighborhood motion picture house. A fair cast was handicapped by poor stage management and settings and suffered from insufficient rehearsal.

Screen notables, remembering the history of the story which had been bought by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for production and then shelved, attended the opening at the Mayan theatre in Los Angeles in equal numbers with other groups which together comprised a widely differentiated audience, including relief workers and members of the upper income brackets. Tickets were reported to have been purchased in large blocks by social-minded individuals and groups and freely distributed.

The quality of the production and the efforts of the cast were effective and the transition of the basic premise to topical entertainment purposes incited applause. This natural reception on the part of the heterogeneous audience indicated that each patron chose to estimate the show from a personal viewpoint.

A capacity crowd of men and women in about equal numbers filled 1,500 seats in the Federal theatre in Cleveland at 50 cents top and 25 cents general admission. The audience was composed largely of those of foreign birth or extraction between the ages of 20 and 40. It also included a few of the intelligentsia, of the type who always seek a novelty. The crowd was orderly and only moderately demonstrative. Opposition to the portrayed dictatorship was definitely indicated by applause during the performance, which was given apparently without thought of the topical application of the

A Negro cast presented the play at the Moore theatre in Seattle, a west coast stronghold of labor. Followers of the social drama, many political followers and approximately 10 to 15 per cent Negroes comprised the capacity audience of 2,000 and the scores unable to gain admission. The audience showed rapt attention to the theme and enthusiasm over the production. Applause evidenced general satisfaction of a majority with the play's principles and mechanics.

The Lewis drama attracted 1,200 patrons to the 1,400-seat Columbia theatre in San Francisco, former first rank legitimate house. The management claimed that the house was booked to near capacity for the four nights following the opening and that few passes were issued. A predominantly white collar audience greeted the production enthusiastically but appeared to be gripped as much by the melodramatic as the political aspects of the play. Occasionally they applauded pro-Fascist lines as freely as they did anti-Fascist situations. There was no apparent reaction to possible political propaganda. The show is booked for a five-week run.

An audience of 300, of which 60 per cent was said to have received passes, received the play in a better mood than dramatic critics expected in Omaha. The fairly adequate cast was handicapped by a poor auditorium and lack of equipment. The patrons generally were those who attend Community Playhouse productions in the city.

A responsive audience that appreciated the play and the effort necessary to present such a difficult novel in dramatic form were pleased with the Chicago presentation. A packed theatre witnessed the opening, which drew favorable comment for good production and a capable cast. The reactions of the typical Chicago theatre crowd were normal, with no unusual response to any of the situations. Comments were laudatory, with the general opinion that the material was strong stuff but interesting. Some situations which parallel present day occurrences brought laughs but not ridicule.

Snow and rain in Denver held down the opening crowd to half capacity but those who attended applauded freely, expressing special appreciation for several leads who gave excellent characterizations. The attendance is expected by the management to build during the three weeks' run. The scenery, done by Pancho Gates, was technically perfect, and the direction by Michael Andrew Slane was good.

The conservative drama lovers of Boston crowded the Repertory theatre there for the opening, with many turned away. One-third of the audience was in formal attire and on the whole the patrons appeared to be average theatre-goers. Admission was 50 cents top and 35 cents general admission. The production, directed by Arthur Richier, was well done and the settings, aided by the use of a revolving stage, were most effective. The audience was alert to the timeliness of the play and responded enthusiastically to story and plot. Comments between the acts and after the final curtain were laudatory.

The Latin unit of the Federal theatre Project in Tampa originally had scheduled "Seventh Heaven" for this week's productions, with "It Can't Happen Here" set for next week, but the dates were reversed at the last minute. The play was given in Spanish and the original setting of a small town in Vermont was changed to a Cuban locale. A typical Latin audience of hardly more than 250 displayed very little enthusiasm, some applause at the conclusion and a few hisses from the upper balcony.

A near capacity audience saw the opening of the play in the B. F. Keith theatre in Indianapolis, the crowd totaling about 1,500. The audience was more sophisticated than any the Federal players have drawn since they opened, but the cream of the carriage trade was not in evidence. Patrons admired the sets and apparently were highly in favor of the theme. The acting was slow and the stage management only average. A party of Democratic notables in the boxes included Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, wife of the Governor of Indiana.

Announcement of Adoption of MPTOA Trade Practice Program Is Awaited

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and unofficial observers in the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America were on Wednesday night awaiting momentarily the announcement from one or more major distributors of their acceptance of the whole, or parts, of the MPTOA's ten-point program for establishing and maintaining "fair trade practice" relations between exchanges and exhibitors. Adoption by the distributors, of course, will require immediate revisions of their sales policies and procedure to conform with those clauses of the program which they adopt.

It was expected that the first announcement will come from either Paramount, RKO, MGM or Universal. Twentieth Century-Fox has been compelled to effect a slight delay because of the absence in England of Sidney R. Kent, its president, while Columbia and United Artists are understood to be still poring over the legalities.

Most of the companies are expected to adopt at least a majority of the ten proposals, which range all the way from new and broader cancellation privileges to the establishment of "conciliation machinery" in the field to rule on disputes in order to keep controversies within the industry.

General Theatres Votes Initial Stock Dividend

Directors of General Theatres Equipment Corporation in New York Tuesday voted, as an initial distribution to its stockholders, a dividend upon its capital stock of $1.10 a share, payable December 10, to stock of record December 1.

In announcing the dividend, Earle G. Hinds, president, said that more than 95 per cent of the debentures, 89 per cent of the preferred stock and 78 per cent of the common stock of the old company had been deposited under the reorganization plan which was consummated in June of this year. He pointed out that the remaining holders who fail to exchange their securities on or before December 1 for the securities to which they are entitled under the plan will not participate in the dividend.

OTT, FIRST SCREEN ACTOR, DIES AT 76

Jumped Up and Down and Sneezed in Laboratory While Inventor Took First "Movies"

Frederick P. Ott, for many years an associate of Thomas A. Edison in development of the electric light, the phonograph and motion pictures, and the first motion picture actor, died last Saturday at his home in West Orange, N. J. He was 76 years old.

He first became associated with Mr. Edison in 1874, when Edison and J. P. Murray, a partner, maintained a small plant on Ward Street, Newark. After Mr. Edison withdrew from that company to conduct private research he was joined by Mr. Ott and it was then, Mr. Ott often liked to recall, he jumped up and down and sneezed while the inventor took the first "movies" in history. These immortal sneezes, brought on at the proper moment by a pinch of snuff, were filmed on a strip of Eastman Kodak Film (yet unnamed) one inch wide and fifty feet long. It was shown by a contraption which Mr. Edison called the Kinetoscope and which Mr. Edison himself regarded as a "tricky little toy with no great possibilities for future development."

Mr. Ott's motion picture career began and ended with the sneezes. In later years he often recalled with pride that "my sneezes were the first comics," but the triumph did not go to his head. His one ambition was to remain in the inventor's service as a designer and master craftsman.

With the late John Ott, his brother, Frederick Ott was one of the small group of "Edison Pioneers" who worked with the inventor for 50 years or more. He was the oldest employee of the Edison plant when he retired soon after the inventor's death in 1931. John Ott died while reading newspaper tributes to his employer.

In "A Million and One Nights," Terry Ramsaye's history of the motion picture, there is recorded the scene of the shooting of the first motion picture. Mr. Ramsaye writes:

"Ott, first of all film stars, has officially told his own story of how he behaved before the camera on those historic occasions. The authenticity of this is guaranteed, under the oath of Ott, sworn as a witness in the case of Thomas A. Edison vs. The American Mutoscope and Biograph Company, in equity No. 8289, before the day of picture press agents.

"'I had a white cloth wound around me and then a little belt to tie it in around the waist so as not to make it too baggy—look like a balloon—and then tied around the head; and then I made a monkey of myself.'

"So the motion picture was born in slapstick comedy, staged in that solemn laboratory. Many a little cylinder full of the gyrations of the monkey-shining Mr. Ott was recorded. Those were 'the follies of 1888.'"

Although he had retired from active service, Mr. Ott was frequently consulted by officials and scientists at the Edison plant in West Orange almost up to the time of his death.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Emma H. Miller Ott; three sons, Frederick W. and John H. Ott, both of Orange, Alva Edison Ott of East Orange, and one daughter, Mrs. Elma Peppel of Velleville. Mr. and Mrs. Ott celebrated their golden wedding on December 24, 1932.

Funeral services were held Tuesday night at the Weatherhead Funeral Home, in Orange, with the Rev. Henry S. Pearce, pastor of Patterson Presbyterian Memorial Church, of West Orange, officiating. Burial was at Fairmount Mausoleum, in Newark, on Wednesday.

Lutherans Adopt Resolution to Classify Films

A motion picture program which includes the appointment of a board to classify pictures was adopted this week by the 10th biennial convention of the United Lutheran Churches of America in Columbus, Ohio. The program was submitted by the Committee on Moral and Social Welfare.

More than 500 delegates attended the convention and unanimously adopted the three-point recommendation on films, as follows:

1. "We challenge our people to attend only wholesome, decent and worthwhile pictures, since degraded films work havoc with our own normal well-being and make accomplices in a conspiracy to enrich motion picture producers at the expense of the society's moral order.

2. "We urge upon all parents the wisdom of making it a rule that their minor children shall not attend motion pictures until they have satisfied themselves that the films to be shown are of the wholesome character for juveniles, and that children shall not normally have permission to attend the theatre more than once a week.

3. "We request the editors of our several publications, if feasible, to secure the services of a reliable film estimating agency and publish its evaluation of current films regularly for the information of our constituency.

4. "We challenge our people to further the cause of community selection of motion pictures by using their influence in every legitimate way in behalf of the abolition of the trade practice known as block booking and blind selling."

Court Grants Delay on RKO Notes Payment

The payment of $750,000 of RKO secured gold notes outstanding will be ordered forthwith at the time RKO's plan of reorganization is submitted to the federal court in New York in the event the plan shows that any "ulterior motive" influenced the request of November 23 for the hearing on a petition to retire the gold notes, Federal Judge William Bondy said this week in signing the order for the postponement.

The request for the later date of hearing was made by Hamilton C. Rickaby of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett, attorneys for the Atlas Corporation, which is directing the RKO reorganization. The delay was not opposed by Irving Trust Company, trustee of RKO, which presented the petition to pay off the RKO gold notes last August. The only opposition to the postponement was voiced by Joseph M. Cohen, attorney for an independent RKO stockholders' committee, who argued that the retirement of the notes would improve RKO's financial position and thereby benefit stockholders of the company.

Mr. Cohen raised the delicate point of whether payment of the outstanding notes would not leave RKO debenture holders in the position of unsecured creditors in the reorganization, and intimated that the adjournment of the hearing was desired by the large debenture holders in order to present the plan of reorganization before the question of the security behind the debentures was determined.

Efforts to settle the $9,100,000 Rockefeller Center claim against RKO by a compromise agreement have been resumed by lawyers representing the Rockefeller interests and RKO, and their success or failure will have a direct bearing on the time required to complete a reorganization plan for submission to the court. The claim has been discussed for almost two years.

New Exhibitor Group Takes Form at Meeting

Preliminary steps were taken in New York on Wednesday for the formation of a new national independent exhibitor organization with the Independent Theatre Owners Association as a nucleus at a meeting at the Hotel Astor attended by members of the ITOA and out of town exhibitors.

Details of the new group were cloaked in secrecy with both Harry Brandt, president, and John Manheimer, secretary of the ITOA refusing to discuss the plans. It is expected that representatives from at least six eastern states will join the new group.

G. A. Atkinson, publisher, denies in his Theatrical Era, in London, that a British scenario writer had died of hunger.

At least one theatre manager was set to a bit of reminiscing about our recent observations concerning the production some 20 years ago of a film called "Patria." In the picture William Randolph Hearst, the sponsor, gave expression to his conviction that an Oriental invasion threatens America, and showed Japanese and Mexican soldiers conducting such an attack. The film caused international complications. Finally, President Woodrow Wilson was moved to ask Mr. Hearst to withdraw it. Hearst merely brought the prints back to New York, cut out only those sequences showing the Mexican and Japanese flags and returned distribution of the picture to the field. All of which brings from Larry Woodin, manager of the Arcadia theatre, at Wellsboro, Pennsylvania, the following letter of additional explanation:

> Did I get a kick out of reading your column on the 20th anniversary of "Patria" in the Herald.
> If you recall, "Patria" had as its leading lady none other than Mrs. Vernon (Irene) Castle. I was a boy of 12 in those days.
> The old studios in which "Patria" was made were located at Ithaca, N. Y. The first episode of that serial was being filmed when snow fell, causing the outfit to journey south into Pennsylvania where it had not snowed. They arrived at Towanda, where my father was then (and still is) theatre manager, and proceeded to take a lot of fake racing scenes between an automobile and a train. In the cast also was Milton Sills, playing opposite Irene. When it came time to take the scenes, Mrs. Castle balked at riding in the cold and so they placed me in the racing car, adorned in Mrs. Castle's clothes, hat and cape. Along with Milton Sills we raced trains all day (in low gear) before a crew of two cameras. I got a nice new shiny dollar for my services, and dad got a packed house when "Patria" was shown locally.
> Several months later newspapers carried a story on the fact that Mrs. Castle had never used a double in her "death-defying" stunts. Not to be defamed in my great moment, the old Motion Picture News published a feature story about the little boy in Pennsylvania who did not want his great honor taken away in such newspaper stories. Of course, I was the little boy.
> Riding on the train in those scenes was none other than "Charlie Chan" himself—Warner Oland—doing his bit for Japan in the film—which bit led to Woodrow Wilson's letter as per your column.
> Those were sure the good old days. I wonder if any other theatre manager has ever doubled for any leading movie actress?—and in those days Mrs. Vernon Castle was the tops, too. Of course I might add that when the scenes I appeared in flashed on the screen, the action was at a mile-a-minute clip and the audience could not have told the difference if Mickey Mouse in person had been in that racing car.

Editor's Note: Keen resentment is felt at Mr. Woodin's remark, "If you recall," etc. For the record may it be said that our tale about the original "Patria" incident of 20 years ago was lifted, bodily, from "A Million and One Nights," written by the historian of the motion picture, our own Terry Ramsaye. We're a mere "cub" in comparison, having started motion picture reporting only 17 years ago.

Universal cabled Mrs. Wallis (King Edward) Simpson an offer in London to appear in a motion picture in Hollywood. RKO Radio could have used "Wally" in "The King Steps Out."

Anyway, "The King Steps Out" should be reaching England at about this time. Wonder what British exhibitors will do with it.

STUDIOS IN GERMANY FACING DIFFICULTIES

Exhibitors Cheered by Reduced Taxes, but Production and Distribution Are Handicapped

by J. K. RUTENBERG

in Berlin

The German film industry in the last two or three years has undergone a complete and decisive change so far as the exhibition branch is concerned. Reduction of the entertainment tax from 12 per cent of the gross income of the film theatres in 1933 to an average of 7.5 per cent in last year, the prohibition of the double feature system, the restriction on erection of new houses and the stabilization of the admission prices have favorably influenced exhibition. These regulations have made the exhibition branch the most healthy and most active part of the whole industry.

The development of the other two branches, production and distribution, has not been so steady. On the contrary, it has rather been curtailed, and important steps are likely to be taken to end an unfavorable condition.

Rentability of the German film is at present the vital problem of both production and distribution. In spite of the steadily increasing theatre attendance, and notwithstanding the reduction of the tax burden, the production and distribution businesses closed the last season with a substantial loss. Moreover, the income from pictures shown in foreign countries has declined, reaching a new low level with 12 per cent in the last year. The increased income from the German theatres therefore has been partly used to equalize the decreasing export business.

The reasons for this unfavorable development are many. First, there is a considerable increase in production time. The trend towards better and more impressive elaboration of the films has almost doubled the shooting time compared with 1933. Secondly, the abolition of the double feature program throughout the Reich has made a higher film standard necessary. Thirdly, the star salaries, in connection with a sharp and distinct trend of German production towards centralization, have grown more and more, and the severe competition of the individual corporations has favored this development. Fourthly, the shrinking export income should be met with more super films and more stars.

These facts have led to a considerable increase of production costs. The average expense per feature film in 1934-35 was reichsmarks 370,000 per film, contrasted with 440,000 reichsmarks in 1935-36, a new high. Under normal conditions an average production expense of reichsmarks 350,000 per feature can be economically exploited.

Ufa Film Corporation, however, is an exception. The company has disposed of more than a hundred cinemas in various parts of the Reich and the increased attendance at the theatres remaining has held total theatre grosses almost at the earlier figures while operating costs have been reduced. Ufa, moreover, has discharged a number of well-known stars and is turning to juveniles, signed to the company for many years ahead, to avoid over-rating.

The position of the majority of the other producers is by far not so favorable in this respect. It is not exaggerating to say that production expenses of the current year never have been surpassed. The comparatively good exhibition year 1935 in most cases has been taken as a base for individual film enterprise, and it was overlooked that 100 "super" films or more can never be exploited economically in Germany. There has been a number of attempts to curtail the increase in production expenses but they have been effective only in a few exceptional cases.

The return to normal conditions, however, is very difficult because stars and directors have been "spoiled," and because in most cases the individual film has been charged with so many burdens that only a general and slow retreat is likely to help. An increase in film rents, which at present are uniformly at 35 per cent of the gross income, is hardly possible because a sound exhibition branch must be retained. In the first years of the sound film the increased production expenses have considerably raised the film rents and the result was an unsecured and poor exhibitor who could not even bring his theatre up to modern conditions. An increase in film rents, therefore, is impossible. The return to normality must come from another side: by ultimate timing and strict fulfilment of the necessities.

F. S. Harmon Joins MPPDA New York Office

Francis S. Harmon, general secretary of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian Association for the past four years, is resigning that post to become associated with the New York office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., in a general advisory capacity next March 1.

Following his graduation from the University of Virginia and Harvard Law School, Mr. Harmon practiced law in Jackson, Miss., and later became assistant attorney general of the state. He later published the Hattiesburg, Miss., American. He was president of the National Council of Y.M.C.A.'s from 1929-31 and in 1932 was named general secretary, which post he now occupies.

Universal Club to Dance Election Eve

The annual dinner dance of the Universal Club, the association of employees of the New Universal Pictures Corporation, will be held in the Waldorf Astoria Grand Ballroom in New York next Monday night. Entertainment is being prepared under the direction of Milton Schwarzwald, producer of Mentone Musical, and Joe Moss' orchestra will play for the dancing.

Two Selznick Films Win British Honor

David O. Selznick, head of Selznick International Pictures, leads the list of Hollywood producers honored by the British Institute of Cinematography for outstanding film activity. The productions that won him the award were "David Copperfield" and "A Tale of Two Cities." Other American awards went to Winfield Sheehan for "Cavalcade," Daryl F. Zanuck for "Clive of India," Louis B. Lighton for "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," the late Irving Thalberg for "Mutiny on the Bounty," and Pandro S. Berman for "Mary of Scotland."

The British Institute is patterned after the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in this country. According to its secretary, W. E. Chadwick, the awards will not be made annually, but as often as Hollywood production merits it.

Fairbanks and Goldwyn To Produce "Marco Polo"

Samuel Goldwyn and Douglas Fairbanks have formed a partnership in Hollywood for the production of "The Adventures of Marco Polo," starring Gary Cooper. The picture will cost $1,500,000, it is said. The only other associate of Mr. Goldwyn in the production of a picture heretofore was the late Florenz Ziegfeld, on "Whoopee."

Mr. Fairbanks is now in New York for conferences with Mr. Cooper.

Deny Chicago Interests Are Seeking Skouras Firm

Neither Balaban and Katz nor Great States has any interest in the bidding for the assets of Skouras Brothers Enterprises in St. Louis, John Balaban said this week in Chicago.

Last Thursday, Arthur Greene, representing the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Finance Company of Chicago, obtained permission from Referee Hope for additional time to submit a bid for the company's 52 per cent interest in the St. Louis Amusement Company, in addition to the West End Lyric.

MGM Statement Explains Shearer Films Delay

Because of many inquiries from exhibitors and unfounded published reports concerning Norma Shearer's plans for the future, the following joint statement was issued this week in Hollywood by Louis B. Mayer, production head of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., in New York:

"I would like to make it clear that Miss Shearer is still gravely ill and has been for the past three weeks. In her grief and weakened condition, she contracted bronchial pneumonia two weeks after the loss of her beloved husband, Irving Thalberg.

"Due to the kind consideration of the press, Miss Shearer has at no time been called upon to make any statements. Our only thought at this time is the recovery of her health. The pictures prepared for her by Irving Thalberg will be held in abeyance until she is well enough and able enough to discuss them with us."

Fugitive in the Sky

Drama

Drama in the air and aground is the entertainment and showmanship substance of this picture. With a light romantic vein rung in, the film essentially is danger menaced action that follows a well established pattern. It is well produced; the acting is consistently good, and direction, aware of the kind of patronage the picture will attract, takes good advantage of the principal situations to keep things moving at a lively pace.

In search of a story, newspaper man Terry Brewer, trailing Mike Phelan, boards a transcontinental plane. He runs into something more sensational than he anticipated when passenger Killer Madsen, public enemy, terrorizes the crew and passengers of the air liner and commandeers the plane. To the tune of thrill action which creates panic in the air, the fear of the passengers is intensified by the approach of a dust storm. During all the action in which the plane is at the mercy of the elements stewardess Rita Moore, to whom Brewer looks romantically, seeks to control Madsen and comfort the passengers. Wireless equipment partially destroyed, a forced landing is made necessary. Aground, as the action moves to exciting suspense, Brewer repairs the wireless, and as he effects the capture of Madsen, he wins the affection of Rita.

Not a big picture, particularly from the name value standpoint, it nevertheless is concocted of tried and true entertainment ingredients.

General Spanky

(Hal Roach Production)

Comedy

A feature picture almost exclusively intended to entertain juvenile audiences is somewhat of a rarity these days. In picturing kids, particularly the Our Gang troupe, having fun in a way to provide wholesome enthusiasm among younger patronage contingents, "General Spanky" aspires to be that kind of a rarity. Understood by adults as such, exhibitors, given plenty of opportunity in story character, the work of the little players and their seniors, and production effects, are provided with ample opportunity so to explain the film as to win the adults as well.

Essentially the picture is a burlesque melodrama of Civil War days. Its general purpose is to give the young players any number of chances to make their elders, especially the heavy, look ridiculous. It has only a thin romantic love interest and always that element is of secondary importance to the antics of the juvenile heroes, as Spanky McFarland and his clever little darky pal, Billie Thomas, make a monkey of Irving Pichel, who in the light of the things that happen to him handles a rather unpleasant role with exceptional effects. First the two show him up as a river boat card sharp, thereby making an enemy of him for themselves and their friend Phillips Holmes. War breaks out, and because Holmes is an officer in the Confederate Army, Spanky and Billie, joined by Carl Switzer and the rest of the Gang, are for the Stars and Bars cause. Rigging up a typical Our Gang fortress, they embarrass northern captain Pichel exceedingly in front of his general, Ralph Morgan. Pichel captures Holmes, wounded, and is about to execute him as a spy when Spanky, et al, appeal to General Morgan to save their friend's life. Pichel, revealed as a 100 per cent snake in the grass and an incompetent officer, is stripped of his accoutrements and as Morgan paroles Holmes to Rosina Lawrence, he (Morgan) is sworn in as a member of Spanky's mystic army.

The production is kept in an atmosphere that appeals to child minds. Situations, action, dialogue, together with the inclusion of specialty performances by both the young and older players, are geared to youthful understanding. Naturally the film is pretty much hokum laden. Never, for even a single sequence, is there any indication that anyone connected with its production had any other idea than to provide young theatre goers with something they could understand and cause them to whoop, holler, cheer and hiss. Its field is among youngsters and those elders who get a laugh out of childish antics.

Daniel Boone

(RKO Radio)

Pioneer Drama

Reminiscent in topic and treatment of "The Iron Horse" of silent screen fame, this quasi-biographical work presents a maturer George O'Brien as the American pioneer of the title and tells the story of his leadership seriously and with evident fidelity to historic record. Into it is woven, of course, a romantic interest adequate to commercial purposes. Also present is the recently unfamiliar presentation of the Indian as an unheroic and savage menace to the white settler and, as their leader, the renegade white who kills and tortures for the joy of it.

The broad sweep of the story takes Daniel Boone into Kentucky at the head of a band of settlers, includes the establishment of Boonesboro as a stockaded community, depicts the betrayal of the pioneers by a rival of Daniel Boone in connivance with colonial authorities at Richmond, the attack upon the stockade by Indians and, ultimately, the continuing journey Westward under Boone's captaincy. Within this framework is presented the story of Boone's wooing and wedding.

Outstanding exploitation possibilities are resident in the unusual nature of the story, the historical factor, the pioneer Americanism and, of course, the natural association with outstanding past productions of kindred character.

Reviewed at the Palace theatre, where it was doubled with "Stage Struck," the film appeared to give satisfactory account of itself in terms of audience reaction.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER, New York.

The Country Gentlemen

(Republic)

Comedy

Here's a comedy that's apt to develop into a surprise. With story content, situations and dialogue that brought many laughs at the preview, it also presents a pair of favorably known names in the leading roles. The film is well mounted. It moves along at a pleasing pace. Yet it never makes any pretense of being other than it actually is, frothy, lightly exciting comedy. Wholesome throughout, automatically placing it in the all family entertainment class, it has further elements that, under the guidance of alert showmanship, should result in its being brought to the attention of a much wider patronage.

motors, are always just one step ahead of the law in the small town where they are operating. Busily blue skying a gold mine, which is temporarily sidetracked when they become romantically involved with Lila Lee and Joyce Compton, the pair land in real hot water when they are jailed as kidnap suspects. They are released, however, when Billy Heath turns up safely.

Still looking for easy money, the receipt of bonus money by the veterans in a nearby military home give Olsen and Johnson big ideas. Oil well stock selling is the gag this time, but when the well comes in dry and the gold mining swindle is exposed, the infuriated veterans start riding the promotors out of town on a rail. As they pass the well rigging, a dynamite bomb is tossed into it and immediately a gusher stars flowing. The crooks turning heroes, the gold mine also becomes a bonanza to make for a laughable surprise romantic climax.

Wild Brian Kent

(Principal-Lesser)

Romantic Drama

Ralph Bellamy, previously not associated with this type of role, is featured in this romantic drama. The story, built on formula, includes a full quota of complicated romance, drama, intrigue, exciting situations, wild riding and heroics. These elements, properly compounded as they are here, often have demonstrated their capacity to please. There is sufficient reason to expect they will again in this case.

In line with the current trend, the film essays to give its motivation a fresh twist. Brian Kent, wastrel polo player, is dropped from his team. Penniless, he lands in a cattle and wheat raising country where he is befriended by Betty Prentice and her aunt Sue. Romance crops up almost immediately between Betty and Brian, but Brian, relapsing into his gambling habits, becomes involved with Tony Baxter, who, incidentally, is attempting to wrest Betty's and Aunt Sue's property from them. Under obligation to Baxter, but sensing the danger he is to the women, Brian borrows from him money which will enable his friends to harvest their crops and get the cattle to market. Dramatic complications drive a wedge between Brian and Betty and bring the hero into open conflict with Baxter. Thrill action builds convincingly. Baxter's minions set fire to the wheat fields and spread an infectious disease among the cattle. These depredations stopped, Brian wins an exciting horse race that enables him to pay back his debt to Baxter and help Betty and Aunt Sue out of all difficulties, including the lifting of the mortgage, and the polo player settles down to the life of a rancher married to Betty.

The show appears to have the quality that gets over with the outdoor action devotees. The fact that it is adapted from a Harold Bell Wright story and presents Bellamy in a new character should serve as initial exploitation angles.

The Luckiest Girl In the World

(Universal)

Comedy Romance

With new players in the principal roles, new twists are given the plot of the rich girl in love with a poor boy. Veteran character actors are seen in the supporting roles. The entertainment is comedy romance of the type that is usually described as family fare. Seeking only to be amusing, it does so to quite an extent in an unpretentious way.

The yarn is built around a rather refreshing situation. Patricia Duncan wants to marry tennis playing Percy, who has a very limited income. Campbell, wealthy but practical father of extravagant Patricia, is very wise to the fact that even though love hold sway, two cannot live as cheaply as one. To demonstrate the truth of his belief and over the flighty objections of mother Rosalie, Duncan bundles Patricia off to New York to live on $150 a month. If she can do that, it will be all right with him for the girl to marry Percy.

Shadowed by dumb detective Dugan, Patricia goes to town. Amazed at the cost of living in a swank hotel, she moves into a walkup flat. There she is compelled to share kitchen and bathroom with Tony McClellan. Comedy situations, in which Dugan and landlady Mrs. Olson have an important part, cause the boy to fall in love with the girl. But she is still true to Percy. The end of the month draws close and finances run low, but a bank night prize winning gag tides the trio over.

Patricia is summoned home to hear important news. That is that Percy has married another fortune and she is free to hurry back to Tony, with whom she really is in love.

Light and gay, with a lot of unrelated fun inserted to keep the comedy action moving, the film is an amusing attraction for audiences not expecting too much on the screen.

The Longest Night

(MGM)

Comedy Mystery

With the setting for the most part in a department store and with the elements of mystery as a background, this production for the greater part of its running is comedy of the slapstick variety, which a certain type audience relishes, as evidenced by the better than lukewarm reception it received at the Rialto theatre in New York. Development of the mystery theme is undertaken in a haphazard manner and lacks suspense.

The title derives its meaning from the fact that a murder is committed in the store at closing time and a group of persons are held prisoners until the crime is solved. It is a catchy title, one that should be of selling value. On the credit side too, the production has a presentable cast of name players. These include Robert Young, Florence Rice, Ted Healy, Julie Haydon, Janet Beecher and Leslie Fenton.

In the opening sequences a case against Fenton is built up, showing him, as a leader of a gang, robbing a warehouse. Fenton presents a watch, part of the loot, to his girl friend, who works in the store. The scene shifts to the store, where Fenton's mother is employed in an executive capacity. Hearing of her son's activities and connecting the watch with similar ones the store is merchandising, the mother orders her son to the store, where they have a violent argument.

Robert Young, happy-go-lucky son of the store's owner, now dead, arrives at the place at closing time. He attempts to enter a private elevator when the dead body of Fenton's mother falls out. The police are called. Fenton is caught attempting to escape, and while being grilled by the police is fatally shot by an unknown person.

Succeeding developments, leading up to the solving of the murder, are highlighted with comedy of the sort mentioned. What romance there is is supplied by Young and Florence Rice.

North of Nome

(Columbia-Darmour)

Melodramatic Romance

If the patrons like their entertainment teeming with melodramatic romance, embellished with plenty of thrill action and suspense packed danger, the whole leavened with bright comedy, "North of Nome" has the elements required. The well grounded motivating story, in which all the ingredients are plausible and believable, has been given the benefit of good production intelligent direction and capable acting. It moves at an attention holding pace, and as there has been no tendency evidenced to resort to forced or artificial theatricalism, the film's entertainment quality is of exceptional caliber.

In Alaska, poacher Jack Holt believes he has just as much right to the pelts he catches as do concession owners, operators and hijackers. Combatting hijackers, Holt is isolated on an island. There he rescues Roger Imhof, ship-wrecked owner of the sealing concession, his daughter Evelyn Venable, her fiance John Miljan, sailor Paul Hurst and tourist Dorothy Appelby. Holt, discovering his "guests'" identities, plans to hold them prisoner until he can get his furs to market. Under Imhof's leadership, Holt, however, is made prisoner. But when Guinn Williams and his mobsters, rather than a company ship, answer their rescue beacon, the party, even though there is romantic conflict between Miljan and Holt for the affections of Miss Venable, are forced to combine in common cause against a common foe. Out to get both Imhof and Holt, Williams resorts to drastic tactics, only to find that Holt is more than a match for him. By quick thinking and courageous action he overcomes Williams and captures his boat. When the party lands back in Nome, justice is dealt out. Judge Imhof appreciates that Holt, who has won his daughter's favor, will be a more valuable man working for him than against him.

The picture provides any number of angles in action, situations and dialogue that can be adapted readily to interest creating exploitation. For general purposes, however, labeling the picture as sound thrill action dramatic romance with surprisingly effective comedy should be sufficient to start the ball rolling.

A Woman Rebels

(RKO Radio)

Mid-Victorian Drama

"A Woman Rebels" is of and for the mature.

The woman of the title is a well born English girl of the Victorian era. Her rebellion is against the attitude of the period, typified by her father, which holds women to be by nature inferior to men, denies them employment save as domestics and exacts unquestioning conformity with code, implicit obedience in all matters, including choice of mate.

The story of this woman's rebellion begins with her meeting clandestinely a young man of her class, chronicles her twenty year struggle to conceal the identity of their illegitimately born child, portrays her denial of a subsequent love to this end and her militant championship of the cause of women's rights during this period, ending with her marriage to the patient and understanding second suitor.

This story is told with simple directness. Circumstances are presented which observers logically can interpret as extenuating or otherwise in the case offered, and on the choice of interpretation depends the effectiveness of the picture as feminist doctrine. Whatever the decision in this regard, the production is primarily a dramatic story, the doctrinal element having expression in the chosen occupation of the central character and in a number of significant speeches delivered directly into the camera.

Production is of high grade throughout and there is little comedy relief, that little occurring naturally in the run of events. Direction is steady and studied, affording action and dialogue ample narrative scope. There is no attempt to obscure plot factors not generally discussed before children, nor are they needlessly emphasized. Treatment, like the story, is adult throughout.

Katharine Hepburn's role, as the woman of the title, carries her from 'teen age to middle years. Donald Crisp plays the stern parent, Herbert Marshall the understanding suitor. A large cast contribute harmonious performances.

Perhaps the key to choice of exploitation approach is to be found in the previously noted mature nature of story and portrayal. Several choices are available. Plot factors mentioned suggest that campaigns be conditioned to individual situations and addressed, in all cases, to the adult audience.

Adventure in Manhattan

Comedy-Drama

"Adventure in Manhattan" describes with unusual titular accuracy a comedy drama presenting Joel McCrea as a reporter-criminologist and Reginal Owen as an impresario-criminal. Manhattan is the locale and theft is the crime, with two or three off-stage murders committed incidentally and without coloring the comedy which is the predominant factor. This comedy is principally of the dialogue type and the dialogue is in journalese with a smattering of theatrical terminology.

Joel McCrea is cast as a reporter given to predicting spectacular crimes and boasting of his ability to do so. His fellow workers, to discipline him for egotism, stage a hoax which brings him into contact with an actress, played by Jean Arthur, with whom he falls in love, and with an impresario, Reginald Owen, who is the master criminal he seeks to apprehend. The impresario thus learns that the reporter has predicted a theft he has planned and therefore defers it, bringing the reporter into professional disrepute. The reporter feigns incipient insanity to throw the criminal off his guard and effects his capture, marrying the girl in due course.

Dependent on the status of local susceptibility to the factors involved, chief exploitation emphasis might be placed upon the crime angle, the reportorial aspect or the urban setting, the romantic factor standing, of course, as an always available alternative. The name values of the principals, be they what they are in various locations, are amply substantiated by the performance given.

Cain and Mabel

(Warner)

Musical Comedy

From a tale by H. C. Witwer, this is, on one hand, the story of a boxer, the type of boxer Witwer's early works on the subject made standard for entertainment purposes, and the dialogue is in the idiom and wisecrackery of those works. It is also the story of an actress. The threads of these two stories are interwoven romantically, characters on both sides of the cast speaking in the vernacular of prize ring, backstage and Broadway. The fortunes of fighter and actress are manipulated by a press agent who serves both, and the picture has, in addition to story content, a boxing match and a number of song-and-dance numbers produced in the manner and on the scale typical of Warner musical productions.

The plot presents Larry Cain, boxer, and Mabel O'Dare, actress, whose paths first cross when they occupy adjacent hotel rooms and her rehearsing keeps him awake. Next in prominence is a press agent, who seeks to build up the actress by publicizing the boxer's alleged love for her and vice versa. His principals oblige him at first by appearing in public together, then fall in love, after which both lose interest in their work, hence box office glamour, at which time the publicist brings about an estrangement for the purpose of reviving public interest in them. The truth is brought out by circumstances and the happy ending follows.

The cast contains an unusually strong list of marquee names. In addition to Marion Davies and Clark Gable as the actress and the boxer, there are Allen Jenkins, Roscoe Karns, Walter Catlett, Ruth Donnelly, William Collier, Sr., Pert Kelton and others. These suggest personality billing as especially applicable. The contents of the picture provide a variety of copy angles. The song hit of the picture, as of even date and according to radio indications, appears to be "I'll Sing You a Thousand Love Songs."

Krazi-Inventions

Novelty

Certain impracticable inventions, that never have become popularized but were considered worthy enough to be filed at the Patents Office in Washington by their inventors, are here presented with comic illustrations. An elaborate hair growing contraption, a machine placed in a derby that automatically tips the hat when the owner bows, and a burglar alarm system are inventions used to good advantage in this subject, in that they provide quite a few laughs. Players in the skit built around the inventors and their concoctions include Senator Ford, Eddie Hall, Frank Jacquet, Aileen Cook and Rose Kessner. Running time, 10 minutes

ABANDON INTERFERENCE IN CONSOLIDATED'S PLAN

Securities Commission Drops Protests Against Company's Recapitalizing Plan; Adopted

Protests by the federal Securities and Exchange Commission against a plan of recapitalization of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., were abandoned this week after the protestations had received considerable attention in the news press. The plan was approved by Consolidated's stockholders and immediately adopted.

Meanwhile, applications for listing the new common and preferred stock are being prepared under the plan of recapitalization and may be submitted to the New York Stock Exchange in about a week. The plan is scheduled to become operative as soon as these and other details relative to the issuance of the new securities have been completed.

The immediate payment of a $1 dividend on the old preferred stock, provided for in the recapitalization plan, has also been authorized by the Consolidated board of directors.

The threatened intervention marked the first occasion of consequence in which the S.E.C. presented any interference in a new stock issue sponsored by large motion picture interests. Consolidated, of which Herbert J. Yates is president, has controlling holdings in Republic Pictures and owns and operates the largest motion picture developing laboratories in the business.

The SEC's entrance into the situation followed a refusal by the company to supplement a letter to stockholders concerning the plan. Officials of the commission said that any further action would have to be instigated by stockholders. The commission's position was that it found certain points in the letter which might have been misleading and failure of the company to clarify them made it necessary for the commission to explain its interpretation of the plan as outlined in the letter.

A legal attempt through a temporary injunction to prevent the holding of the meeting at which the reorganization plan was ratified was brought by Norman Johnson, a stockholder, and denied by Justice Bernard L. Shientag, whose ruling also applies to any possible future request for a restraining order against another meeting of the shareholders in connection with the recapitalization plan.

Efforts also were made at the meeting itself by stockholders to keep the plan from a vote by motions made to adjourn the meeting shortly after it had been opened by Mr. Yates, but these failed to carry.

The possibility of further action against the plan was voiced after the meeting by Ivan R. Lashins, a stockholder. Mr. Lashins said that a group of stockholders whom he represents would probably form a protective committee. He said that a possible procedure might involve action for liquidating damages under the contract represented by the stock certificates.

"Under this procedure," he said, "we would ask for the liquidation of our preferred stock at its book value of $35 a share, plus the accumulated dividend of $5. This compares with the $28 value placed on the new preferred to be issued under the plan."

Yates Defends Position

The letter of the SEC replying to protests on the stockholders' notice said merely that information concerning the recapitalization plan which had been given to the company's stockholders might be construed as misleading. It created little comment at the meeting, although it was referred to by Mr. Yates in a statement to the stockholders in which he said that the company believed it was acting in the best interests of the shareholders and in an entirely legal manner and would not substitute its judgment for that of an outside agency in the absence of legal advice to do so.

In reply to a stockholder's question Mr. Yates said that he was advised that the SEC's attitude would not jeopardize the registration of the new stock issues called for under the plan.

Provisions under the Plan

The plan provides for the issuance to stockholders of one and one quarter shares of new preferred, one quarter share of new common and a $1 cash dividend in exchange for each share of old preferred together with accumulated dividends in excess of $1, amounting at this time to $4 a share. Common stockholders receive two-thirds of a share of new common for the old. The new preferred carries a fixed cumulative dividend of $1 instead of the former $2, and takes one half of all dividends declared in addition to the $1. The common takes the other half.

Consolidated and subsidiaries reported a net of $290,282, after depreciation and Federal income taxes, for the quarter ending September 30th. This is equivalent, after dividend requirements on the preferred, to 17 cents a share on the common.

No provision was made for federal surtax on undivided profits. For the preceding quarter the net was $185,024, and for nine months ending Sept. 30 the net was $776,290. This figure compares with a net of $823,019 for the same period last year.

National Decency Legion Classifies Six Pictures

Of six new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency during the current week three were classed as unobjectionable for general patronage, one as unobjectionable for adults, one as objectionable in part, and one condemned. The new pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, "Unobjectionable for General Patronage": "Hopalong Cassidy's Return," "Pigskin Parade," "Rose Bowl." Class A-2, "Unobjectionable for Adults": "April Blossoms." Class B, "Objectionable in Part": "Love Letters of a Star." Class C, "Condemned": "Carnival in Flanders."

Chance Games Losing Favor, Weeks Finds

As chance game activities were prominent in five territories this week, George W. Weeks, general sales manager for Gaumont British, arrived back in New York from a tour through the middle west and south and declared that box-office stimulants were fast losing favor with the patrons. "It is really the picture, rather than the giveaways that is bringing the people into the theatre," he said.

"Artificial means of attracting large audiences are losing favor with exhibitors who are now definitely going back to normal showmanship policies, where it is the show that counts," Mr. Weeks added.

Meanwhile, in Boston, a decision of the United States circuit court of appeals is being awaited in an infringement suit brought by Bank Night against Parlay Cash Night, the defendant admitting using a plan similar to that employed by Bank Night, basing its arguments on the allegation that Bank Night was not patentable. The case was brought several months ago by George S. Ryan, representing Roy Heffener of Affiliated Enterprises, and was thrown out of court previously on the grounds that both schemes were lottery violation. Bank Night has since been adjudged legal by the Massachusetts supreme court.

In order to get the so-called Bank Night question before the Florida supreme court as soon as possible, Gulf Theatres, Inc., of Tampa, has permitted a default judgment to be entered against it in a suit by W. A. Rice to collect the $1,550 prize offered at the Tampa May 1. The operators of the theatre are appealing from a ruling by Circuit Judge Candler that the Bank Night offer constitutes a contract with the public on which the theatre can be sued. In Winter Haven, Fla., the license tax on theatres has been raised to a graduated scale. In addition to the $75 and $100, respectively, to be paid by the two local houses, there is an additional tax on Bank Night of $5 per drawing.

In the northwest, at Des Moines, Screeno has been ruled an illegal lottery under Iowa law by the attorney general's office. The opinion by Walter Maley, first assistant attorney general, said the plan contained the three elements of chance, consideration and prize which constitutes a lottery under Iowa law.

On the other hand, in Milwaukee, Bank Night in theatres may be in violation of the fair trade practices act, but is not a lottery, District Attorney William A. Zabel declared, after the Milwaukee Association of Commerce had asked its elimination. Mr. Zabel declared that the state attorney general in Wisconsin has held Bank Nights are not lotteries.

But, in Atlanta, A. R. Wright, deputy insurance commissioner, has requested Attorney General George Mains of Augusta, Ga., to prosecute Southeastern Cast Night Indemnity Company of Augusta, charging that the company is operating without a license to write policies insuring theatre patrons against Bank Night losses when the patron is not present at the drawing.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Advance outlines of productions nearing completion as seen by the Hollywood staff of the Motion Picture Herald

One in a Million

(20th Century - Fox)

Musical Spectacle

Probably the most exciting exploitation element associated with this production is the fact that it marks the screen debut of Sonja Henie, widely publicized Olympic Games skating champion. In personality, looks and potential acting talent there doesn't seem to be much question that Miss Henie has what it takes to become a popular screen figure.

Naturally, producer Darryl F. Zanuck, convinced that he has an important new star in Miss Henie, is leaving no stone unturned to insure that her initial picture shall have the benefit of unusual production, exceptional story content, far better than average name value support, high class musical accompaniment and unusual spectacle. The settings constructed for Miss Henie's skating exhibitions, both in solo and with chorus, are lavish and beautiful.

Cognizant of the importance which both exhibitors and the public give to name worth, Zanuck has assigned to the film Adolphe Menjou, Jean Hersholt, Ned Sparks, Don Ameche, The Ritz Brothers, Arline Judge, Dixie Dunbar, Leah Ray, Shirley Deane and Bora Minnevitch and his gang of harmonica maestros. Music and lyrics were prepared by Lew Pollack and Sidney D. Mitchell. Direction was entrusted to Sidney Lanfield, who scored with "Sing, Baby, Sing." Skating dance numbers are being made under the guidance of Jack Haskell.

The story is gay. It's a yarn of light hearted Americans, Broadway boys and girls having fun in the Alps, with the recent Olympic Games ice championships as the principal background. It combines rapidly paced romance, drama, pathos, comedy and thrills, with music and skating. Interspersed are spectacular settings for the ensemble and solo numbers, all photography against the wintry beauty of snow fields and glaciers.

Mountain Justice

Drama

When Michael Curtiz, maker of "Black Fury," "Captain Blood" and "Charge of the Light Brigade," is the director, there is plenty evidence to believe that the picture's sponsors consider it highly and that it should be of unusual interest to exhibitors and the public.

The theme, with original screen play by Norman Reilly Raine and Luci Ward, is very similar to that of "Career Woman." While there is a natural difference in detail, identity of the screen characters and occasion for the climaxing dramatic punch, both yarns pursue the same general trend. This is the story of a woman physician who seeks to beat down the prejudices of her hill-billy folk and bring modern medical conveniences to the mountains. As substantiating detail establishes romance between her and a New York lawyer, the story builds to the point where the girl is prosecuted and convicted, despite the efforts of the lawyer, on a charge of murdering her father. How she is rescued from a lifetime in jail is an entirely different story.

Josephine Hutchinson is the girl and George Brent the lawyer. The supporting cast, practically all of whom will be seen as mountain folk, include Robert Barrat, now in "Charge of the Light Brigade," Mona Barrie, Guy Kibbee, Marcia Mae Jones, Elizabeth Risdon, Edward Pawley, Margaret Hamilton, Robert McWade, Fuzzy Knight and Russell Simpson.

"Trail of the Lonesome Pine" having started the vogue of mountain stories, exhibitors should experience no difficulty in bringing this to patron attention.

ANTICIPATIONS—BUT NOT REVIEWS

Discussions of pictures in this department are based entirely on the aims and anticipations of the producers on the basis of negative in the editing process. In no sense are these attentions to be considered reviews or in any terms evaluation of the finished product as it may subsequently emerge from the Cutting Room to the market.

This department is conducted solely for the information of exhibitors, many of whom have indicated to Motion Picture Herald their necessity for the earliest available information on the product which they are to play.

Trail Dust

(Paramount)

Adventure Drama

The original team of William Boyd, Jimmy Ellison and George Hayes, featured in the first numbers of the Hopalong Cassidy series, have been reunited for this production. Following the pattern laid down by its predecessors and being made on a comprehensive scope, the film will be embellished by an additional human interest angle.

Hopalong and his buddies are heading a huge herd of cattle to market. Roads are crammed with the herds of other shippers intent on relieving an eastern beef shortage. Obstacle after obstacle is thrown in the shippers' way. Roving rustlers prey on the herds. Mysterious attacks resulting in murder take place in the night. Fires from an unknown source add to the confusion. Surmounting all obstacles, Hopalong and his aides finally discover who is at the bottom of all the dirty work and what his motive is. Preventing a stampede, Hopalong heads a posse that rounds up the rustlers and opens a clear track to the market.

The production is based on Clarence Mulford's book, "Trail Dust." The screen play is by Al Martin. Nate Watt, who directed "Hopalong Cassidy Returns," is again at the helm.

The cast supporting Boyd, Ellison, and Hayes is lengthy yet it includes but one woman, Gwynne Shipman. Other players who will be seen include Stephen Morris as the principal conspirator, and Britt Wood, Earl Askam, John Beach, Ted Adams, Tom Halligan, Emmet Daly, Dan Wolheim, Harold Daniels, Al Bridge, Dick Dickson (Fox West Coast theatre division manager, turning actor for the moment), Al St. John and Kenneth Harlan.

Criminal Lawyer

(RKO Radio)

Dramatic Romance

Based on Louis Stevens' story, "Gentleman of New York," this was made once before under the title "State's Attorney." Then John Barrymore, Helen Twelvetrees, Jill Esmond and William Boyd were the leads. It may be remembered that the picture gave a respectable account of itself at the box office. In the newer version, the readaptations of the Stevens story prepared by G. V. Atwater and Tom Lennon will feature Lee Tracy, Margot Grahame, Eduardo Cianelli, star of the stage and screen versions of "Winterset," and Betty Lawford.

The story is a dramatic and romantic triangle. Essentially it concerns a brilliant but unscrupulous lawyer, a spoiled society girl, a friendless girl and a gangster. Both girls are in love with the attorney; the society miss marries him. Running hand in hand with this romantic element is an equally powerful dramatic quality vividly detailing the politically minded attorney's progress to a high post wherein he is called upon to prosecute the gangster who was his client and political sponsor. It builds to a smashing climax, in which the attorney proves to himself and the world that he is a real man.

The atmosphere of the story is predominantly dramatic. There is but slight comedy contrast.

Audiences know who Tracy and Miss Grahame are. Betty Lawford has been seen in important pictures, principally "Love before Breakfast." Ciannelli will be seen shortly in "Winterset." The supporting cast is made up of known quantities. Listed are Frank M. Thomas, Francis McDonald, Aileen Pringle, Wilfred Lucas, Claire McDowell, Lita Chevret and Theodore von Eltz.

Christie Cabanne, who numbers "We Who are About to Die," "The Last Outlaw," and "Storm Over the Andes" among his accomplishments, is the director.

Paramount Titles Selected

"Happiness Preferred" will be the title of the forthcoming production, independently made by Emanuel Cohen, in which Warren William will be starred, and "Arizona Mahony" has been definitely set as the title for the Paramount production formerly known as "Stairs of Sand," starring Joe Cook, Larry Crabbe, Raymond Hatton and Dave Chasen.

MARKET LIMITATIONS KILLING OFF PERENNIAL FOOTBALL FILM 'CYCLE'

Short Season and Negligible Foreign Interest Cited; Only Four New Gridiron Features Coming This Fall

The football cycle, for years an autumnal institution of the motion picture, is no more. Scarcely a handful of films dealing with the gridiron sport in America is scheduled to reach the market this year. Only ten or so features were planned originally, and of these but four will materialize. These, with a bare scattering of short subjects and three reissued features, are all the football "thrillers' available this season, and sport prophets say this fall will be one of the most successful in the history of the game in the large stadiums.

Two primary reasons are advanced in the home offices in New York for the lack of football pictures this year. For one thing they point out that the season, lasting only four months or five at the longest, is all too short in which to sell this topical type of product profitably. To this they add the conviction that the foreign market for the films on this essentially American sport is practically negligible. Not that football films are not successful at box offices. They are usually good drawing attractions, especially at neighborhood and subsequent runs; it is their short life in distribution that is causing producers to curtail their production.

With the possible exception of a few "metropolitan" cities in England where the American game now is being introduced there are no localities in Europe whose residents are sufficiently familiar enough with the sport to be lured by it to theatre box offices. Rugby football, a premier sport in England, is more akin to soccer than to the American gridiron game. Several years ago football was launched in Paris with sufficient publicity to win attention to motion picture versions, but the French have lost interest.

What They're Offering

Exhibitors in America this year will have for presentation in their theatres only the following football features: "The Big Game," produced by Radio; "Pigskin Parade," scheduled for release shortly by Twentieth Century-Fox; "Rose Bowl," now nearing completion by Paramount, and Victory Pictures' independent effort, "Two Minutes to Play." A picture of this title was made years ago starring Charles Ray. Universal plans to reissue its football productions of the past four seasons, "The Spirit of Notre Dame," "All-America" and "Fighting Youth."

In the field of short subjects there will be the Grantland Rice Sportlight series, released through Paramount and dealing with the various "technical" elements of the sport in much the same manner as in earlier years. Radio will have the Van Beuren series of Bill Corum, sportwriter.

In addition to the Grantland Rice and Bill Corum short subjects, Columbia is rushing into release three one-reel pictures based on the game or dealing with one or another of its elements. In the Color Rhapsody series "Football Bugs" has been completed, and theatres shortly will be showing the two World of Sports subjects, "Football Flashes" and "Flying Pigskins."

Football Musical Short

Paramount is preparing for early release of a one-reel musical, "Rah Rah Football," with Will Osborne and his orchestra. The film depicts the highlights of important games of former seasons at 11 leading colleges and features the songs of the universities as played and sung by the Osborne orchestra and The Collegians, glee club prominent in vaudeville and radio.

A study of the material forthcoming also indicates a different type of football picture this year. In the past the hero always overcame innumerable difficulties to win the big game, but this season comedy and gentle chiding of the whole American football system seems to be the idea of the producers. Radio, obtaining the services of such gridiron stars as Jay Berwanger, William Shakespeare, Bobby Wilson, Monk Monscrip, King Kong Klein, Gomer Jones, Bones Hamilton and Frank Alustiza, went about producing a comedy with the athletes joining the fun. It was as a comedy that Hollywood preview audiences received the production.

Sales Staff Plans For Zukor Jubilee

Following the meeting last week in St. Louis of division and district managers, studio executives and home office personnel, 11 Paramount district managers now are holding individual meetings with local sales forces on the four-month Adolph Zukor Jubilee, which will start January 7, the date of Mr. Zukor's birthday.

Meanwhile Neil F. Agnew, general sales manager, has appointed Milton Kussel and Myke Lewis as captains in connection with the drive. Mr. Kussel will be in charge of the eastern half of the country and Mr. Lewis will supervise the western states. At the same time it was revealed that plans are being completed for the simultaneous release of "Champagne Waltz" on the screens of New York, London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Stockholm, Oslo, Copenhagen, Rome, Tokio, Buenos Aires, Rio de Janeiro, Mexico City, Capetown, Sidney and other cities.

The jubilee will be opened by the birthday dinner in Hollywood at which Mr. Zukor will be honored by those associated with him during the past 25 years. The dinner will mark the official opening of the jubilee and from there Mr. Zukor will give the signal for the simultaneous openings of "Champagne Waltz" all over the world.

Academy Officers All Re-elected

All officers of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood were re-elected by acclamation this week at a joint meeting of the board of governors and the executive committee, acting as an electoral body. The officers are: Frank Capra, president; Howard Estabrook, first vice-president; Nathan Levinson, second vice-president; Jane Murfin, secretary; Fred Leahy, treasurer, and Donald Gledhill, executive secretary.

A committee of five was appointed to investigate all phases of the Academy awards policy and report its findings back to the board of governors. No specific instructions were given to the committee, which includes Waldemar Young, David O. Selznick, De-Witt Jennings, Frank Lloyd and Van Nest Polglase, and represents all branches of the Academy.

The sixth quarterly issue of the Academy Technical Credits Bulletin has been distributed to all studio executives, technical departments and members of the Academy Technicians' Branch. The bulletin contains credits for 109 productions completed between July 1 and September 30, 1936. It also contains individual credits for 427 technicians receiving credit for art direction, photography, film editing, special photographic effects and sound recording.

Heads of the major studio sound departments also met this week at Twentieth Century-Fox studios for another of a series of comparative showings which are held under the auspices of the Academy Research Council each month. Two or three reels from each studio are run off for a comparison of the recording at each studio.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Product Report

Completion of camera work on six productions coupled with commencement of shooting on seven others to chalk up a net gain of one for the week. Thus is retained the steady flow of film past lens in volume promiseful of adequate and varied product for the peak of the exhibition season.

Two pictures were completed for RKO Radio release. Victor McLaglen is starred in "Coast Patrol," an action romance drama. Principals in support include Preston Foster, Donald Woods, Helen Flint, Pierre Watkin, Alan Curtis, William Corsan and Frank Mayor. Ben Stoloff is the director. Under Lew Landers' direction "They Wanted to Marry," comedy romance, went before the cameras. Gordon Jones and Betty Furness are the leads with E. E. Clive, Patsy Lee Parsons, Diana Gibson, Alan Curtis, Henry Kolker, William Benedict and Frank M. Thomas rounding out the cast.

Two pictures also were started at Republic. Both are outdoor adventure romance dramas. In "Old Corral," which Joseph Kane directs, Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Hope Manning, Lon Chaney, Jr., Marc Kramer and Lew Kelly will be seen. "Roaring Lead" will present Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune, Christine Maple, Tommy Bupp, Hooper Atchley, Mary Russell and George Cheseboro. Sam Newfield is directing.

Another studio to start two pictures was Columbia. Under its direct sponsorship, "A Plug for Cleopatra" (temporary title) went on the stages. Charles Quigley, Rosalind Keith, Henry Mollison, James Conlin and Rita LeRoy are the principals. David Selman is the director. "Rio Grande Range," a Larry Darmour production, features Robert Allen, Iris Shunn, John Elliott, Paul Sutton and Hal Taliaferro. Spencer Bennett is directing.

At Twentieth Century-Fox, "The Holy Terror," a comedy, started. Jane Withers, Leah Ray, Anthony Martin, Joe Lewis and El Brendel are the principal names. James Tinling is the director.

Six studios accounted for the half dozen finished pictures. Most important of the group is "Lloyds of London," Twentieth Century-Fox. Looked upon as one of the company's biggest features, it is historical romance drama, featuring a lengthy and impressive cast. Included, among many others on the list, are Madeleine Carroll, Freddie Bartholomew, Guy Standing, C. Aubrey Smith, Tyrone Power, Jr., George Sanders, Montague Love, J. M. Kerrigan, Una O'Connor, Miles Mander, Forrester Harvey, Gavin Muir, May Beatty, Billy Bevan, Murray Kinnell, Lumsden Hare, Robert Greig, Arthur Hohl, Dennis Chaldecott, Thomas Pogue and William Wagner. Henry King, who handled "Ramona," directed.

WARNERS WILL FILM "HOLLYWOOD HOTEL"

Warner Brothers have acquired the rights to the title "Hollywood Hotel," for screen use, and will apply the title of the radio program to a musical production starring Dick Powell and Frances Langford, featured on the air. Although the program started out with a story on its inception, it has devoted most of its time recently to presenting screen stars, coming in for frequent mention by exhibitors protesting against air performances by film personalities. This is the program presided over by Louella Parsons, motion picture columnist of the Hearst newspapers, and sponsored by the makers of Campbell's soups, all of which adds to a certain kind of interest attendant upon the announcement of the screen project.

For Radio release Sol Lesser completed "Rainbow on the River." It will present Bobby Breen, May Robson, Charles Butterworth, Benita Hume, Alan Mowbray, Louise Beavers, Marilyn Knowlden, Jack Luden, Frank McGlynn, Sr., Betty Blythe and the Hall Johnson Choir. Kurt Newman directed.

"Hats Off," a Boris Petroff production for Grand National, finished. Mae Clarke, John Payne, Helen Lynd, Skeets Gallagher, Luis Alberni, Franklin Panghorn and the Radio Rogues are featured. Petroff also directed.

Goldwyn Productions completed "Love Under Fire," comedy romance drama. The cast includes Merle Oberon, Brian Aherne, David Niven, Karen Morley, Jerome Cowan, Henry Stephenson, Pat O'Malley, Claude King, David Torrence and Leland Hodgson. H. C. Potter directed.

"Two Minutes to Play," topical football romance drama, was checked in by Victory Pictures. Herman Brix, Jean Martel, Eddie Nugent and Betty Compson are featured, supported by Grady Sutton, David Sharpe, Sammy Cohen, Richard Tucker and Duncan Renaldo. Bob Hill directed.

Back to Reality

Back to reality, and away from counterfeited setting, stock shot and library makeshift, is the direction of artistic progress, according to Samuel Goldwyn. In his words, "Integrity is the essence of great pictures. Authenticity gives to a motion picture just that little touch of added quality that makes the difference between the ordinary and the exceptional film."

Producer Goldwyn practices what he preaches. For the final sequence of "Dodsworth" he sent a camera man to Italy, photographing a double for Walter Huston in a sailboat crossing the Bay of Naples, the footage costing approximately $30,000, according to studio statement. More than three times that amount has been spent in maintaining a crew in the forests of northern Idaho to obtain films for "Come and Get It," which is forthcoming.

En route to Samoa, southernmost U. S. territory, are Richard Day, who last year won the Academy Award for art direction, with Percy Ikert and Commander Lucien B. Greene, U. S. N., as forerunners of a company numbering 125 which will film "Hurricane" on the setting designated in the story. Mr. Goldwyn quotes as a vital plank in his production platform, "Film it exactly as the script demands it; don't rewrite the script to fit stock or library shots."

Favors Roadshows

Citing the experience of pictures produced before and since the coming of sound, John M. Stahl, now engaged in directing "Parnell" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has expressed himself as favoring the roadshowing of certain kinds of productions in a hundred American cities prior to first run release. Theatres used for the purpose, according to Mr. Stahl, should be relatively small as to capacity, seating at most 1,000 persons, and the price scale should be well above that affixed for the ultimate first run opening.

Mr. Stahl mentions the record of his own production, "Back Street," as typical of what may be expected generally if the advocated policy is adopted. "Back Street" had its world premiere at the Carthay Circle theatre, Los Angeles, and ran there six weeks at $1.65 before going to the regular first run theatre. Similar experience was had with "Seed," "Imitation of Life" and "Magnificent Obsession," according to Mr. Stahl, the advance engagement creating, in each case, prestige for the picture and word-of-mouth advertising which resulted in increased revenues all along the line of subsequent exhibition.

This type of engagement, in Mr. Stahl's opinion, is especially attractive to the maturer theatregoer, particularly the type of patron who, in other days, supported the stage playhouse, at whatever cost, and whose wont it is to speak of the artistic rather than the entertainment aspect of picture, play, concert, opera or ballet. Such a patron, Mr. Stahl reasons, is not readily attracted to the general type of large cinema, but prefers to pay a premium for a certain measure of exclusiveness and relative privacy in his theatregoing.

CZECH RESTRICTIONS OF IMPORTS DENIED

Government Regulation of Foreign Product Will Remain on Last Year's Basis

by HARRY KNOPF

in Prague

The Czechoslovakian film industry was made nervous last week by unfounded rumors that importation of foreign pictures might be restricted and a new contingent law invoked. This gossip was spread by a group of never satisfied persons and came up in connection with a visit of Czecho film representatives to Berlin, where a meeting took place between the German officials and the Czechs in order to discuss several questions about importing German pictures into CSR and about Czech production into Germany.

The American pictures, and there is no doubt about it, are going strong here, and most of the playdates are covered with American product, this leaving not much time for other foreign films, especially German and Czech home production. In this respect it must be said that the German pictures have lost much ground in quality in the last month, which has given the American another opening to place German dubbed versions into the theatres of the German speaking part of CSR too. Czech home product has become much better in the last months, but the exploitation has not been as strong as expected and so it is no wonder that some of the Czechoslovakian distributors—most of them are producers at the same time, working with German pictures—were thinking up new ideas to regain their losses.

But the official film department here, called the Film Advisory Board, for a long time has sought plans to help the home production. A financing plan worked out together with the Ministry of Finance, has just been approved by the Ministry. Under this plan each Czechoslovakian producer will get a credit to the amount of 50 per cent of the producing cost, besides the sum of 160,000 crowns which he is getting from the Film Advisory Board as production support. In figures it looks like this:

Usual production costs for a home production (one version)		700,000 cr.
50 per cent credit by Ministry of Finance	350,000
Subsidy from the F.A.B.	160,000	510,000 cr.
Producer's investment, only		190,000 cr.

By this plan the officials are hoping that production will be improved, so that Czechoslovakian pictures, in more than one version, can be sold to several countries.

So far here in CSR only one studio is in existence, this on the Barrandov near Prague. A second one will be opened the beginning of December in Prague-Radlice. This studio belongs to a private company and is managed by the director, Jan Svitak, and the commercial manager Josef Foist, who for 17 years has been general representative of Royal Typewriter Company, New York. This studio will be equipped with English sound apparatus Visatone, which is free of license and which Alexander Korda is using at Denham. The latest Conrad Veidt picture has been produced on this apparatus. The third studio, Host in Prague-Hostivar, which closed in receivership a year ago, is to reopen the beginning of next year. A subsidy of 3,000,000 crowns has been guaranteed by the Ministry of Finance after more than a year of conferences. So next year may see three studios in full work. Reasons advanced for this development are that because of natural conditions no other country can make high standard pictures at as low production costs.

As to the talk of reducing importation of American pictures, your correspondent has been assured by film officials here that there is not the slightest idea of such a movement. American pictures shown in Czechoslovakia have given much spirit to other production. Commercial Attache Smith of the American Legation in Prague in charge in the absence of Mr. Woods on vacation, has been informed that the same conditions as last year will prevail.

Czechoslovakia is willing to cooperate with every counntry in the world. The conferences in Berlin were necessary because several differences had made effective cooperation impossible. This conference is over and matters have been settled. In two weeks the German conferees will come to Prague and a new treaty is supposed to be signed.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is the target of some newsprint arrows from Filmovy Kuryr, official newspaper organ of the Czechoslovakian theatre owners. It all has to do with the contract whereunder the Lucerna and Fenix, first-runs in Prague, were to show "A Tale of Two Cities." Manager Berger of MGM sold the production to the two theatres. After a week the picture was taken off and a French production substituted. MGM started a lawsuit against the theatres.

Alumnae Bureau Sees 3,740 Films

In two years reviewers for the Motion Picture Bureau of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae have seen 3,740 films, of which 1,532 were features, 1,910 shorts, 208 newsreels and 90 foreign short subjects, according to a report issued by Mrs. James F. Looram, chairman of the bureau.

The 89 reviewers for the bureau have devoted a total of 179,520 hours of service to the work which, beside the actual viewing of pictures, included writing of reviews, preparation of radio broadcasts and other phases of the bureau activities.

Since October, 1934, the bureau has approved 97 per cent of all the Hollywood output. Between June and September of this year the bureau approved 98 per cent of all films submitted, according to the report.

Charles Rogers in East on Universal Production Plans

Activities in the New Universal Pictures Corporation this week are concerned with the arrival in New York of Charles R. Rogers, executive vice-president in charge of production, for home office conferences, and the dissolution of Universal Productions, Inc., a subsidiary of Universal Pictures.

Mr. Rogers arrived in New York to attend conferences with sales executives and to look over the new Broadway legitimate offerings for possible future pictures, to interview new talent discovered by the company's eastern scouts and to look over books and plays on which options have been taken. Next week Mr. Rogers will meet Herbert Wilcox, Universal director and executive producer of General Film Distributors, Ltd., which distributes for the company in England. Plans for the interchange of talent between Universal and General Film will be decided upon by the two production heads.

Meanwhile, that Universal is in the healthiest condition the studio has ever enjoyed was the theme of a statement issued to William Loenig, general manager of production, by J. P. Normanly, comptroller, on his arrival in Hollywood Monday.

Mr. Normanly pointed out that sales for the current year are almost $3,000,000 in excess of the corresponding period in 1935, that Universal pictures are being sought in more theatres throughout the world than ever before and that this distribution includes all circuits in this country.

Twenty-four of the 42 films scheduled for the year will be completed by the end of this month, Mr. Normanly said, adding that the total production cost does not exceed the original budget by more than five per cent. Twenty-five stories—nearly all of next year's product—are being prepared ahead of schedule, the comptroller said. He emphasized the high quality of the new product.

Universal Productions, Inc., subsidiary of Universal Pictures, was dissolved as a first step toward the simplification of Universal's corporate structure, it was explained. The company was a Delaware corporation and was dissolved there and certificates surrendering the company's authority to do business in New York and California have been filed in each of those states.

Other Universal subsidiaries will be dissolved from time to time in the near future, culminating in about 30 days in the dissolution of Universal Pictures, leaving only Universal Corporation or a successor company as the parent body for operations. Universal Corporation at present is a holding company for controlling interests.

Pettey Heads MPPDA's Studio Publicity Committee

Tom Pettey has been elected chairman of the studio publicity executive committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributor of America. The election took place at a meeting in Hollywood at which plans to make stills available to schools and libraries throughout the country were discussed.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

Through the camera's eye, Alexander Korda prepares for direction of a shot on location for "Rembrandt," London Films production, which brings together the trio of "The Private Life of Henry VIII," Mr. Korda, Charles Laughton and Elsa Lanchester.

Donat Returns

Robert Donat has recovered from his severe attack of asthma, says Lord Horder, physician to the Royal Family, and will take up his part in "Knight Without Armour," at Denham forthwith. Signalizing his recovery he has signed with Alexander Korda for three further pictures, titles not yet announced, at a fee reputed to be £30,000 ($150,000) per picture.

Donat goes on the floor at Denham just in time to save an expensive delay on "Knight Without Armour," for which Marlene Dietrich has completed practically every scene it was possible to make without Donat's appearance.

London Films arranged a good publicity tieup for Conrad Veidt in an "Entertainment Parade" item in the British Broadcasting Company's program. Veidt, star of "Dark Journey," in which there are many scenes on "Q" boats in war time, broadcast a talk with able seaman Pike, who served on one of the mystery submarine fighters.

Pinewood Full

Less than a week after the formal opening of the Pinewood Studios at Iver, all four of the completed floors of the plant are in active commission, the films being "A Man with Your Voice" (B & D), "London Melody" (Herbert Wilcox), "Splinters in the Air" (Herbert Wilcox), "The Scarab Murder Mystery" (Paramount-British). Interiors for a third Herbert Wilcox production, "The Navy Eternal," shortly will replace the almost completed "London Melody."

The Hay Diet

Will Hay, famous throughout the length and breadth of the British Isles for his comedy schoolmaster, has been fitted with a story, based on his original stage sketch, which went into production at the Gainsborough-G B studio this week with the title "Good Morning, Boys." Marcel Varnel directs and Will Hay, junior, a popular member of his father's stage company, is making a screen debut.

Rathbone Wanted

Basil Rathbone, playing opposite Ann Harding in the Schach-Trafalgar "Love from a Stranger," has received an offer from the New York Theatre Guild to co-star with Katharine Hepburn in a New York production of "Jane Eyre," under the direction of George Cukor. At this writing Rathbone was believed to be torn between the desire to play the part of Rochester and the equally strong desire to satisfy ever increasing demands for his screen work.

For the second Schach film at Denham, the Elisabeth Bergner "Dreaming Lips," Paul Czinner this week has completed scenes in which Bergner is seen tending her sick husband (Romney Brent) while in love with a famous violinist (Raymond Massey). Also completed are settings of the "400" Night Club, with Miss Bergner dancing the rhumba.

Holmes at Elstree

Phillips Holmes has arrived for his part in BIP's "The Dominant Sex," at Elstree. Herbert Brenon already has started shooting on the film, in which Diana Churchill has taken over the role originally assigned to Gertrude Michael, ill in New York, and new expected in three weeks to co-star with John Lodge in "Bulldog Drummond at Bay."

Lodge currently is starring in "Murder Gang," Brian Desmond Hurst directing and Francis Lister cast for an important heavy part. Diana Churchill is the leading woman.

Sally O'Neil has begun work on the BIP-Argyle production, "Kathleen Mavourneen."

Hale for Criterion

Alan Hale, who came to England to play in the since postponed Tay Garnett production for Criterion, has been cast for "Jump For Glory," first of two pictures to be made for Criterion by Raoul Walsh and scheduled to go on the floor at Worton Hall on November 15th.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has the leading role, as a "cat-burglar," in "Jump For Glory," with Hale in the second part.

Alhambra Finishes

Forty years ago the Alhambra, Leicester Square, gave the British public its first sight of the new wonder of moving pictures. This week the famous theatre, soon to be demolished to make way for the new Odeon, was used for the first time as a film set and at the same time witnessed its last performance ever. For the London Films' "Men Are Not Gods," the Miriam Hopkins vehicle directed by Walter Reisch, the auditorium and stage were used to reproduce a gala performance of "Othello" with Sebastian Shaw in the title role. Seventeen hundred extras made up the last audience.

G-B DEAL INVOLVES LARGE BRITISH UNITS

Shareholders in Metropolis and Bradford Trust Traced; also Structure of Gaumont British

by BRUCE ALLAN

in London

After a welter of rumors, statements and facts had kept details surrounded by mystery for more than two months, the Gaumont British deal has emerged with its status, at least for a time, definitely clear. The facts, as recorded in MOTION PICTURE HERALD last week, are that John Maxwell, head of Associated British Pictures, has upset the original agreement for triple ownership of GB by the Ostrers, Twentieth Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, by purchasing the Ostrer holdings.

The Maxwell-Ostrer transaction involves two stages, the first of which has been completed. The ABP executive has purchased 250,000 "B" shares of Metropolis and Bradford Trust, which controls GB, and has agreed to purchase 5,100 "A" shares. The second purchase is being held in abeyance pending settlement of the Fox claim that the Ostrers cannot sell their shares without mutual consent. British and American ownership in GB thus remains the same

Because of the involved stock transactions connected with various phases of the deal, analysis of the corporate structures of the three British companies is important. The financial histories of Metropolis and Bradford Trust, Associated British Picture Corporation, Ltd., and Gaumont British Picture Corporation, Ltd., follow:

Metropolis and Bradford Trust

This is a private company, registered in February, 1928, with an authorized capital of £422,500, in 10,000 "A" shares of £1 each and 1,000,000 "B" shares of 8s3d each. All shares are issued. The total of £3,287,607 has been paid in cash on 107 "A" and 1,000,000 "B" shares, including £2,875,000 premium. The sum of £9,893 is "considered paid" in regard to 9,893 "A" shares. The shareholders are:

Metropolis and Bradford controls Gaumont-British Picture Corporation, Ltd., through a holding of 2,915,000 ten shilling ordinary shares, of 5,000,000 issued. Of the trust's G-B holding, 2,100,000 shares are held on account of Twentieth Century-Fox and 815,000 on account of the Ostrer brothers.

Associated British

This Maxwell Company began as M. E. Productions in 1926, became British International Pictures in 1927, as a public company. In 1933, it acquired the shares of the subsidiary Associated British Cinemas, Ltd. Now, as a holding company, it controls Associated British Cinemas (exhibition), British International Pictures (production), British Instructional Films (production), Wardour Films (distribution), and Pathé Pictures (distribution).

Properties include the studios at Elstree and Welwyn and 283 cinemas.

Of £4,000,000 authorized capital £3,550,000 is issued: £2,000,000 in 6 per cent cumulative perference shares of £1 value and 6,200,000 ordinary shares of 5s0d value. First mortgage debenture stock (5 per cent) is issued to a total of £3,462,121.

The net profit in the year to March 31, 1936 was £639,851 and the dividend 12½ per cent. The company assets have been valued at £10,510,043.

John Maxwell is chairman and managing director.

Gaumont British

Registered in 1927, the company now has an issued capital of £6,250,000 in £3,250,000 5½ per cent cumulative first preference shares of £1; £2,500,000 in ordinary shares of 10s.; £500,000 in "A" ordinaries of 5s value. First mortgage debenture stock, at 4½ per cent, amounts to £5,160,000.

The last profit declared, to March 31, 1935, was £412,896 and the dividend 7 per cent.

Gaumont-British controls, or has a substantial interest in, Provincial Cinematograph Theatres and other theatre groups, General Theatre Corporation, Baird Television and Bush Radio. It controls more than 300 theatres. Isidore Ostrer is president, Mark Ostrer chairman and managing director. Sidney Kent is a director and John Maxwell has just been elected to the board.

The Howard-Murphy plan of cooperative production has no basis of exhibitor membership. The Howard-Murphy company, Associated Artists, is solely a production concern, with no connection either with the "Dixey plan" of exhibitor-distribution or the Portal-Woolf theatre plans.

The film committee of the Public Morality Council plans to send a deputation to the Home Office urging the adoption of a new method of censoring films in "categories." Instead of the present "A" (adults only) class, to which children are admitted if accompanied by adults, it is suggested there should be a category of films from which children would be absolutely excluded.

Attacks Quota Principle

Guest speaker at a luncheon club get-together, Sir Charles Higham, the famous British publicist, launched an outspoken attack on the quota principle. If in any other industry, he said, buyers were told they must take a percentage of goods whether they liked them or not and whether they were good or bad, they would be up in arms. He suggested exhibitors should "collect a little backbone" and ask whether they were in a racket or in a legitimate business.

Sir Charles, who received uproarious applause for these remarks and also for his reference to the "Aunt Maries" of British production who had to have a say before a picture could be filmed, advocated a national publicity campaign for films along the lines of the "Drink More Milk" campaign.

Union Circuit Plans

Details of the ambitious plans for a merger-extension by Union Cinema Circuit, with 300 theatres in the near future, include a consolidation of Union Cinema Co., Ltd., and its subsidiaries, Oxford and Berkshire Cinemas and National Provincial Cinemas, in a new £6,000,000 company, which will make a public issue of £3,000,000 and also exchange shares on a large scale with shares of existing undertakings.

Union's issued capital is £314,891 in 200,000 seven per cent cumulative participating preference and 114,891 ordinary shares. Oxford and Berkshire capital is £350,000, split into 150,000 preference and 800,000 ordinaries of five shillings value. National Provincial has £750,000 capital in 500,000 preference and 1,000,000 five shilling ordinaries.

Owning 17 theatres in the provinces, Union has options or sites for 12 super theatres in the London area.

C. F. Bernherd, managing director, says the circuit will have 300 houses within a short time.

Dividend Seen Not Wise

No dividend decision at present is prudent, the latest Gaumont British report declares, until "after a careful survey of the production activities of the corporation, and pending recovery from America of a proportion of the higher cost of films produced for that market."

Regarding GB distribution, the report says that a substantial fall in profits is due to this higher cost. "Any sums received from America," the report continues, "will be used in reduction of such costs."

The company's balance sheet shows a bank overdraft of £1,149,785 secured by a mortgage on the stock; cash in hand and in the bank of £35,735. Productions in work are valued at £521,257.

Board Meets Monday

Developments in the GB situation are expected at the annual meeting scheduled for next Monday. Sidney R. Kent, president of 20th Century-Fox, has gone to France. instead of sailing for New York as scheduled.

United Artists Producers Reach Peak of Production

Production under the United Artists releasing banner will reach its peak between now and the next three months, with seven major pictures scheduled for release up to February 1, according to George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager in charge of distribution.

The following pictures are scheduled to be placed on the market in the near future by the company: "Come and Get It," produced by Samuel Goldwyn; "The Garden of Allah," Selznick International Technicolor production; "Rembrandt," by Alexander Korda in London; Samuel Goldwyn's "Beloved Enemy"; Walter Wanger's first production for the company, "You Only Live Once," and his "History Is Made at Night," and "A Star Is Born," by Selznick International in Technicolor.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 42

Question No. 42 was: (A) Is it ever permissible to use a switch for higher voltage or amperage than its rating? Should all circuit switches be enclosed in cabinets? (B) What is meant by "hunting"? What is its effect? Where would you seek for its cause?

The following made acceptable replies: S. Evans and C. Rau; D. Danielson; B. DiViotti; C. Oldham; W. Limmroth; T. F. Bochert; J. R. Prater; L. Cimikoski; W. C. Brown; C. Champney; W. H. Edmonds; L. Three answers to Section A have been selected for publication. D. Danielson says:

"No switch may ever be loaded beyond its rated voltage and/or amperage capacity. According to the National Electric Code there are some conditions wherein a switch need not be enclosed in a metal cabinet. Such condition requires that the location be dry and that the voltage-to-ground difference do not exceed 150 volts; also that the switch be protected from possibility of mechanical injury and that it be not in the vicinity of any sort of inflammable material. In a projection room the last requisite would compel location of all switches in approved metal cabinets or their equivalents."

B. DeVitti says, "In compliance with National Electric Code rules and regulations it is never, under any circumstances, permissible to use any switch for voltage or amperage in excess of its approved rating. It also is essential that all circuit switches be enclosed in metal cabinets, though this latter is unnecessary in projection rooms where approved switch cabinets are built into the walls of the room."

Charles Oldham puts it thusly: "No switch may be operated above the voltage and amperage rating stamped upon it. To do so would not only injure the switch but shorten its useful life. If the overload be sufficient, a dangerous situation would arise. All circuit switches should be enclosed in an approved metal cabinet (or its equivalent as in the case of enclosed snap switches. F. H. R.) as a preventive against injury or accidental short circuiting by objects coming into contact therewith. Some cabinets have the switch handle on the outside, which is an added element of safety."

(B) G. Thompson says: "Hunting is a term used to designate recurring variations in motor speed. Insofar as concerns the motor driving a motion picture-sound projector, its effect is to cause variations in speed of moving objects in the screen image, though such variations pass unnoticed unless the fault be very bad indeed. Its effect upon sound is, however, very evident to listeners. When speed increases, the tone pitch of course rises, and vice versa. If the hunting be rapid, the effect may resemble, in effect, what we call 'flutter' or 'wows.' If it be slow, then there will be a more or less constantly recurring rise and fall in pitch of the sound.

"The seat of the fault is either in the motor itself or in the current that drives it. If it be the latter, it will or should, of course, appear in the motors of both projectors. If in only one, then we may conclude it is in the individual motor itself. If it be the current, a voltmeter test across the terminals should disclose that fact. In fact, if the motor be of the synchronous type, the cause could not well be anything but alteration in cycle speed, and, of course, that is out of the question. No ordinary voltage fluctuation would alter the speed. If the advance or drop be sufficient it might burn the motor out or cause it to stop, but not to fluctuate in the manner called 'hunting.'

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 47

(A) Explain what function current (amperes) performs and what is consumed in the production of electric power.

(B) Explain how you test for clearance between armature and pole pieces of a motor or generator.

(C) What do you regard as the proper difference between generator and arc voltage in a motor-generator set, and why?

To join the Bluebook School merely send in answers. Place name and question number upon first sheet. Address F. H. Richardson, No. 3 Tudor Lane, Scarsdale, N. Y.

"Bad or loose connections in a motor circuit (anywhere in the circuit the 'juice' must travel) will, if of sufficient proportions, cause variations in speed. Dirty or badly worn commutators or a dirty brush face may do it. Variation in the speed of variable speed or d.c. motors may be due to faulty brush contacts due to any one of several things, for example brushes that do not fit their holders properly."

More than 400 "students" said the term hunting was wholly unfamiliar to them. Well, gentlemen, that is what this school is for—to familiarize you with your Bluebook of Projection. If you will turn to page 421 you will find (Question No. 8) the answer.

H. B. Smith answers, "Hunting is the term applied to small changes in motor speed that happen more or less frequently. If the changes be rapid, the result is a flutter; if less rapid, it becomes a series of wows in the sound. In sets having a motor control cabinet, when hunting takes place it will be well first of all to look over the brushes, which may not be making proper contact or may bind in their holders. If the brushes are okay, try changing tubes. If that does not effect a cure, try replacing the various condensers and resistors, one at a time, until the trouble is located."

Ambassador

BORN TO FIGHT: Frankie Darro, Jack LaRue, Frances Grant—This lower bracket programmer is head and shoulders above its predecessors in the Frankie Darro series. In fact, it is almost as good as some of the major company efforts and better than several we have seen. The story is plausible and well told and the players are convincing in their roles. Briefly, it is not quite big time, but is suitable for double bills and action days.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

Columbia

AND SO THEY WERE MARRIED: Mary Astor, Melvyn Douglas—A very poor picture for my town. Too much talk and not enough story or action. Business below average.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

COUNTERFEIT: Chester Morris, Margot Grahame —A very good action play. Should satisfy nearly everyone. Played October 13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KING STEPS OUT, THE: Grace Moore, Franchot Tone—A wonderful picture. Moore is good and the supporting cast was wonderful. Good comments from better class patrons. Others stayed away. Business below normal. Columbia recording is not as good as it once was. They are carrying this noiseless recording too far. The sound track on this picture and several others have been so dark that we must carry the fader three or four points higher. This gives more photo cell and tube noise so I cannot see where anything is gained by this denser sound track.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

TRAPPED BY TELEVISION: Lyle Talbot, Mary Astor—This picture pleased and drew average business. Played October 6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

First National

BULLETS OR BALLOTS: Edward G. Robinson, Joan Blondell—Very good gangster picture. Edward G. Robinson is always good and there is a very good supporting cast. Pleased. Running time, 81 minutes. Played October 10-11.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CAPTAIN BLOOD: Errol Flynn, Olivia De Havilland—A great production that did wonderful business. This is certainly the biggest B. O. Warner Bros. gave us this season. Errol Flynn is very handsome and is also a very good actor. He possesses that rare kind of masculine beauty that appeals to women and is liked by men. The part suits him to perfection. Our patrons are looking forward to see more of him. Olivia De Havilland is very sweet and the rest of the cast very good. Played July 25-27.—C. Goldin, Star Theatre, Hong Kong, China. European neighborhood patronage.

CHINA CLIPPER: Pat O'Brien—Box office returns nominal. About regular week end business. A satisfying picture, apparently. Our patrons accepted it as better than most pictures of this type. Running time, 89 minutes. Played October 2-3.—James N. Saunders, Avalon Theatre, Easton, Md. General patronage.

EARTHWORM TRACTORS: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—Good Brown comedy. Liked by those that saw it. Fast moving and snappy. Running time, 69 minutes. Played October 12-13.—Wilbur Cole, Park Theatre, Dexter, Me. Small town patronage.

FLIRTATION WALK: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler —Good as most of Warner's musicals are. Brought it back for one day as an "Old Favorite" to average business. Played July 28.—C. Goldin, Star Theatre, Hong Kong, China. European neighborhood patronage.

TWO AGAINST THE WORLD: Humphrey Bogart, Beverly Roberts—This is just fair, being one of those real short programmers, made to take care of the double-bill menace or force those exhibitors who are not using them to start. There ought to be a law against them. Running time, 57 minutes. Played October 2-3.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

Liberty

SCHOOL FOR GIRLS: Sidney Fox, George Kelly—This show is somewhat educational but at the same time entertaining. The worst part of it was that the exchange did not ship us the short subjects we had ordered on this program and we had to show just the feature alone, but we made a bargain night and saved our hide. Running time, eight reels. Played October 9-10.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

DAVID COPPERFIELD: Freddie Bartholomew, W. C. Fields, Frank Lawton, Lionel Barrymore, Edna Mae Oliver, Maureen O'Sullivan, Madge Evans—A wonderful picture this. Freddie Bartholomew great and all of the cast very good. All around first class production. Brought it back for one day as an "old favorite" and packed the house. Thanks, Metro. Running time, 13 reels. Played June 26.— C. Goldin, Star Theatre, Hong Kong, China. European neighborhood patronage.

DEVIL DOLL, THE: Lionel Barrymore, Maureen O'Sullivan—Definitely a story of imagination. Lionel Barrymore does expertly in his disguise of the scheming old lady. Interesting and logically developed to a satisfactory climax. Played October 14-15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GORGEOUS HUSSY, THE: Joan Crawford, Robert Taylor—We were frankly disappointed at our returns. We thought it a splendid picture, and still wonder why it didn't do more business. Business poor. Running time, 99 minutes. Played September 28-30.—James N. Saunders, Avalon Theatre, Easton, Md. General patronage.

GREAT ZIEGFELD, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Luise Rainer—Wonderful picture but too long. If Metro had left out reels 3-4-5-6 the audience would have appreciated it. Too much of Luise Rainer. Music, scenes, talent and dancing the best ever. Give it plenty of advertising. Running time, 180 minutes. Played September 13-16.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Maine. Town and country patronage.

FURY: Spencer Tracy, Sylvia Sidney—This is very good entertainment, quite rough for the ladies and children but we had no complaints so I guess it must have pleased the majority. Running time, 92 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FURY: Sylvia Sidney, Spencer Tracy—Grand and powerful production with a swell story which held our audiences as no picture has in months. We believe it was as good as "San Francisco" with the earthquake scenes eliminated. Give us more of these strong dramas. Running time, 94 minutes. Played September 27-28.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LAST OF THE PAGANS, THE: Mala and Lotus—A unique portrayal of South Sea Island home life. The setting was beautiful. The shanghai angle was a little far-fetched, but effective. Everyone liked it and said so. Running time, 8 reels. Played October 17.—C. F. Deane, Dunbar Theatre, Dunbar, W. Va. Family patronage.

PETTICOAT FEVER: Robert Montgomery, Myrna Loy—Good program picture, but not so good at the box office. Running time, 82 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SAN FRANCISCO: Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald, Spencer Tracy, Jack Holt—Dear Metro: It did the work. Please give us more of the same type. Spencer Tracy was cast perfectly; he pleased to the nth degree. It also proved that the great American public has an ear for the right kind of music. Yours very truly. Running time, 111 minutes. Played October 11-13.—C. F. Deane, Dunbar Theatre, Dunbar, W. Va. Family patronage.

SAN FRANCISCO: Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald, Spencer Tracy, Jack Holt—Excellent. Surely one of the big pictures of the year. This pleases as near 100 per cent as any picture I have played. The story is great and the cast does some very fine work. Jeanette MacDonald almost steals the show. Her singing was wonderful, especially when she sang "Jerusalem" and "Nearer My God to Thee." Tracy was a little miscast but he made the best of it and played his part well. Gable also did good work. I wish they would make more pictures on this order. Just enough religion in it to make it wonderful entertainment. This no doubt will go down in history as a masterpiece. Metro is to be congratulated in producing such a fine picture. Running time, 111 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SAN FRANCISCO: Clark Gable, Jeanette MacDonald, Spencer Tracy, Jack Holt—Well, it's the same old story. Everybody thought it was grand. Did not do the business we thought we would or should, yet it gave us a nice increase and paid us to run it, especially when it is probably the outstanding picture of the year. Running time, 111 minutes. Played October 4-6.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THIN MAN, THE: William Powell, Myrna Loy—This is the very ace of "Old Favorites." Has been voted first in the newspaper ballot, and the takings were equal to takings on the first day of "Captain Blood," and that is a record for an old picture. I think this picture is the best of all comedy-thrillers and apparently my patrons think the same. Could not accommodate all that came to see it, and promised to brink it back again in near future. Played July 29.—C. Goldin, Star Theatre, Hong Kong, China. European neighborhood patronage.

WE WENT TO COLLEGE: Walter Abel, Edith Atwater—Opinion varied, but believe that most of our patrons enjoyed it. Running time, 69 minutes. Played October 9-10.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BORDER FLIGHT: John Howard, Frances Farmer —Built primarily for double bills, as are so many of the program pictures nowadays. If every exhibitor would refuse to double-bill, the quality of our program pictures would improve greatly. Running time, 59 minutes. Played September 25-26.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BRIDE COMES HOME, THE: Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray—Not as good as "It Happened One Night" or "She Married Her Boss." Did average summer business on Sunday, but the second day was a flop. The third day business was terrible. Certainly not strong enough for three days for second run. Played July 5-7.—C. Goldin, Star Theatre, Hong Kong, China. European neighborhood patronage.

CASE OF MRS. AMES, THE: Madeleine Carroll, George Brent—This is one of the most engrossing courtroom dramas produced during the past three years. Why it has received such severe reports we cannot understand. Our patrons praised it highly.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

WIVES NEVER KNOW: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—Everyone liked this one. Running time, 73 minutes. Played October 17.—Wilbur Cole, Park Theatre, Dexter, Me. Small town patronage.

COLLEGIATE: Joe Penner, Jack Oakie, Frances Langford—A very good picture that did good business

SUPER X STARS

EASTMAN Super X helps the cameraman as no other film has ever helped before . . . to enhance his artistry . . . to solve difficult situations. It helps the exhibitor, too, by delivering photographic quality that undeniably heightens box-office appeal. In this dual role, Super X stars in the fullest sense of the word. Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y. (J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors, Fort Lee, New York, Chicago, Hollywood.)

EASTMAN SUPER X

on the opening day, but nose-dived on the second. No star value in the names for Hong Kong, because Penner is not known here at all and we had to rely on the drawing power of Oakie and Langford, which have not very strong following. As the title is rather misleading we had to insert in all our ads the following caption: "This is not a typical college pictue but a musical comedy full of pep." A typical American college picture with football and the rest of college stuff is poison for this town. Played July 19-21.—C. Goldin, Star Theatre, Hong Kong, China. European neighborhood patronage.

DESERT GOLD: Larry Crabbe, Marsha Hunt—Pretty good western. The great fault I find is they make these westerns too short. Why not make them at least 10 minutes longer? Running time, 61 minutes. —P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

DESIGN FOR LIVING: Miriam Hopkins, Fredric March, Gary Cooper—An old one, so we brought it back for one day and called it "Old Favorite." This kind of sophisticated comedy, Lubitsch's specialty, is a natural for this theatre. Played it on Saturday to a very good business. Played July 18.—C. Goldin, Star Theatre, Hong Kong, China. European neighborhood patronage.

EARLY TO BED: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—A good comedy feature, especially where the team is liked. Drew only fair crowd for us. Played October 16-17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

RETURN OF SOPHIE LANG, THE: Gertrude Michael, Sir Guy Standing, Ray Milland—We hope other exhibitors will not find it as difficult to sell this picture as we did. Despite the fact that the sequel angle was emphasized, people stayed away, thinking it was the original "Lang" film which they had seen. The fact was substantiated by the numerous patrons whom we contacted before and after the showing. All who saw it enjoyed it.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

SHIP CAFE: Carl Brisson, Arthur Judge.—Skip this one if you can. Poor story that nothing could save from terrible flop. Brisson's singing is not too bad, but his acting is not convincing at all. His popularity here is none. The rest of the cast has also no value for the B. O. Took very bad licking during two days. Played July 30-31.—C. Goldin, Star Theatre, Hong Kong, China. European neighborhood patronage.

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER: Ralph Bellamy, Katherine Locke, Andy Clyde—Some liked and some didn't. Just another show to most. No good for a two-day run in a small town. Running time, 71 minutes. Played October 16.—Wilbur Cole, Park Theatre, Dexter, Me. Small town patronage.

TEXAS RANGERS, THE: Fred MacMurray, Jean Parker—Just another western. Better than the average. Missed fire, somehow. Patrons were satisfied but that is all. Oakie did a good job. Running time, 99 minutes. Played October 14-15.—Wilbur V. Cole, Park Theatre, Dexter, Me. Small town patronage.

YOURS FOR THE ASKING: George Raft, Dolores Costello Barrymore—Very light but pleasant entertainment that received a good audience response.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

Reliable

MILLIONAIRE KID: Betty Compson, Bryant Washburn—Terrible sound destroys what remote possibilities this picture has of being booked on double programs in action houses. It cannot be recommended for any type of patronage, so poorly is it produced.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

RKO Radio

BREAK OF HEARTS: Katharine Hepburn, Charles Boyer—A good picture that did average Friday and Saturday business. The story is hokum, but the acting very good. Pity that Hepburn is not very popular here. The only explanation is that she appeared in too many weak stories lately. Let's hope that "Mary of Scotland" will regain for her the popularity which she deserves. Played July 3-4.—C. Goldin, Star Theatre, Hong Kong, China. European neighborhood patronage.

BRIDE WALKS OUT, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Gene Raymond—This is a good one. It has almost everything in it to make it a fine production and it is good for any place, city or country. Plenty of action and quick moving episodes that kept our people on their toes all through it. Played October 3.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

CHATTERBOX: Anne Shirley, Phillips Holmes—Just a fair program, although interesting with some comedy relief. Anne Shirley very good. Running time, seven reels. Played October 14.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

DON'T TURN 'EM LOOSE: Lewis Stone. Bruce Cabot, Louise Latimer—While the picture did not draw well, it was extremely well acted. Lewis Stone did wonderful work. A good production. Played October 17.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

GOLDIN MOVES TO KOWLOON MAJESTIC

The reports of Manager C. Goldin from the Star theatre in Hongkong close with those in the department this week. But that does not mean that Mr. Goldin no longer will contribute comment on what pictures are doing for him.

Mr. Goldin is now managing the Majestic theatre at Kowloon. The Majestic is a theatre of the Hongkong and Kowloon Cinema Company, Ltd. His next reports will be from the Majestic.

EX-MRS. BRADFORD, THE: William Powell, Jean Arthur—Pretty good picture despite the many adverse reports we've read about it. Nice production that would have been better if they had speeded it up. Played October 9-10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FRECKLES: Carol Stone, Tom Brown, Virginia Weidler—A story of Limberlost that has not very strong B. O. pull here. But the little Virginia was very much liked in "Laddie" so she brought some extra business in spite of very hot weather. And she certainly stole the show. Business above average. Played July 7-8.—C. Goldin, Star Theatre, Hong Kong, China. European neighborhood patronage.

FOLLOW THE FLEET: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Just as good as "Roberta" and "Top Hat," and that's damned good! Educated feet, catchy songs, wise-cracks, beautiful settings. and a plausible story; what a combination! Harriet Hilliard makes her screen debut and scores a knockout. This one will please any audience anywhere, anytime! Running time, 110 minutes. Played October 17.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LAST OUTLAW, THE: Harry Carey, Hoot Gibson —Something different in western plots. Very satisfactory picture for the most part.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LET'S SING AGAIN: Bobby Breen, Henry Armetta—Dandy little picture that introduces Bobby Breen. Maybe Bobby's voice will get a better production backing in his next. Played October 9-10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MARY OF SCOTLAND: Katharine Hepburn, Fredric March—Apparently this picture is not meant for urban or rural presentation. Our business was gratifying the opening night but petered out the last night. Running time, 12 minutes. Played September 24-26.—James N. Saunders, Avalon Theatre, Easton, Md. General patronage.

MURDER ON THE BRIDLE PATH: Helen Broderick, James Gleason—A good detective story with a punch. Hildegarde's every line tickled them into spasms. Everyone was well pleased. A ringer for us. Running time, 66 minutes. Played October 9.—C. F. Deane, Dunbar Theatre, Dunbar, W. Va. Family patronage.

SWING TIME: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Some localities report mediocre business. We were well pleased with our volume. A few more of the same caliber would be highly acceptable. Running time, 103 minutes. Played September 21-23.—James N. Saunders, Avalon Theatre, Easton, Md. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

COUNTRY BEYOND, THE: Rochelle Hudson, Paul Kelly—Very good program picture. Running time, 72 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

COUNTRY BEYOND, THE: Rochelle Hudson, Paul Kelly—A very good program picture which did better than average business, as the public seems to have a craving for good northern pictures.—Walter Hohlfeld, Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

COUNTRY BEYOND, THE: Rochelle Hudson, Paul Kelly—The dog Buck was the star, but the whole show was good and was followed with close interest by our patrons. I call it a real show, good enough for any theatre anywhere. Played September 26.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

GIRLS' DORMITORY: Simone Simon, Herbert Marshall—Simone Simon was a great attraction and picture can be sold by her. Start advertising weeks in advance on Simone Simon and you will do business. Picture itself only fair but everyone liked Simone Simon. Played September 6-8.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Maine. Town and country patronage.

HIGH TENSION: Brian Donlevy, Glenda Farrell—A good action film that was especially salable because of Brian Donlevy, who is liked by both our men and women patrons.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

HUMAN CARGO: Brian Donlevy, Claire Trevor—Our patrons were not overly enthusiastic about this picture, even though they seemed well entertained while watching it.—J. W Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Fort Worth, Texas. General patronage.

LITTLE MISS NOBODY: Jane Withers, Ralph Morgan—Wise little program picture that made a little money and pleased the majority. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LITTLE MISS NOBODY: Jane Withers, Ralph Morgan—Little Jane Withers scores another hit. Good story and good cast. My patrons are beginning to ask when I am going to book another Jane Withers picture. A good many like her better than Shirley Temple and that is saying a lot for Jane. Running time, 72 minutes. Played October 7-8.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

O'MALLEY OF THE MOUNTED: George O'Brien, Irene Ware—Good western. Fine for Friday and Saturday. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

POOR LITTLE RICH GIRL, THE: Shirley Temple —Started out slowly, as if there would be but little action. However it soon developed into a smart action comedy, with plenty of appeal for any and all of our patrons. A fine production. Played October 10.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

SING, BABY, SING: Alice Faye, Adolphe Menjou—Positively the best comedy this year. Patsy Kelly and Ted Healy at their best. The new Ritz Brothers present a new and entertaining kind of entertainment. The music and hit songs are all good. Talent galore. Will do business. Played September 20-22.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Maine. Town and country patronage.

SONG AND DANCE MAN: Paul Kelly. Claire Trevor—A good show for any night. We think this show deserves a special effort to be played on one of the best nights and it will satisfy and please the cash customers. We give this an O. K. for entertainment.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

TO MARY—WITH LOVE: Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy—This picture opened with a bang. When the sloppy love scenes started the audience laughed and poked fun at it. The acting was very good, but too much "lovey-dovey" stuff. Played August 30-September 1.—J. E. Palmer, State Theatre, Presque Isle, Maine. Town and country patronage.

UNDER TWO FLAGS: Claudette Colbert, Ronald Colman, Victor McLaglen, Rosalind Russell—A so-called big special which did less than average business. It had a logical though somewhat sad ending. Pleased about 50-50.—Walter Hohlfeld,. Elite Theatre, Greenleaf, Kan. Small town patronage.

United Artists

DARK ANGEL, THE: Merle Oberon, Fredric March, Herbert Marshall—A very good dramatic picture. If fault it has, it is the rather lengthy telling of the story. Shortening up the running time would have speeded things up a bit and made it all more exciting. Played October 7-8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MODERN TIMES: Charles Chaplin, Paulette Goddard—Rather a disappointment this one, even considering that it is a silent picture. Our patrons thought so and did not hesitate to tell us. Not as good as any of Chaplin's previous pictures. Patchy in spots and some of the tricks we have seen before. Music also not as good as in "City Lights." After five years of production, publicity and expectations, we have been hoping for something bigger—and so did the old B. O. Played June 27-29.—C. Goldin, Star Theatre, Hong Kong, China. European neighborhood patronage.

THESE THREE: Miriam Hopkins, Merle Oberon,

Joel McCrea—Crackerjack dramatic entertainment. Merle Oberon is excellent. However, although opening day's business fairly good, it fell down badly the second day despite Columbus Day. Played October 11-12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Universal

NEXT TIME WE LOVE: Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart—Just a fair program and we ran same only one night because of the poor title. Business off and we don't blame them. Running time, nine reels. Played October 11.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

ANTHONY ADVERSE: Fredric March, Olivia de Havilland, Anita Louise, Claude Rains—Two hours and twenty-seven minutes running time, and not one letdown in all that long footage. The credit must go to the cast and the adapter who picked the high spots out of this long, long novel. All hail to a marvelous production with a perfect cast: Miss Havilland, Anita Louise, Fredric March and Claude Rains, all outstanding in their roles. I was skeptical, for all its acclaim by the critics, that a picture as long as this one could keep up the tempo; but it did.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BRITISH AGENT: Leslie Howard, Kay Francis—A very good picture, especially here for our British patrons. Both Howard and Francis are very popular here. Brought this picture back as an "Old Favorite" for one day to a very satisfactory business. Played July 15.—C. Golden, Star Theatre, Hong Kong, China. European neighborhood patronage.

FRISCO KID: James Cagney, Margaret Lindsay—A good picture made on "Barbary Coast" pattern, but not as good as the original. And not as good at the B. O. either. Was not strong enough for three days. Business below average. Cagney and the rest of the cast very good. Played July 12-14.—C. Goldin, Star Theatre, Hong Kong, China. European neighborhood patronage.

GREEN PASTURES, THE: Rex Ingram—Splendid and yet we must report that it flopped badly for us. Seemed our folks just weren't interested and stayed away. Another special did less than program business. Played October 4-5.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

"Hot Air." Not worth running. Running time, 68 minutes. Played September 16-17.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HOT MONEY: Ross Alexander, Beverly Roberts—Just fair program picture. Lots of action and fast dialogue. Believe this Roberts gal is coming. Running time, 68 minutes. Played October 7-8.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

MISS PACIFIC FLEET: Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell, Hugh Herbert—Not the best from this team, but our patrons enjoyed it. Hugh Herbert nearly steals the show. Business little more than average and that is something in this hot weather and no cooling plant. Played July10-11.—C. Goldin, Star Theatre, Hong Kong, China. European neighborhood patronage.

PERSONAL MAID'S SECRET: Ruth Donnelly, Margaret Lindsay, Warren Hull—No star value, but a nice little picture that was liked by everyone who came to see it. Business above average. Played June 30-July 1.—C. Goldin, Star Theatre, Hong Kong, China. European neighborhood patronage.

PUBLIC ENEMY'S WIFE: Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay—Very good program picture with lots of pep and action. Both stars well liked here. Running time, 69 minutes. Played September 30-October 1.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

ICE CUT-UPS: New World of Sport Series—An interesting short showing skating in various forms.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PAIN IN THE PULLMAN, A: Three Stooges—Another lunatic comedy that pleased over 90 per cent of our folks.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STARS OF TOMORROW, NO. 4: Okay entertainment.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Educational

BULLY FROG, A: Paul Terry-Toons—Black and white cartoon, not exceptional, but makes a good filler.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HOME ON THE RANGE: Musical Comedies—Good singing. Western songs. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

IT HAPPENED ALL RIGHT: Tim and Irene—Just a bunch of nonsense and time wasted. A shelf and a box with a lock on it would help this from being moved around where it belongs. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

TIMID YOUNG MAN, A: Buster Keaton—Good comedy for Friday and Saturday uses. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

HONEYLAND: Harman Ising (Happy Harmonies)—These colored cartoons from MGM are always good. Believe we are paying too much for them, however.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PIRATE PARTY ON CATALINA ISLE: Musical Comedies—Very good musical. Running time, 19 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Paramount

COBWEB HOTEL, THE: Color Classics—A clever and funny color cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

COBWEB HOTEL, THE: Color Classics—A good colored cartoon. A little too much big spider for the kiddies. Producers should remember that a large percentage of a theatre audience is kiddies and they help bring the mothers. Do not overlook them.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HILLS OF OLD WYOMIN', THE: Louise Massey and the Westerners—This Screen Song presents a very pretty tune and is well done. Cartoon take-off on "The March of Time" is generally funny.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

POPULAR SCIENCES: This is an excellent series in color and pleases all. Also educational as well as entertaining.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ROOKIE FIREMAN, THE: Paramount Varieties—The best of the monkey reels. Play this.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

BOLD KING COLE: Rainbow Parade Cartoons—A very funny color cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 1: The provocative nature of this two-reeler makes us wonder if it's good policy to let our screen take sides where politics is concerned. We can't afford to create ill will at any rate.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 2: Maybe yes. Maybe no. Some like it; some do not. Principal criticism, too long on one subject.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

NEWLY REWEDS: Radio Flash Comedies—A good slapstick comedy that will get by.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

TOMORROW'S HALFBACKS: Sports with Bill Corum—This one was as near to nothing as you will ever find in one whole reel of film. Practically no football and far, far too much of "Mrs. Marks," who was so visibly "affected" that the boys just had to laugh. The first poor one that Bill has put out. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Recreational Director, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WORM BURNS, THE: Radio Flash Comedies—Good comedy. Keeps them laughing all the way through. Running time, two reels—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FILMING THE FANTASTIC: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—Okay subject—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FOX MOVIETONE NEWSREEL: A very good newsreel. The last one had the presentation of the colors in Technicolor. That was the highlight of the entire reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

Universal

CARNIVAL TIME: Mentone Musical Comedies—Average for this series. We've had better.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PLAYING FOR FUN: Mentone Musical Comedies—A very good musical comedy; saved our program from being a total flop. Running time, two reels.—Rudolf Duba, Royal Theatre, Kimball, S. D. Small town patronage.

SIGNING OFF: Mentone Musical Comedies—A fair subject in this series of usually clever two-reelers. The acts are mostly all good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Vitaphone

AT YOUR SERVICE, MADAME: Merrie Melodies—An excellent colored cartoon. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

CHANGING OF THE GUARD: Sybil Jason—Splendid coloring, a classical type short that will be best played with a comedy feature. Your show will then strike a better balance as there's little comedy to this show.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H: General patronage.

CAT CAME BACK, THE: Merrie Melodies—Not quite so good as most of this series. Running time, seven minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ECHO MOUNTAIN: Broadway Brevities—A good color two-reel musical. Very good but not outstanding.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SONG OF A NATION, THE: Donald Woods, Claire Dodd—One of the best shorts I ever exhibited. More good comments about this than the feature. Patriotic and entertainment in beautiful color. One patron told me it was worth the price of admission. A credit to any program. Don't be afraid to advertise this one. It simply cannot be overadvertised. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TOY TOWN HALL: Merrie Melodies—A dandy colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

ANOTHER CIRCUIT AGREES

"Everyone needs relaxation," says Sidney Meyer, Wometco Theatres general manager, writing in "Contact," the circuit's house publication to announce a regular day off each week for all managers and assistants.

Everyone does, indeed, and especially hard-pressed theatremen—which thought has been brought to attention frequently and emphatically in these pages. That the Miami, Florida, circuit is the latest theatre organization to see eye to eye with this department in regard to time off is gratifying but not surprising.

It is an executive order that should return dividends.

HELPING THE "LITTLE FELLOW"

Already found of value, the practice inaugurated by the Loew Theatres of selecting lesser members of the personnel to act as student-managers is one to be recommended for adoption by other exhibitors where such training is not now emphasized.

Among theatremen today promotion from the ranks is taken largely for granted. It is assumed and wisely that ambitious employees who have served long, faithfully and intelligently are sound timber for managerial posts and with this in mind, excellent schooling of one kind or another is made available.

Conducted by circuit heads, regular classes in the study of theatre operation are not unknown. The six-month course sponsored recently by Warner Cleveland zone executives resulted in a number of promotions. Further encouragement of employees through frequent staff meetings is advised by division manager Nat Wolf, who has this to say to his managers:

"Young men must be kept interested. It behooves those who by virtue of rank are the leaders, to devote their energy, thought and spirit in the interest of the youngsters. . . . Give the little fellow a chance. . . . Somebody gave you one."

In more instances than not, the Big Bosses are more likely to give the "nod" to the manager who sincerely aids in the advancement of members of his staff to better jobs.

"IT'S WHAT YOU DO"

The community of Lamar, Colorado, with a population of some 4,200 may not be considered by a lot of folks the ideal spot to put over a heck of a lot of fancy exploitation campaigns that get the money. But it seems and happily that Manager Frank Barnes of the Pioneer Theatre in that spot has other thoughts on the subject, to judge from an account of his Greater Season drive detailed on a following page.

"Never have I met a showman of his calibre," writes Robert W. Selig, Gaumont-British Denver office sales representative, in reporting the Barnes' boxoffice activities to this desk.

Some issues back we had occasion to opine that your honest-to-Henry theatreman dropped into a desert oasis, would waste no time in organizing a bannered camel parade and hooking the local horse-traders to a co-op page, or sichlike.

This seems to be a good spot to say it again, and also to repeat perhaps, "it's not where you are, but what you do."

YOUNGEST EXHIBITORS

Associated for many years and exhibitors from the very beginning when they started their theatre careers by running pictures in the basement for neighborhood youngsters, Manager Jack Day, age 21; Projectionist David Keefer, age 21, and Maintenance Chief Karl Keefer, age 19, now announce themselves as the sole operators of the Dillsburg Theatre, in Dillsburg, Pa.

There may be difficulty in discovering the oldest exhibitor in showbusiness but until there is further proof, the officers of the "Day and Keefer Enterprises," as they style themselves, may claim to be the youngest—and more power to them.

OUTLAW THOSE DRAUGHTS

With the approach of Old Man Winter, it won't be long now before those ding-blasted draughts begin to play a sour tune upon the domes of patrons bereft of hirsute adornment and annoy folks with sensitive necks, cold feet and such. That is, those icy streams will do their dirtiest in theatres where managers do not wage unceasing warfare against this deadly enemy to the boxoffice.

It is therefore moved and seconded that immediate action be taken by every theatreman in the land to outlaw annoying draughts that chill defenseless vertebrae and craniums.

Full Page Radio Co-ops Top "Big Broadcast" Plugs

San Francisco stores availed themselves of the radio names appearing in "Big Broadcast of 1937" with giant newspaper co-op ads on the date at the Fox, promoted by Arch Bowles. Featured were two full pages, one by leading Zenith dealer and the other by RCA Victor. Picture title and stars topped the radio and record copy which tied in with the personalities in the picture.

Book Tieins Arranged For "Boone" Opening

For date on "Daniel Boone" at the New York Palace, window coverage was obtained from publishers of book on life of the famed scout, stills and special displays planted in strategic spots throughout the metropolitan area. Spotted in five-and-tens were copies of a 10-cent volume. Arrangements were also put on force to have Heather Angel, star in the picture, appear on a net broadcast celebrating Girl Scout Week. Plans for the picture's exploitation in other spots include personal appearance of George O'Brien at the Lexington, Ky., premiere and at the Alden, in Jamaica, N. Y., local Sons of Legionaires will parade to the theatre on Hallowe'en. Blackstone Agency is cooperating on the various campaigns.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Builds Theatre Marquee For One Dollar Plus

Up to the time of opening on "Last of the Mohicans" at the Palace, Saratoga, N. Y., the house had no marquee other than a vertical neon with a flexume theatre name. On either side of the house, merchants had built marquees of their own which blocked the Palace from view of the passersby. How to overcome this was a problem solved neatly by Manager Ben Strauss and Bill Healy, United Artists exploiteer, as follows:

The boys purchased 15 feet of half-inch gas pipe and the rubber end of a crutch, attached the rubber end to the pipe, which was then attached to the front wall of the house and extended over the sidewalk. Guy wire from the top of the neon sign to the end of the pipe held it in place. Then clothesline cable, the ends secured with hooks, was attached and from this valance was strung with strings of pennants to dress it up. Total cost of material was $1.30.

Premiere, Ball Tops Ace Drive For 'New Season'

To introduce the new season in Lamar, Colo., Manager Frank Barnes, of the Pioneer Theatre put on a big-time Hollywood premiere at the theatre followed by a motion picture ball at the local armory. The event created unusual interest in the community of some 4,000 population, according to R. W. Selig, of the Gaumont-British Denver office who reports these recent activities and credits the theatreman with considerable acceleration of the boxoffice tempo in that spot.

The premiere was ushered in with a "doubles" contest in which 25 local boys and girls impersonated various stars. Entrants were brought to the theatre in new model cars, introduced over a lobby mike to the accompaniment of flood lights, street bands and all the usual fixins'. On the stage, the contestants performed their impersonations for promoted prizes. As the capacity house filed out after the show, a fireworks display was let loose which continued while the crowds adjourned to the armory for the ball. Proceedings were broadcast over the local station.

Covers 100-Mile Area

In addition to double-truck newspaper displays and radio advertising, Barnes blanketed a 100-mile circle with heralds, half-sheets and window cards, taking along his sound truck which was put in operation while each location was being posted. Streets were decorated and bannered, imprinted balloons distributed, every possible angle covered. Results were two capacity houses for the premiere with hundreds turned away and over 2.000 admissions at the ball that followed. Total theatre expense was $14 with the rest of the cost borne by the co-operating merchants.

The event was only one of the featured exploitations arranged by Barnes for the Greater season and aside from a special ballyhoo each week, he conducts a Popeye Club of 500 members, daily question-and-answer radio program built around his coming attractions, among other angles. Unusual also is his lobby, reports Selig, newly decorated in an Old West Pioneer motif with doormen and usherettes in cowboy and cowgirl costumes.

October Deadline: October Judges

Midnight of Saturday, November 7, is the deadline date for entries in the Quigley October Awards. So please have those campaigns at headquarters by that time.

The October judges are as follows: Neil F. Agnew, Paramount Distributing Corp.; S. Charles Einfeld, Warner Bros. Pictures, and Arthur Mayer, Rialto Theatre.

Boston Daily Tied To Lobby Contest By Metropolitan

Bringing in a lot of replies is the slant developed by Manager Henry Taylor and Publicist Gene Fox, of the Metropolitan Theatre, Boston, for a lobby contest tied in with the Daily Globe. Late news shots are featured in a special display and changed daily, the pictures surrounded by caricatures of ten personalities in the headlines. Patrons are requested to identify subjects of these drawings and submit their solutions on cards provided by the theatre.

The cards filled in are deposited in a ballot box near the exhibit. Each day awards of autographed star photos are given best guessers and the names of the personalities with follow-up story run regularly in the newspaper which furnishes continuous supply of late photos.

Slant is proving an excellent circulation builder for the paper and a novel attraction for the theatre. The theatremen credit Willard DeLue and John Potter, of the Globe's promotion department, for assistance.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Leading Radio Names Aid "Broadcast" Date

With the wealth of star radio names in "Big Broadcast of 1937" much was accomplished in the way of tieups with the sponsors of their programs and other national advertisers for the date at the New York Paramount. For instance, the Kraft-Phenix admen in addition to store posters crediting the date had a Bob Burns impersonator on the streets playing a bannered bazooka. The Jello organization contacted retail outlets for further buildup on Jack Benny, distributing window streamers with photo of star and picture copy.

On the radio programs of these stars before the New York opening and on the Burns and Allen broadcast there was generous mention made of the picture. Leopold Stokowski and Benny Goodman, who make records for RCA Victor, were also plugged by that company, as did Selmer Clarinets for Goodman.

Lobby of the State will be kept open after the show for patrons who desire to stay for late results.

Armistead Devotes Lobby To Equipment Display

In line with the recent article which appeared in Betters Theatres, on selling equipment, Harold Armistead, Lyric Theatre, Easley, S. C., personally took pictures of his various equipment, including seats, blower, heating plant, machinery, sound, etc. etc., had them enlarged and tacked to large board in lobby. Small explanatory cards were placed under each part and Hal reports the stunt as attracting attention.

Sobler Steals the Spot On "Magnificent Brute"

Seems as though the circus came to town and with the usual parade lined the streets with the curious in San Diego. At which, Manager Al Sobler, of the New Spreckels, to bally the premiere of "The Magnificent Bute," promoted himself a bright, red truck and decorated it with cutouts of pulchritudinous damsels gazing with soft eyes at a giant central figure of Vic McLaglen.

Properly bannered, the truck was wheeled right in on the circus parade moving along the local Broadway and thus the date was brought emphatically to the attention of the many on hand for the occasion.

Old Tire Matinee Tops Bridgeport 'Rhythm' Campaign

An old tire matinee sponsored by local Goodrich dealers featured the campaign on "Rhythm on the Range" put on by Ed Lynch and his assistant, Mike Carroll at the Cameo in Bridgeport, Conn. Newspaper campaign included page co-op ad and coupon which children were required to fill in and bring with an old tire to dealers to be exchanged for admission.

Mayor Ushers In New Show Season

Accompanying photo shows Mayor Thayer of Gloversville, N. Y., throwing the switch for Sylvan Deitz at the Glove Theatre, which controlled the electric signal the flashed to 92 Schine houses to open their greater show season. Stunt broke papers with stories and photos.

For "Swing Time" Sylvan staged a parade led by truck on which high school band plugged hit tunes. All Packard salesmen's demonstration cars carried cards reading, "Ride in a new Packard to see," etc., etc., photographs of Astaire and Rogers were distributed and attractive window displays were planted in department store tying in with swing fashions.

Offers "Hussy" Tickets On Weight Machine Tiein

Large shadow box surrounding the weighing machine at local five-and-ten was planted by Wally Caldwell, Loew's Valentine, Toledo, for "The Gorgeous Hussy," with guest tickets going to those receiving weight ticket with photo of either Crawford, Taylor or Tone on the reverse side. Shadowbox contained full picture, theatre and playdate credits.

Mimeographed telegrams with compliments from picture's three stars on opening of new season, plus picture mention, were distributed by messengers at homes with all deliveries and pickup wires, "Hussy" sundaes were featured at various fountains, bookmarks distributed in lending libraries and imprinted Robert Taylor photos delivered to housewives through life insurance company tieup.

Attractive Lobby Display Built by Fishkin for "Range"

A ten-foot atmospheric display was constructed by Louis Fishkin for his "Rhythm on the Range" lobby at the Commodore Theatre, Brooklyn, with an eight-foot ranch house made of beaverboard with electric logs burning inside hut which was furnished in western style.

Stuffed dog borrowed from local furrier lay beside camp fire rigged up from kettle with lighted electric logs hanging from tripod. Wagon wheels, harness, horseshoes, feed bags and cutouts of the stars completed the display.

Haggar Dresses House For "Follow the Fleet"

Week ahead of opening of "Follow the Fleet" at the Castle Cinema, South Wales, H. P. Haggar constructed a submarine covering the organ console and covering the whole width of the orchestra pit. A gun was mounted on the fore of the sub with large hole cut in conning tower allowing audience to see the organist, who was dressed in sailor suit. Console rose in complete darkness with one spot on the conning tower and a row of dark blue lights concealed on waves painted on cloth hanging along the orchestra rail.

For lobby display Haggar painted a large cloth as a seascape with small battleships cut from plywood and arranged as though the fleet were coming into the harbor. Box-office was converted into a gun turret with guns on either side and flags of all nations were arranged across the front. Top of box-office was a ship's bridge with wheel, port and starboard lights. Entire staff was dressed in naval uniforms and Haggar reports the stunt getting plenty of attention.

Tieup was effected with local light and power company by Will Osborne, Fox Theatre, Phoenix, Ariz., on "Anthony Adverse" large ads run in paper carrying line "In time of Anthony Adverse there was no convenience such as natural gas," etc., etc.; window was also given over to display.

Accompanying photo shows giant display for lobby with title spelled out in flittered block letters four feet high by three wide and a foot thick. These letters were pleaded against a black velour background with 5,000 watts playing on it. Stars and playdate were in cutout letters at bottom.

Three of the original costumes worn in picture were displayed in largest department store, books were displayed in lending libraries and special folders were distributed with telegrams two weeks ahead.

Swing Fashion Show Held By Rubin for "Swing Time"

Out in Michigan City, Ind., Harry Rubin, Tivoli Theatre, for "Swing Time" promoted local merchant for a fur fashion show on stage in which styles were called "swing" patterns. Show was interspersed with organ recital during which the traveler was closed.

Three days ahead of opening, chap swung from awning in front of theatre, plane flew over city dropping heralds, cash prizes and tickets awarded best swing waltzers through tieup with ballroom, newspapers carrying stories and photo of winners at end of contest.

Through courtesy of park superintendent, cards were planted on benches copy reading "This seat reserved for people waiting to see," etc., attractive girl in store window telephoned selected list of people and a drawing contest was planted in high schools with two weeks passes going to those submitting best drawings of Astaire and Rogers.

Plaid Front Constructed By Runte for "Scotland"

An entire new front was contributed by Jim Runte, Fox Strand, Pasadena, Cal., for "Mary of Scotland," by covering it with bright and attractive plaid cloth with large cutouts of Hepburn and March on panels at either side of box-office. The supporting feature on the program as well as the stills and catchlines were mounted on shields which aided in carrying out the atmosphere of the era of the picture's setting.

Opening night authentic Scotch bagpiper in full regalia played in front of the house and in order to further carry out the Scotch effect, strips of red and green cellophane were used on the marquee title lettering giving the appearance when lighted that plaid glass was used.

"Clipper" Model Contest

In connection with his showing of "China Clipper" at the Washington Theatre, Chester, Penna., Sol Getzow staged a contest in which he offered prizes for the best replica models of the ship. Attractive Lobby For "Without Regret"

Accompanying photo shows the eye-arresting lobby of the Corso in Milan with an especially attractive display for "Without Regret." Due to the peculiar shape of the Corso's lobby, it is not possible to have an extensive display, so the customary procedure is to take a very large head of the star and by means of concealed lighting, illuminate it artistically.

Various Reports on "Swing Time" Campaigns

A Ginger Rogers-Fred Astaire doubles contest in the Lowell Sun was planted by Sam Torgan, RKO Keith Theatre, Lowell, Mass., to choose a duo to head the Packard Parade. Stunt netted two-column pictures, stories plugging car, the picture and the initial broadcast.

The parade itself depicted ten years of Packard progress and graphically demonstrated the cars of a decade ago. Car with salesman was parked in front of theatre and entry blanks for patrons' contest were distributed house to house.

Out in Kansas City

Manager Larry Lehman and publicist Lou Mayer at the RKO Mainstreet also staged a street parade and secured cooperation of various stores for window display, leading department store featuring new gowns with models displaying them on swings. Side of window carried scene stills and card with picture copy. Music stores devoted windows to sheet music of hit tunes, lending libraries also dressed windows with books and scene stills and ushers were stationed at car in lobby distributing entry blanks to patrons.

At Rochester, N. Y.

W. W. Risley, at the RKO Palace tied up department store for a fashion show, using some of the original gowns worn by Rogers in the making of the picture. Risley also used the skywriting stunt with plane spelling out title in sky at five in the afternoon, catching crowds leaving work.

Imprinted blotters were inserted with all telegraph bills week ahead, milk bottle collars used by local dairy and entire staff wore brilliant blue sashes imprinted with yellow and musical notes. Department store was sold on idea of a co-op page, all ads stressing the "swing" tendency in fashions, and orchestras plugged the hit tunes.

Scottish Couples Invited To "Scotland" by Davis

Walter Davis, Capitol, Regina, Sask., Can., for "Mary of Scotland" through president of the local Scottish Rite Lodge invited Scottish couples, 50 years or more, to be the guests of the theatre. Bagpipers marched to the theatre and performed on stage. Papers broke with nice stories.

Schools, members of Little Theatre, various departments in the Parliament Buildings were circularized selling the idea of making up theatre parties, programmes were distributed to hotels, cafes and shops and radio commentator in bi-monthly broadcast of the "best pictures" gave picture her endorsement.

Beatrice Fairfax Ties In With DiPesa on "Dodsworth"

A bangup contest which is reported to have yielded more than 7,000 lines of free space on "Dodsworth" was planted by Joe DiPesa of Loew's, Boston, in the American under the byline of Beatrice Fairfax. Readers were invited to decide whether a husband should forgive an erring wife. First prize was a trip to Nassau, second a watch and several additional awards.

Joe further took over the daily song-guessing radio contest of I. J. Fox to publicize the picture and also planted transcription. Department stores cooperated with window displays and co-op ads, one of the stores concentrating on an elaborate outlay of every article that Sam Dodsworth used on his trip.

Rosenthal Ushers In "Dormitory" with Parade

To celebrate the opening of his new movie season, and "Girl's Dormitory" date, Morris Rosenthal, Majestic Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn., staged a parade with two bands, sound trucks and motorcycle police escort with line of girls carrying block cutout letters spelling out picture title (see photo). Girls were used for street bally during run.

Building and marquee were decorated with pennants, flags and burgees, two girls riding bannered bikes covered streets opening days and the motorcycle girls went down to night club opening night where they were introduced to audience and sang a few songs.

Morris got in an extra plug for the date in his Star Dust column running weekly in local paper and also got break with story on his 14th year in show business.

Dodsworth, lucky dog, was able to get away from the strenuous life. Alexander Smith Carpet, once it's down, never does. In fact, it thrives on it—which is one reason why you'll find it in the majority of the country's most successful theatres.

Doll Show Interests Newport "Younger Set"

Contest Put On by Harry Brown, Jr., Headed for Success

The little girls down in Newport, R. I., are mighty busy these days. Not merely cutting out paper dolls, but they are cutting out actual patterns from silks and satins, basting and sewing them together to fit and dress their favorite dolls. And too, Newport mothers are making their sewing machines hum to the melody of "Rhythm In Their Nursery Rhymes," for they're all helping their little girls to create new fashions for milady—the doll.

For at Shea's New Paramount Theatre, Managing Director Harry Brown, Jr., is running a most attractive and exciting (for Newport's "younger set" at least) contest for four weeks, started October 10—a Doll Fashion Show.

With a generous amount of publicity already released on this contest, the showman feels every assurance of huge success both in popularity and as a good-will and business builder.

Every girl in Newport has been invited to enter the Paramount's Doll Fashion Show Contest. She must dress her doll to represent either her favorite movie star, a historic, civic or patriotic personality or in some individual fashion created by the young miss herself.

Dolls Are Registered

The dolls are brought to the Paramount, where they are registered and given a number. The owner of the doll keeps a corresponding number for identification and claiming after the contest closes. Each doll entered is hung on a rack, which has been placed in the foyer of the theatre and which was specially built to accommodate some 200 dolls for the present time. The rack is similar in construction to a huge coat rack with 200 hangers attached. The dolls are hung side by side and form a very colorful and elaborate display.

Several cash prizes and over 100 other gifts are to be awarded to the owners of the winning dolls. Winners will be determined by votes and a novel method of determining the winners has been worked out for this event. Starting with the first day of the Doll Fashion Show Contest, each patron receives a ballot which is filled out and this vote cast for the doll of the patron's own choice, by number, and deposited in a regulation ballot box which is placed alongside the doll display. At the end of the contest the votes are taken out, counted, winners determined and prizes awarded from the stage.

A special trailer with a doll background and with appropriate children's music dubbed in on the sound truck, was made to announce the opening of the contest.

Newspaper ads, four days in advance of the contest's opening, carried teaser copy. Attractive three-color herald was printed and distributed in all the grade schools throughout the city and in the playgrounds during the school recess period and also free distribution through a local tieup with the Liberty Magazine distributor, house to house. Poster artist made up a beautiful one-sheet announcement card which was placed in an easel in the lobby of the theatre.

Brown worked this same contest some years back at the Jamaica Theatre in Jamaica Plain, Mass., with a great deal of success, building the doll entrants up to 450 with an average Saturday matinee attendance during the contest of 2,100.

Harry generously credits his assistants, Syd Solomon and Ed Shea, for their splendid cooperation and follow-through on this contest.

He finds this type of contest highly interesting to mothers and children and as entrants bring other mothers and other children to see and vote for their dolls on display in the theatre, attendance and receipts thus are aided. Also helpful is the fact that newspapers are inclined to a contest of this nature and are found willing to cooperate.

Mayor Inducted Into Clan By Deering for "Mohicans"

Highlight of Francis Deering's "Last of the Mohicans" date at Loew's State, Houston, was newspaper breaks received when Mayor Holcombe had the title of "Chief Progressive Scout" bestowed on him by Indian chief.

Tribe of Indians were brought to town in busses and entertained for the day which was also Houston's 100th birthday. Chief and his council arrived in full regalia and on arrival at theatre, the redmen entertained bystanders with songs, dances and answered questions.

Three days ahead, attractive Indian girl distributed charms in office buildings; charm consisted of large colored feather run through with a small red card of explanation. Arrangements were made for the insertion of imprinted bookmarks in central library, spot announcements were secured over radio and window displays were secured featuring Mohican red.

Francis also gives credit to his assistant, Robert Hert, and United Artists exploiteer, Ben Hill.

Australian Theatremen Allowed Wide Latitude

Individuality in Management Now Accepted Policy for All Circuits

by CLIFF HOLT

Australian Correspondent

> It has been said that there is much in common between the operating and advertising methods of theatremen on this side and those in the "Down Under" country and the low-down on the showbusiness herein described tells much to bear this out. That managers are given plenty of liberty in putting over their houses and attractions may have much to do with the popularity of motion pictures in Australia treated on these pages as a continuation of the Showman's Travelogue. A-MIKE.

Catering for a maximum audience of not quite seven millions, there are 1,354 picture houses in Australia, and this extraordinarily high percentage of theatres per capita bears out the contention that pro rata with population the Commonwealth is one of the finest and most lucrative film markets in the world.

Official statistics show that in the year 1933-34, Australia exported goods to the value of £120,651,925 (Australian currency), and imports totalled £60,712,926 (British currency). This favorable balance is brought about principally by Australia's flourishing export trade in wool. It is not surprising, therefore, that as Australian prosperity depends so much on her overseas trade, she was badly hit by the economic depression and industrial upheaval that overtook the world in 1930. Statistics also show that between 1929 and 1931, Australia's export trade dropped 20 millions sterling, and remained at approximately that figure until 1933 when a definite improvement commenced to take place. Today, her exports are only two millions short of the boom period of 1928-29; and financial institutions, supported by these facts, are unanimous that the Commonwealth has now turned the corner and faces a prosperous future.

Enthusiastic Theatre-Goers

An amusement and sport-loving people, Australians are enthusiastic theatre-goers, and distinctly non-insular in their choice of motion picture entertainment. A film's quality, and not country of origin, determines the patronage it receives. For this reason, distributors of British product—and Australian film product also—have long ceased to wave the Union Jack, realizing that merit is the one factor that counts. Nevertheless, under the British Preferential Tariff laws, the way is made easier for British films here, insomuch as they enter the market free of duty, whereas foreign producers are required to pay 4d per linear foot on all dramatic films imported for exhibition, unless they are brought in for purposes of copying, in which case the duty is raised 100 per cent to 8d per linear foot.

No doubt this advantage has materially helped Britain to improve her film position in Australia, for the great strides she has made since 1929 are illustrated by the fact that in that year the number of British feature productions shown here was a meager 50, as against 123 in 1935. Simultaneously, American releases have decreased from 525 in 1930 to 353 in 1935; but as Hollywood films brought to Australia still exceed those of any other importer by 200 per cent, America's position can scarcely be said to be in jeopardy.

Australia's two leading circuits are Hoyts Theatres, Ltd., and Union Theatres, Ltd.—keen competitors up till four years ago, but now operating as partners so far as their city holdings are concerned. Overseas visitors are quick to praise the Commonwealth's palatial city picture theatres; but it is probable they are unaware that they came into being as the result of an extravagant theatre-building war waged between Hoyts and Union in the 1926-27 era, when money flowed like water and each circuit was determined to outdo the other. At the height of it all sound imposed further enormous burdens on the two theatre companies; and when a financial earthquake in the shape of the depression struck the Commonwealth, and stocks, property values, the public's pocket-money and every other asset on which theatres entirely depend, depreciated to an alarming extent, Hoyts and Union found themselves caught in an embarrassing position. Holding heavy overdraughts for both organizations, the E. S. and A. Bank was very materially in it, too; and, skeptical as to the outcome if Hoyts and Union continued to fight much longer, brought about the creation of General Theatres Corporation, which now operates as a holding company for the Hoyts and Union city interests, and the two companies divide the profits or losses made by G. T. C. throughout the year.

RIALTO THEATRE
AUG. 2

TANDEM BALLY. Baltimorians thought the good old days had returned when Harold Grott, Rialto Theatre, sent this couple out on the streets in old-fashioned costumes to sell "San Francisco".

As the joint managing directors of G. T. C. and respective managing directors of Hoyts and Union, Charles E. Munro and Stuart F. Doyle are the two most influential and colorful personalities in the Australian exhibiting business, and as between them they control the majority of city theatres in the five capitals, and about 100 neighborhood and country theatres, it can be readily seen that their decisions have a terrific effect on the trading activities of the distributing companies. To Munro must go the credit of re-establishing on a lasting and profit-making basis an organization that was on the verge of liquidation when he took hold of the reins; to Doyle, the credit of steering Union through the severest days of the depression, of fostering the distribution and exhibition of British Films in the Commonwealth when they looked like a losing bet, and of creating Cinesound Productions, Ltd., an Australian film producing company that makes money.

New Circuit Progressing

Under the actual control of the Hoyts organization are the Regent and Plaza Theatres, Sydney; the Regent, Plaza and Hoyts de Luxe Theatre, Melbourne; the Regent Theatres in Adelaide and Brisbane; and the Capitol, Ambassadors and Regent in Perth, as well as 23 neighborhood theatres in Sydney and 40 in Melbourne. The Union group of city theatres consists of the State, Capitol, Embassy and Lyceum in Sydney; the State, Majestic and Melba in Melbourne; the Wintergarden, Tivoli, Majestic and Valley Theatres Brisbane; the York, Adelaide; the Prince of Wales, Hobart (Tasmania).

During the past nine months, a new major circuit in Snider and Dean Theatres, Ltd., has made its appearance, and is making such rapid strides that its future is likely to have a most important bearing on the exhibition market of this country. From small beginnings, Snider and Dean Theatres have now improved their position to such an extent that the company has direct and indirect interests in 42 theatres spread throughout the Commonwealth. The majority of these are country locations, but the Mayfair and Civic (Sydney) and the Lyceum (Melbourne) are city houses, and further important holdings in Newcastle (which is a city in its own right but is not regarded with nearly the same importance as the other capitals) make Snider and Dean a force to be reckoned with.

Double-Features the Vogue

Two feature bills are the vogue in Australia and will always remain so except in isolated cases, because the public demands them and because the shorts available do not contain a sufficient percentage of good quality. General Theatres Corporation is particularly fortunate in this respect, for the reason that the large number of services at the company's command makes it possible to put together two features without any complications such as the appearance on the one program of the same player in both pictures. In the Sydney and Melbourne suburbs this is a continual worry to the independents, who are obliged to battle ahead on two services with double feature bills and change their shows bi-weekly. In spite of this handicap, it must be acknowledged that they are doing a great job.

Suburban Competition Intense

The circuits are remodelling and rebuilding their neighborhood houses, it is true, but so, too, are the independents; indeed, suburban opposition is becoming so intense and the habit developed among patrons of awaiting a picture's release in the suburbs has grown so rapidly, that the opposition of the neighborhood theatres is being keenly felt by city managements. There is every reason to believe that the Australian out-of-town theatre, already an imposing structure, will be on a level with the world's best within the next three or four years.

Similarly it can be claimed, I think, that the general conduct of theatres in Australia measures right up to the world's best standards. No Hollywood or British producer of an artistic triumph can concern himself with the manner in which his picture is presented in the Antipodes. City theatres here are managed with a decorum and efficiency that could not be improved upon on Broadway or the West End.

Managers Given Liberty

Taken at large, the managers are a band of astute, capable men who know their business and carry on their job in a manner designed to obtain the best out of it.

One factor that stands to the manager of a circuit-owned house in this country is that his ability and personality are not poisoned by the chain-store system. Charles E. Munro once made himself very clear about this point, and his policy of individuality in theatre management has become the accepted policy for all Australian circuits. To the manager the directors say (in effect): "We are interested in net, not gross. Return us a profit. The show is yours. Now go to it!"

The result is that the manager runs the theatre with as much enthusiasm as if it were his own. Competition is keen not only between opposition shows, but also between managers who are employed on the same circuit. In his own district the theatre-man is a prominent and definite personality. He is a member of the local charity organization, the local sporting bodies, the local Better Housing Scheme—any organization at all that will bring goodwill to himself and his theatre. Occasionally such activities have their drawbacks; he will find that it is necessary to provide his theatre in the mornings for committee meetings and public gatherings, and on Sunday nights when the law forbids the presentation of entertainment for a charged admission, a charity performance to assist the local Hospital Fund. But it pays dividends in the long run, and rightly makes the theatre manager feel that he has a standing in the community which will do much to silence the noisy minority who are prone to belittle the art and entertainment of motion pictures.

Under the distributors' contracts, the minimum admission price to Australian picture houses is 1/-, except in Western Australia, where exhibitors in certain locations are permitted to charge six-pence. As I write, a dispute is proceeding between the Exhibitors' Association of N. S. W. over the minimum admission price; but I would be very much surprised if distributors agreed to waive the clause or permit six-penny minimum admissions as a regular practice, owing to preponderance of percentage programs.

Dependable estimates place 16d as the average admission price if city, suburban and country theatres are brought into the computation, but first-run city theatres normally charge and get 5/- top on Saturday nights with a minimum of 2/-, and 3/10 top and 1/6 low on week nights. Matinee prices range from 3/3 down to 1/3. Orchestras are employed in only the leading theatres, though there is a tendency lately to introduce small bands of six or eight into the more popular suburban theatres. Acts and costly stage presentations, which were the vogue here when business boomed, are now seen very rarely, and there is little prospect of a revival in this direction.

It is a very different matter to properly describe the Australian audience. Taken at large, I suppose we are a race of democrats, but there are distinct social and mental differences, and many of the smart, sophisticated comedies that are a joy to the discriminating, are hopeless propositions in the industrial areas. By the same token, pictures that essentially appeal to the lower classes are of little value if released in the higher social areas, so that only the film which steers the middle course can be assured of a representative patronage.

BIRTHDAY SHOW
at
Loew's GRANADA

MOUSE STREET BALLY. To acquaint the kids of Cleveland with the fact that they were invited to attend the Mickey Mouse party at Loew's Granada, John Newkirk used the above bally.

Recently General Theatres Corporation established as a maximum daily newspaper advertisement for any one show a space of 16 inches over three columns, irrespective of the distributors' preferences in the matter or of what space their competitors were likely to take. I personally think the limitation will fizzle out by the end of 1936, but perhaps time will prove me wrong.

Prior to this restriction, half-page and full-page advertisements costing £67/10/- and £135 respectively for the space alone have been not merely commonplace but almost accepted as a matter of course as part of the preliminary campaign, and the man doesn't exist who can say they weren't worth it.

On a first-run city show, which would expect to gross in the first week anything from £2,500 to £3,000, the preliminary and first week advertising charges amount to between £350 and £400. Such factors as selling a new star or a scarcely-known but good quality picture may occasionally increase this sum to £500; and I have known occasions when the preliminary campaign has cost nearly £1,000, but this is very rare. Display advertisements in the daily newspapers absorb 55 to 60 per cent, and the rest go in radio, billboards, ballyhoos, lobbies and miscellaneous items.

Suburban and country newspapers are usually more than willing to cooperate with theatre managements in the promotion of competitions and similar stunts; but many a city press-agent has broken his heart by trying to persuade the metropolitan dailies to devote space to the same ideas. There are exceptions to prove this rule. The Melbourne Herald, the outstanding evening newspaper in the Commonwealth, and the Melbourne Regent conducted a competition with prize-money totalling £500 to discover an Australian Shirley Temple, and the Sydney Telegraph later repeated the contest.

Papers Not Co-operative

Again, one or two other important publications have offered trips to Hollywood as inducements to enter their schemes for finding local screen talent, but, as I say, these are exceptions, and in view of the large advertising revenue the newspapers receive from motion picture companies, newspaper proprietors here are extraordinarily hard on the city shows.

They are now beginning to realize the value of movie supplements for increasing circulation, and the industry is possibly benefitting from the increased publicity given its stars and attractions; but the system of reviewing films continues and the critics are at times particularly caustic in their comments, especially those writing for the more powerful publications.

Once an important phase of the advertising man's campaign, ballyhoos are no longer fashionable with the city exploiteer, but they are used by the lower-priced city houses which cater for the less discerning audiences. Stringent traffic by-laws restrict their scope to such an extent that they do not mean a great deal, however, and the majority of showmen pin their faith to newspapers first and foremost, then radio, which is gradually receiving a greater proportion of the allocation as radio licenses increase.

American Press Sheets Valued

In the preparation of his newspaper campaign, the Australian publicity man finds the American press-sheet of inestimable value, and by incorporating his own knowledge of the market with the artistic quality of the press-sheet design, he delivers an advertisement that has earned for him something of a reputation as a lay-out and ad-writing specialist. The excellent supply of stills that is available on American attractions is also of decided assistance, whereas he is seriously handicapped in this respect so far as British product is concerned, as the printing service on British films is simply deplorable.

The commencement of the talking picture era, some terrific film hire grosses were obtained by the first sound pictures released on this market, and the record is generally regarded as being in the vicinity of £66,000.

Curiously enough, an Australian film produced by Cinesound Production, Ltd., and of which possibly not 20 exhibitors in America have ever heard, holds the distinction of sharing the record. This is Cinesound's first picture, "On Our Selection," a slap-stick comedy of Australian bush life which looked like an amateur's effort alongside the more polished productions from Hollywood, but which proved a sensational hit in both its city and country engagements. It was a great personal triumph for the director, Ken G. Hall, who is now in charge of Cinesound's production activities, and it served as a very definite reminder to American distributors of the possibilities this market really holds.

Film Board of Trade Endorsed

Under the presidency of Sir Victor Wilson, the Motion Picture Distributors' Association has functioned for some 10 years or more, and is subsidized by members in the amount of £500 per annum. It cannot be said that the M. P. D. A. has been a singular success as an agency for rectifying discord between distributors and exhibitors, but as the guardian of the industry's political security and an organization entrusted with the task of protecting and increasing the industry's goodwill in the community, it has justified its existence. Possibly out of the M. P. D. A.'s inability or unwillingness to interfere in the disputes between its members and exhibitors has risen the Film Board of Trade, a pleasing and recent development, which promises to lessen the necessity for repeated political interference on purely trade and domestic issues.

Since the inception of the Commonwealth Censorship Board in 1928—brought about as a direct result of the recommendations of the Royal Commission—Cresswell O'Reilly has retained the office of Chief Censor, with a jurisdiction over any film, dramatic or otherwise, which has been imported for exhibition, and also over any Australian-made film submitted for exhibition in Australia. Paradoxically, the Censorship Department has no power over the exhibition of an Australian picture overseas, so that occasionally an invidious situation arises when the Censor Board bans an Australian picture's exhibition within the Commonwealth, but has no power to restrain its release in any other country. Under the regulations of the Police Department, and quite independent of the censor's findings, no film which has a bushranger theme can be shown in New South Wales, despite the fact that the censor might pass it for all States. "Stingaree," the RKO picture with Irene Dunne and Richard Dix, is a case in point. Banned in N. S. W., its release elsewhere was permitted.

Police Act as Censors

In all States, the police have the right to order a film off the screen, even after the censor has certified it, but this has never happened and is never likely to happen. At this point their authority stops: while they can ban a film the censor has okayed, they cannot okay one that he has banned. Only the Appeal Board has the right to do this; and the last Censorship Report shows that of 31 features rejected by the censor in the first instance, the censor's findings were reversed on 10 occasions (usually after the film had been reconstructed), and upheld on 11.

Australian showmen face stern opposition from various sources, and it is necessary for them to exercise expert showmanship methods in order to maintain grosses at a consistently high figure. Circuit chiefs claim that the advertising costs of Australian theatres are proportionately higher in the Commonwealth than in any other country. I cannot vouch for this; but at all events, the surfing beaches, night trotting and dog-racing in some States, outdoor sports such as horse-racing, football, cricket, golf, tennis and (in the evening) radio, legitimate shows, dancing and bridge, give the potential movie patron numerous alternatives unless absolutely the best is obtained from the programs available.

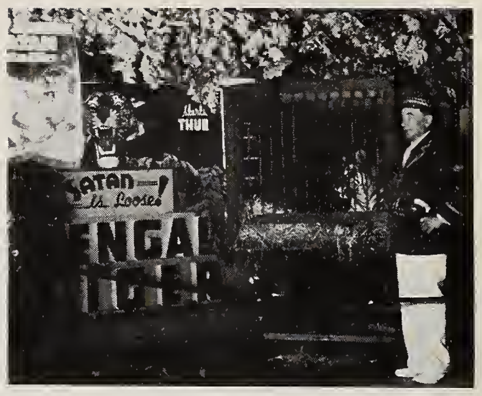
Coloring Contest Planted By Martin for "Rangers"

City Manager Guy Martin, Colfax Theatre, South Bend, Ind., for "Texas Rangers" ran a coloring contest in the News-Times, offering guest tickets to kids submitting best coloring job and identifying the flags.

For his street bally, Guy used truck on which was planted compoboard tepee and ranger (see photo) which toured streets, two weeks ahead of opening, usher dressed as cowboy told kids at matinee that ranger badges would be given to first 500 attending meeting following week, and made arrangements with rural telephone company managers to sound alarm signal over entire circuit so that when subscribers picked up receivers, announcement regarding the picture was made.

In addition to local newspapers ads were also run in popular Polish newspaper, which covered 30,000 homes in Southern Michigan, canvass, housewives signing testimonials.



Capt. Helliott with Tiger in Lobby

Holland Ties Up Circus For "Bengal Tiger"

With Elkhart but 80 miles from Peru, Ind., the winter headquarters of the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus, Sid Holland, city manager, Elco Theatre for "Bengal Tiger," contacted Capt. Helliott, Clyde Beatty's trainer and arranged for him to accompany a bannered caravan with tigers, etc., from the camp direct to theatre. Police escort met the caravan at city limits and with sirens sounding escorted them to the Elco.

On arrival, Miss Indiana, beauty contest winner for 1936, greeted Capt. Helliott, who set up tiger cage in lobby (see photo) and delivered lecture at kid matinee Saturday morning. Papers were generous with stories and photos of the stunt.

A novel contest was planted in lobby consisting of a thrill chart on which three of the outstanding shockers in film were shown in scene stills, cards were given out on which contestants were to check which they thought was the greatest thrill and why. Six girls were used for a house-to-house canvass, housewives signing testimonials carrying playdates, etc.

Orchestras cooperated with Sid by plugging the old tune, "Hold That Tiger," special card at music stands containing picture copy, and through cooperation of local bus company offered free rides home to those attending opening of film.

Circus Front Sells "Poppy"

To sell "Poppy" at the Hines Theatre, Portland, Ind., Roger Ludy converted his entire front into a circus tent, patrons going in through special entrance. Cashier sold tickets from a "side show" ticket box placed next to entrance and opening night circus band performed in front of theatre.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

SAMUEL WESLEY KENDALL
manages the Roxy Theatre, in Yakima, Wash., and says that during his last year in high school he worked as doorman for Fox West Coast Theatres and on graduating became the house manager of the Majestic. In 1930 1st National Theatre, Inc., took over the house and Sam continued there until last May when the Roxy, a new and larger house opened and Sam was given the job.

is in Brooklyn holding down the assistant's job at the Coliseum Theatre. Andy is another member close enough to us to drop in on his next day off to get personally acquainted. So we shall be expecting a visit soon, but in the meantime, expect to have some reports from your house.

manages the Ridgely Theatre in Ridgely, Md., having started as an usher for Schines, advanced to Doorman then assistant. After a few changes, Dick dropped out of showbusiness for about a year, but returned to take over the above house for Marsh Gollner, another good Round Tabler.

is in Bisbee, Ariz., managing the Lyric Theatre for the Diamos Amuse. Co. having also managed the Plaza in Tucson. Ted is no stranger to our pages, having started his membership off on the right foot, he has been an active contributor and we anticipate still further reports from him.

is the general manager of the Smith Chain Theatres, Inc., in Syracuse, N. Y., from which we have other active members. How about letting us know what you are doing, Case, so that it may be publicized in our pages? Remember when you join the club, you are expected to keep in touch with us.

manages the Park Theatre, Dexter, Maine, and started as bill passer, house boy, usher, cashier, assistant and then to his present job. We haven't many members in Dexter, Wilbur, so we're depending on you for reports from that quarter, when do you start?

started with Paramount in Cincinnati as assistant advertising sales manager and seven months later was made manager of the department. Diller remained in that job for three years before assuming the managerial reins of the Capitol Theatre in Winchester, Ky., from which spot he joins the club.

as he puts it, started sweeping out theatres when he was fourteen having followed in the footsteps of other members of his family. Les managed such theatres as the Ohio, Paradise, and Burwin and is now managing the Fox Van Nuys Theatre in Van Nuys, Cal. Immerman has worked for but two circuits, Balaban & Katz in Chicago and Fox West Coast in Los Angeles.

manages the Lamoine Theatre in Macomb, Ill., and says he is a novice at showbusiness, having entered it but two months ago. Well, John, just keep following the activities of your brother members as detailed in our section and that's about the quickest way to learn that we know of. John says he is particularly interested in lobby and front displays, so if you boys have some extra photos lying around and will shoot them along to him, we're sure he'll appreciate it.

JACK BEACHLER
is in Hastings, Neb. Managed the Strand Theatre for the Tri-States Corporation and started as doorman of the Capitol in Grand Island, worked gradually to the executive end of the business and later was transferred to the Majestic in the same city. From that spot Jack was transferred to his present one where we hope to hear from him at not too infrequent intervals.

manages the Capitol Theatre in Walla Walla, Wash., and with all the good members we have there, we're hoping that we can spur George on to a little lively competition and send along accounts of his recent campaigns at his house for reproduction in our pages.

manages the Roxy Theatre in Walla Walla, Wash., too and maybe with these two new members joining from the same town, we'll be hearing real soon. Can we depend on you, Dale? Who's going to be the first to contribute, you or George?

is the artist for the Harvard Theatre, Harvard, Ill., having started for the Fox Amusement Ent. and then the Midwest Amuse. and Wisconsin Amuse. Ent. at the Jeffris in Janesville. Jack has worked for many members of ours including Bill Hendricks and Eaton Sizer, is at present working for Arthur Hallam and promises to send along some examples of his recent lobby displays.

manages the Varsity Theatre in Buffalo, N. Y., for Basil Brothers and started in showbusiness in 1928 as an usher under Milton Korach, another Round Tabler, at the Elmwood Theatre. After two years in this spot, Tom went to the Victoria as assistant, which house was later acquired by his present employers who retained him and then promoted him to his present job.

in Waterloo, Iowa, manages the State Theatre and started at the King Theatre, Belle Plaine, Ia., as advertising man. After a year of this, Marsh switched to projection staying at that for three years until he was made manager and then four months ago transferred from that spot to his present job.

is assistant manager, working under R. F. Wilbern at the Palace and Folly Theatres in Duncan, Okla., a Griffith Amuse. house. Clyde says he is joining so that he may submit some ideas to us, but up to this writing we haven't heard from him. How about it, Young?

is in Roswell, New Mexico, as assistant manager of the Yucca and Princess Theatres. Since Stan is the first member to join from Roswell, we're hoping that we can depend on him to keep us posted on what's going on there in the theatre world.

POLITICAL BALLYHOO CUTS SWATH IN CHICAGO THEATRES' GROSSES

Broadcasts and Rallies with Vaudeville Reduce Receipts of Circuits As Much As 30 Per Cent in One Week

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

Political broadcasts and rallies have been cutting into theatre grosses to an alarming extent in the Chicago area the last few weeks, according to a survey of theatremen.

The national radio hookups for political broadcasts have come at hours which have kept patrons away from the theatres on the best show nights and other times as well. The broadcasts have been so frequent the past week that grosses have fallen off as high as 30 per cent on some nights, according to circuit executives, and independents make similar reports.

Nights on which President Roosevelt broadcasts, according to John Balaban, of the Balaban & Katz circuit, have found theatre business at a low ebb.

Another adverse factor is the political rally which has featured along with the campaign speeches a vaudeville show or athletic contests such as boxing and wrestling.

Both parties have been particularly aggressive in the attempt to try and give the audience a bigger show with each successive attempt. Vaudeville acts have found the political playdates a welcome way to fill in layoff time. The pay is not much but it is at least cakes and coffee, and the audience response is usually top notch.

Downstate theatres also have felt the political influence to a marked degree, and in the smaller towns business has been almost nil on the nights of political rallies, with their fanfare.

[At the New York heaquarters of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America is was said that reports of member companies had not as yet determined any pronounced adverse effect of the political campaign on theatre receipts as a whole. —Ed.]

Film sales in this territory are breaking all records and the general amount of business will be the largest in five years, according to exchange men who are signing up the deals as fast as they possibly can.

One local exchange, which last year had 252 deals closed on the 5th of October, this year recorded 364 deals completed.

City sales here have been the highest the last ten days of any time in the history of the business. The reason for this is undoubtedly the recent straightening out of the clearance situation which held up sales for many weeks in the city territory, both for circuits and independents.

Another reason for the sales rush is a feeling held by some, though doubted by others, that the entire city may go double feature next week, when the first of the new product becomes available for the independent theatres. As no double feature clause is in the new season contracts the independents can play duals as well as B & K, which is now using them in the "A" week theatres.

Sale of the State-Lake theatre building to Balaban & Katz is still in negotiation. So far the circuit has not gained possession of the building which houses the State-Lake theatre and, according to B & K executives, no plans for operation of the theatre have been made.

When the sale is finally consummated Jones, Linick and Schaeffer, operators of the State-Lake theatre, will have six months time before they will be forced to vacate.

Chicago's Film Row, along South Wabash avenue, is gradually moving south. The latest report to be verified regarding this southern exodus is the announcement that a new $150,000 building to house the Universal, Columbia and United Artists exchanges will be erected on 13th street and Wabash avenue about March 1st.

Deals for space in the two-story building have already been signed by Universal and Columbia. The United Artists deal is expected to be signed soon.

The structure will be erected by Herbert R. Butz, local financier. A. M. Brown, real estate agent, is handling the details.

Universal and Columbia will have the first floor and the United Artists office will occupy the second floor which also will have a projection room.

It is expected that the building will be ready for occupancy by September 1, 1937.

Harry Balaban, who has been ill with an intestinal ailment the last few weeks, is expected back at his desk next week. He is at his home recuperating after two weeks in the hospital.

The product deal between United Artists and Great States circuit has been completed with this circuit again playing the U A product. Last year United Artists sold away from Great States, but now that all difficulties are ironed out the large downstate circuit again will play UA pictures.

The UA-B & K deal also has been signed. Last year B & K refused to buy more than 12 of 18 pictures offered and the film company sold to independents here exclusively, except the Charles Chaplin picture which was offered on a special deal.

Some legal fireworks are promised in a contest for the lease of the Symphony theatre which is operated by the Warner circuit.

On October 1, the lease expired and the owners of the property, represented by Louis Greenberg, refused to let Warner have a new lease and gave one to Aaron Saperstein instead. Warner has refused to vacate. The result of this situation will probably be decided in the courts as Warners say they will not give up the theatre while the owners have already made a lease with Saperstein for the west side house and this must be recognized.

In as tough an election fight as the organization has ever witnessed, William Holden was elected president of the B & K Employees Club, which has a membership of more than 2,000. The battle for the presidency was between Roy Bruder, manager of the Chicago theatre, and Mr. Holden, Southtown manager.

More than 300 exhibitors turned out for the party held at the Old Town Room of the Sherman hotel on Thursday night by Allied Theatres and Chesterfield-Invincible pictures. A dinner and entertainment were offered the guests. Speakers were Aaron Saperstein, W. A. Steffes of Minneapolis, Eddie Golden, general sales manager of Chesterfield-Invincible Pictures and others, including Roger Pryor, who is appearing with his orchestra at the hotel.

Film Sales Are Best in Five Years, Say Many Exchanges; One Shows 364 Deals Against 252 Same Time Last Year

Aaron Saperstein and Edwin Silverman have been elected to honorary membership in the Chicago Amusment Publicists Association. They were guests at a meeting in their honor last week.

In a statement to the Chicago film industry this week, Edwin Silverman, Essaness Circuit executive said:

"The Amusement industry is again called upon to support the Community Fund of Chicago. Our quota for this year is $20,000, as set up by the executive committee. However, I am convinced that our industry, on the basis of last year's fine showing, will far exceed this quota."

Grand National Films, which recently acquired office space in the Warner theatre building, has received notice to vacate and will seek offices elsewhere. The reason for the sudden change in plans was not given by local officials for the exchange, who said the orders to move came from their New York office. Earl Silverman is Chicago branch manager. Temporary quarters may be used in the Universal building.

The Esquire is the name of a new theatre which the Harry Balaban circuit is building at 56 East Oak street on Chicago's Gold Coast. The new theatre, which was designed by Pereira and Pereira, will have 1,600 seats and will be of modern design. Construction is to start in 60 days and the house will be opened in the spring.

Horace Free is the new assistant to Walter Brown, manager of the Chicago office of Ross Federal Service. Mr. Free was formerly in the New York office.

CAPA will hold its second annual dance at the Sherman Hotel Grand Ballroom on Thanksgiving Eve, November 25th. Ina Ray Hutton and her Melodears will provide the music.

The Vogue and Forsythe theatres in East Chicago, Indiana, have been taken over by the Indiana-Illinois theatre circuit under the direction of Jack Rose and Alex Manta. This makes 24 theatres in this circuit.

The Better Films Council of Chicagoland will have a busy week, according to Mrs. Richard McClure, president. The group will have their regular meeting on Wednesday and on Thursday the Regional Institute will be held at the Sherman hotel.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1936, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1936-37 season.

J. C. JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Grand Island, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

Yesterday we attended the funeral of John Huffman of Plainview, Nebraska. Mr. Huffman had been the operator of the Plainview theatre for a number of years and by his courteous treatment and honest dealings with the community had gained the respect of all who knew him.

His funeral was attended by a large number of friends, some coming many miles. Former Governor Bryan of Lincoln was among them.

The film industry of Omaha was represented by E. B. Rostermund and Elmer Hunkee, both of Omaha. The Variety Club of Omaha sent a beautiful floral piece, as did the exchange managers.

Some time ago J. V. Frank of Harvard, Nebraska, sent us a check to have his subscription renewed to the HERALD. In his letter he gave us a panning, as did that boy up in Minnesota, for not calling on him, so we drove down there to prove to him that our neglect was not intentional. We met Mr. Frank for but a few moments, as he was called to the country on business, but he called Mrs. Frank and told her to look out for us, that we'd be up to see her. We had a very delightful visit.

We presume that a lot of you have listened to KMMJ of Clay Center, Nebraska, and, like ourself, were under the impression that Clay Center was a town of considerable size, but the board as you enter the town gives the population as 933 Clay Center folks. We went down there to meet T. C. Shipley, who operates the KMMJ radio theatre. We got there a few minutes after Mr. and Mrs. Shipley had gone for a drive and we failed to meet him. Doggone it all, that's what a man gets for having automobiles. We went out to the KMMJ radio station to see Mr. Shipley (who, by the way, is the radio operator) and we found not only the radio station but a mercantile establishment that would do credit to a town five times the size of Clay Center. You should go there some time and see it.

One straw vote poll gives one candidate a majority. Another poll gives another candidate a majority, and another poll indicates that they will both get skinned. This leaves us hanging on a limb by the seat of our pants, and the duck season don't open yet for some little time. Anyhow, we are going to vote as we darn please regardless of any other country on earth.

Harry Schiller of the Grand theatre here in Grand Island is going to enlarge his theatre, which will have a capacity of 750, and, from the plans he showed us, we judge that Grand Island is going to have a theatre she can well be proud of. Mrs. Schiller drove us around in her limousine to call on the other boys. We met Mr. Allen of the Island theatre and then went to call on Billy Youngclaus of the Empress theatre, but Billy had evidently heard we were in town and he had left for parts unknown. There is this about Harry Schiller: you will always find him right in the front seat of the band wagon with the big bass drum. When Harry does anything he always does it right.

Next week Sherm Fitch is coming over to take us up to the Black Hills to see Leo Peterson of Rapid City and some more of the boys up there, then we are going to call on the other boys of the state, and after election, if our health will permit, we are going down to see the boys in Oklahoma, but we are not going to look for any of them in the Stillwater penitentiary, for there won't be any of them there.

There is this about those Oklahoma exhibitors: you will never find one of them in the penitentiary, for they are a pretty decent bunch of guys, but maybe that is largely because pretty nearly all of them are readers of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. Then we hope to go down and call on those "Longhorns" of Texas and visit "Shine" Mason of McAllen and Bob Smith of Mission and the grape fruit and orange groves of the Rio Grande valley. Oh, boy!

We drove through St. Paul at about 9:30, but it was too early for Mrs. Thompson to have gotten Tommy out of bed, so we didn't stop to call on him, but we drove on up to Greely to see A. L. Hepp of the Idylhour theatre and it was there we learned of the death of John Huffman of Plainview. Mrs. Hepp is a sister of Mrs. Huffman, and Mr. Hepp told us they were going to the funeral and would stop at our home and take us with them, which they did.

At Spalding we called on Henry Carlin, who operates the Carlin theatre. Mr. Carlin has been a member of the Herald family for a long time and it is his belief that the Herald points the road to success for all who read it. The Carlin theatre has been remodeled and made into a very beautiful theatre, as has the Idylhour at Greenly. These two towns seem to have looked the depression right in the eye and told it to go jump in the lake. People like Mr. Hepp and Mr. Carlin are bound to succeed no matter who is elected.

Speaking of the depression. We sometimes feel blue and think that everything is going to the dogs, but we feel better when we look up at a little anonymous poem we have framed and hanging over our desk, and which reads like this:

CHEER UP

Sure this world is full of trouble
I aint said it aint,
Lord! I've had enough and double
Reasons for complaint.
Rains and storms have come to fret me,
Skies are often gray;
Thorns and brambles have beset me,
On the road—but say,
Aint it fine today?
CHEER UP.

And so we leave this parting word with you, CHEER UP.

Bert Lahr in "Whose Baby Are You?"

Grand Laffs

A side-splitting comedy with Bert Lahr trying to do a kind deed for a pal. His friend who runs a stationery and candy store has a wife in the hospital with a baby on the way. The trick is to keep the information from the loan company which is about to loan him $500, but he can't get it if they hear about the new baby and the added overhead. So Lahr gets himself all involved in the eyes of his girl and her dad as the prospective father, and has a deuce of a time trying to square himself. Good for big laffs in any theater where folks want to let themselves go. Produced by Al Christie. Story by David Freedman. In the cast are George Haggerty, Gertrude Mudge, Sally Starr, Earl Gilbert, Eddie Lambert.

Buster Keaton in "The Chemist"

Swell Gags

A very funnily gagged reel, with Buster Keaton seen as the bright pupil in the chemistry class at college. Buster is in the laboratory, where he has worked out a series of marvelous inventions, which he proceeds to demonstrate to the professor. One is a magic candy that makes the gal who eats it fall all over the gent who presents the morsel. Another invention makes animals grow three times their original size. But the prize discovery of Buster is a noiseless powder for firecrackers for the Fourth. Three tough yeggs read about it in the paper, and kidnap Buster and the powder to blow open a safe. After some hair-raising experiences with the bandits, Buster finally turns the tables and captures them in a very novel and laughable manner. In the cast are Marlyn Stuart, Don McBride, Earl Gilbert, Herman Lieb. Produced by Al Christie, Story by David Freedman. Photographed by George Webber.

"Kiko Foils the Fox" (Terry-Toon Cartoon)

Lively

The trained kangaroo, Kiko, proves himself a pal of the little folks in the woods, especially the family of three young birds when they get into trouble with the crafty fox, and their parents are unable to protect them. One of them falls right in the path of the foxy Reynard, and Kiko comes to the rescue. Before he does his great life-saving act, he stages a novelty bombardment of the rascally fox with the help of the feathered folk of the woods, using the fruit of the trees as the ammunition. The youngsters will go for Kiko, for he has a way about him that will make the kids cheer. Authored by Paul Terry, Mannie Davis and George Gordon. Scored by Philip A. Scheib.

"Symphony In Snow" (Treasure Chest)

Thriller

One of the most impressive snow pictures ever filmed. Shows the grandeur of the Swiss Alps, with three daring mountain climbers risking their lives in a hazardous climb, part of the journey there and back negotiated on skiis. The photographs show many close-ups of the climbers hanging precariously over the side of steep chasms that drop sheer for thousands of feet. Here is an outdoor adventure thriller that will hold any audience breathless. Story and narration by A. L. Alexander.

"Krazi-Inventions" (Treasure Chest)

Unusual

A funny novelty, which burlesques certain nut inventions that have actually been patented in Washington. One shows a mechanical device placed inside a gent's derby which automatically tips his hat for him. In the demonstration the invention goes blooey, with disastrous results to the inventor. Another invention grows hair on bald heads, but when the barber inventor tries to put eyebrows on a girl who had her eyebrows singed off, the machine goes haywire and puts hair all over her face. The reel is well handled for laughs, and the narration by Senator Ford is very funny and full of laughs. In the cast are Eddie Hall, Frank Jaquet, Earl Gilbert, Aileen Cook, Rose Kessner, Jimmie Fox. The authors of the reel are Juliet Lowell and Mort Lewis.

The Cabin Kids in "Pink Lemonade" (Song and Comedy Hit)

Pop Kid Stuff

The pop pickaninnies, the Cabin Kids, appear in a circus skit where they crash the gate of the big top by crawling under the canvas. Caught by the cops, the clowns intercede for them, and Toto the Clown puts on a private act for them on condition that they reciprocate by singing one of their darky harmonies. In this way a neat show is put on with the clowns and the kids doing their specialties. The clown stuff will go great with the kids. Story by Art Jarrett. Produced by Al Christie.
